PREFACE.

This Grammar is compiled from the "New English Grammar" of Roswell C. Smith, whose elementary school books have become so deservedly popular. The style of instruction herein taught, is called the "Productive System," and is eminently adapted to beginners and children of tender years. It is published by order of his Excellency, the Governor of Louisiana.

Shreveport, La., 1865.
ENGLISH GRAMMAR.

    Q. What nouns, then, are said to be of the feminine gender?
21. The names of females.
    Q. What gender is woman, and why?
22. Woman is of the feminine gender, because it is the name of a female.
    Q. Of what gender is aunt, and why? daughter? why?
    Q. What does the word neuter mean?
23. It means neither.
Q. Chair is the name neither of a male nor a female: what gender, then, may it properly be called?

Q. What nouns, then, may be said to be of the neuter gender?

25. The names of objects that are neither males nor females.

Q. Of what gender is table, and why?

26. Neuter gender, because it is the name neither of a male nor female.

Q. Of what gender is bed, and why? chair, why?

Q. Parent, you know, is the name either of father or mother, that is, it is a name common to both: of what gender, then, shall we call such nouns parent, bird, &c.?

27. Common gender.

Q. What nouns, then, may be said to be of the common gender?

28. The names of such animals as may be either males or females.

Q. Of what gender is sheep, and why?

29. Sheep is of the common gender, because it is the name either of a male or female.

Q. Of what gender is robin, and why?

Q. How many genders do nouns appear to have, and what are they?

30. Four—the masculine, the feminine, the neuter, and the common.

Q. Will you name a noun of the masculine gender? one of the feminine? one of the neuter? one of the common?

Q. Will you name the gender and number of each noun in the following sentences, as I read them to you?

"James and William."
"Slate and pencil."
"John and the girls."
"Women and birds."

IV PROPER AND COMMON NOUNS.

Q. What is the meaning of the word common; as, "A common complaint?"

31. Common means general.

Q. Although there are many male children in the world; each one may be called by the general name of boy: what kind of a noun, then, would you call boy?

32. A common noun.

Q. When, then, is a noun called common?

33. When it is a general name.

Q. What does the word proper mean?

34. It means fit or particular.

Q. John, you know, is the particular name of a boy: what kind of a noun, then, may it be called?
35. A proper noun.
Q. When, then, may a noun be called proper?
36. When it is a particular name.
Q. What kind of a noun is Susan, and why?
37. Susan is a proper noun, because it is a particular name.
Q. What kind of a noun is John, and why?
Q. What kind of a noun is river, and why?
38. River is a common noun, because it is a general name.
Q. How many kinds of nouns do there appear to be, and what are they?
Q. Will you now tell me which words are the nouns in the following sentences; which are proper, and which are common; also their gender and number?
“Thomas and John.” “King and queen.”
“Susan and Mary.” “House and barn.”

V PERSON.
Q. When a person, in speaking, says, “I, John, will do it,” what person do grammarians call John?
39. The first person.
Q. When, then, is a noun of the first person?
40. When it is the name of the person speaking.
Q. When I say, “James, mind your studies,” what do grammarians call James?
The second person, being the person spoken to.
When, then, is a noun of the second person?
42. When it is the name of the person spoken to, or addressed.
Q. “William, James has come.” What person is William, and why?
43. Of the second person, because William is spoken to.
Q. When I say, “William, James has come,” I am speaking to William about James: of what person, then, is James, and why?
44. Of the third person, because James was spoken of; that is, I was talking about James.
Q. When, then, is a noun of the third person?
45. When it is spoken of.
Q. “Thomas, Rufus is in the garden.” What person is Thomas? why? Rufus? why?
Q. How many persons do nouns appear to have, and what are they?
46. Three persons—the first, second, and third.
Q. Will you inform me which of the following nouns are proper, which common; also their gender, number, and person?
VI. CASE.

Q. We say of an animal, for instance a horse, when he is fat, that "He is in a good case;" and, when he is lean, that "He is in a bad case;" what, therefore, does the word case mean?

47. Case means condition, state, &c.

Q. When I say "Charles strikes William," "William strikes Charles," you may perceive that the state or condition of Charles in the former example is quite different from his state or condition in the latter: in the one, Charles strikes; in the other, he is struck; what, then, is meant by the different cases of nouns.

48. The different condition or position they have in relation to other words in the same sentence.

Q. What does the word nominative mean?

49. Nominative means naming.

Q. When I say, "John strikes," he evidently does something: what, then, may John be called?

50. An actor or doer.

Q. Well, then, as the actor or doer is considered the naming or leading noun, in what case is John, when I say, "John strikes?"

51. In the nominative case.

Q. What, then, is the nominative case of nouns?

52. The nominative case is the agent or doer.

Q. When I say, "The dog runs," in what case is dog, and why?

53. Dog is in the nominative case, because it is the agent, actor, or doer.

Q. "The cat catches mice." In what case is cat, and why?

Q. When I say, "Thomas is pursuing the thief," what is the object here which Thomas is pursuing?

54. Thief.

Q. What does the word objective mean?

55. It means belonging to the object.

Q. In what case, then, may thief be reckoned, in the phrase, "Thomas pursues the thief?"

56. In the objective case.

Q. What, then, does the objective case denote?

57. The objective case denotes the object.

Q. When I say, "William whips John," in what case is John, and why?

58. In the objective case, because John is the object.

Q. What does the word possessive imply?

59. Possession, ownership, property, &c.
Q. When I say, "It is John's slate," I mean to say that John owns the slate: in what case, then, shall we reckon John's?

63. In the possessive case.

Q. What, then, does the possessive case of nouns denote?

64. The possessive case denotes possession, property, &c.

Q. When I say, "Peter's knife," who owns or possesses the knife?

Q. In what case, then, is Peter's, and why?

62. In the possessive case, because Peter possesses the knife.

Q. In the example "John's slate," you perceive that John's ends in s, with a comma before it: what is the comma, and what is the s, called in grammar?

63. The comma is called an apostrophe, and the s, an apostrophic s.

Q. You also perceive that John's is singular: how, then, do nouns in the singular number usually form their possessive case?

64. By taking after them an apostrophe with the letter s following it.

Q. "On eagles' wings." Here eagles' is plural, and in the possessive case: how, then, do nouns in the plural usually form their possessive case?

65. Simply by taking the apostrophe without the addition of s.

Q. But if the plural does not end in s, as, "men's concerns," how is the possessive case formed?

66. As the same case in the singular number is formed.

Q. From the foregoing remarks, how many cases do nouns appear to have, and what are they?

67. Three—the nominative, possessive, and objective.

Q. Decline sometimes means to vary the ending of a word: what, then, do I mean when I ask you to decline a noun?

68. To tell its different cases or endings.

Q. Will you decline John?

Possessive case, John's.

Objective case, John.

Q. Will you decline boy, in both numbers?

Singular.

Poss Boy's.

Obj. Boy.

Plural.

Nom. Boys.

Poss. Boys'.

Obj. Boys.

Q. When I say, "William's coat," you perceive that the noun coat follows William's: by what is William's said to be governed, and why?

71. By coat, because it follows William's.

Q. What, then, may be considered a rule for governing the possessive case?
ENGLISH GRAMMAR.

RULE I.

The possessive case is governed by the following noun.

Q. "William's hat." Is William's a proper or common noun? Why? (36.)*

Q. When we mention the several properties of the different words in sentences, in the same manner as we have those of William's, above, what is the exercise called?

72. Parsing.

EXERCISES IN PARSING.

"John's knife."

73. John's is a noun, because it is a name—proper, because it is a particular name—masculine gender; it is the name of a male—third person; it is spoken of—singular number; it means but one—possessive case; it implies possession—and is governed by the noun knife, according to

Rule I. The possessive case is governed by the following noun.

Knife is a noun; it is a name—common; it is a general name—neuter gender; it is neither male nor female—third person; it is spoken of—singular number; it means but one.

Let the learner parse the foregoing, till the mode of parsing the noun is so familiar to him, that he can do it readily, without looking in the book. He may then take the following exercises, which are to be parsed in a similar manner.

"Peter's cap." "Stephen's coat." "Brother's knife."

"John's slate." "Father's house." "Boys' hats."

VII. OF ARTICLES.

Q. When I say, "Give me a book," I evidently mean no particular book, but when I say, "Give me the book," what do I mean?

74. Some particular book.

Q. Which are the words that make this difference in meaning?

75. A and the.

Q. What are these little words called?

76. Articles.

Q. What, then, are articles?
ENGLISH GRAMMAR.

77. Articles are words placed before nouns to limit their meaning.

78. Definite means particular.

Q. What is the meaning of the word definite?

79. Definite article.

Q. What, then, is a definite article?

80. It points out what particular thing or things are meant.

Q. The word in, when placed before words, frequently signifies not: what, then, will indefinite mean?

81. Not definite.

Q. When I say, "Give me a knife," no particular knife is meant: what kind of an article, then, may a be called?

82. Indefinite article.

Q. Why is it so called?

83. Because it is not used before the name of any particular person or thing.

Q. We say, "an apple," "an inkstand," &c. in preference to "a apple," "a inkstand," &c.: why is this?

84. Because it is easier to speak, and also more pleasant to the ear.

Q. What kind of letters do apple and inkstand begin with?

85. Vowels.

Q. In what cases do we use an instead of a?

86. Before words beginning with the vowels a, e, i, o, u.

Q. In speaking, we say, "a man," not "an man": when, then, do we use a?

87. Before words beginning with consonants.

Q. Which letters are consonants?

88. All the letters of the alphabet, except the vowels, which are a, e, i, o, u; and also w and y, except at the beginning of words, when they are consonants.

Q. How, then, do a and an differ?

89. Only in their use; a being used before consonants, and an before vowels: both are called by the same name.

Q. How many articles do there appear to be, and what are they?

90. Two—a or an, and the.

Q. It is customary to say, "a boy," not "a boys;" also, "an inkstand," not "an inkstands;" of what number, then, must the noun be, before which the indefinite article is placed?

91. The singular number.

Q. What, then, is the rule for the indefinite article
Rule II.

The indefinite article a or an belongs to nouns of the singular number.

Q. We can say, "the boy," and "the boys," using a noun either of the singular or plural number after the; what then, is the rule for the definite article?

Rule III.

The definite article the belongs to nouns in the singular or plural number.

Exercises in Parsing.

"The boy."

92. The is an article, a word placed before nouns to limit their meaning—definite; it means a particular boy—and belongs to boy, according to Rule III. The definite article the belongs to nouns of the singular or plural number.

Boy is a noun; it is a name—common; it is a general name—masculine gender; it is the name of a male—third person; it is spoken of—and singular number; it means but one.

VIII. Of Adjectives.

Q. When I say, "John is an obedient, industrious, and good boy," I use certain words to describe boy: which are they?

93. Industrious, obedient, and good.

Q. When I say, "a good man," to what word is the describing word good joined or added?

94. To the noun man.

Q. What does the word adjective mean?

95. Joined or added to.

Q. What, then, shall we call such describing words as good, obedient, industrious, &c.?

96. Adjectives.

Q. What, then, are adjectives?

97 Adjectives are words joined to nouns to describe or qualify them.

Q. "A wise man." Which word is the adjective here, and why?
12 ENGLISH GRAMMAR.

Q. “Rufus is a good boy, but James is a better one.” How are Rufus and James spoken of here?

98. In comparison with each other.

Q. The adjectives in the last example are good and better: can you tell me which of these words denotes a higher degree of excellence than the other?

99. The word better.

Q. What degree of comparison, then, shall we call better?

100. Comparative degree.

Q. What, then, does the comparative degree imply?

101. A comparison between two.

Q. “William is tall, Thomas is taller, but Rufus is the tallest boy in school.” What does the word tallest mean?

102. Exceeding all in height.

Q. What does the word superlative mean?

103. Exceeding all; the highest or lowest degree.

Q. What degree of comparison, then, shall we call tallest?

104. Superlative degree.

Q. What, then, does the superlative degree do?

105. It increases or lessens the positive to the highest or lowest degree.

Q. When I say, “James is a good boy,” I make no comparison between him and any other; but simply assert in a positive manner, that James is a good boy. What kind of a sentence, then, would you call this?

106. A positive sentence.

Q. Of what degree of comparison, then, shall we call good?

107. The positive degree.

Q. What, then, does the positive degree do?

108. It merely describes, without any comparison.

Q. Will you compare great?

109. “Positive, great; Comparative, greater; Superlative, greatest.”

Q. Will you compare wise in the same manner?

Q. Wise and great are words of one syllable: how, then, are the comparative and superlative degrees of words of this sort formed?

110. By adding r or er, st or est, to the positive.

Q. Will you in this manner compare small? high? mean?

Q. Will you compare beautiful?

111. “Pos. beautiful; Comp. more beautiful; Sup. most beautiful.”

Q. How many syllables compose the word beautiful?

112. Three.

Q. How, then, are words of three, or more syllables than one, usually compared?

113. By placing more and most before the positive.
ENGLISH GRAMMAR

Q. Will you in this manner compare industrious? ingenious? dutiful?
Q. Will you compare wise, by using the words less and least?

114. “Pos. wise; Comp. less wise; Sup. least wise.”

Q. Will you in like manner compare benevolent? distinguished? dilatory?
Q. Good, you perceive, is not compared regularly, like great, beautiful, &c.; and since there are many words of this description, I will give you a list of the principal ones, together with others, regularly compared: will you repeat the comparative and superlative degrees, as I name the positive?

Q. From the foregoing, how many degrees of comparison do there appear to be, and what are they?

116. Three---the positive, comparative, and superlative.
Q. Adjectives, you recollect, describe nouns: to what, then, do they naturally belong?

RULE IV.
Adjectives belong to the nouns which they describe.

EXERCISES IN PARSEING.

“A wiser child.

117. A is an article, a word placed before nouns to limit their meaning— indefinite; it means no particular child — and belongs to child, agreeably to RULE II. The indefinite article a or an belongs to nouns of the singular number.

Wiser is an adjective, a word joined with a noun to describe it—“Pos. wise; Comp. wiser; Sup. wisest”—made in the comparative degree — and belongs to child by RULE IV Adjectives belong to the nouns which they describe.

Child is a noun; it is a name— common; it is a general name— common gender; it may be either male or female— third person; it is spoken of— and singular number; it means but one.

IX. OF PRONOUNS.

Q. When I say, "John goes to school, John learns fast, and John will excel," how can I speak so as to avoid repeating John so often?

118. By using the word he in its place: thus, "John goes to school, he learns fast, and he will excel."

Q. What little word, then, may stand for John?

119. He.

Q. What does the word pronoun mean?

120. Standing for, or instead of, a noun.

Q. What, then, shall we call the word he, above?

121. A pronoun.

Q. What, then, is a pronoun?

122. A pronoun is a word used for a noun, to avoid a repetition of the same word.

Q. When James says, "I will study," you perceive that I stands for the person speaking: what person, then, is it?

123. The second person.

Q. When I say, "James, you must study," the word you evidently is applied to James, who is spoken to: what person, then ought you to be?

124. The third person; because it stands in the place of a noun which is spoken of.

Q. If I invariably stands for the first person, you for the second, and he for the third, how can we tell the different persons of pronouns?

125. By the pronouns themselves.

Q. What have these pronouns been called from this circumstance?

126. Personal pronouns.

I will now give you a list of all the personal pronouns, which you must first examine carefully, and then answer such questions on them as may be asked you.

1. To be omitted in parsing. 2. Johnson's is governed by dictionary, by rule I.

Q. Will you decline I in both numbers? thou or you? he? she? it?
Q. In what gender, person, number, and case is he? she? it? his? hers? her? him?

How many numbers do pronouns appear to have, and what are they?

128. Two—the singular and plural.
Q. How many cases, and what are they.

129. Three—the nominative, the possessive, and the objective.
Q. How many persons?

130. Three—the first, second, and third.
Q. How many genders?

131. Three—the masculine, feminine, and neuter.
Q. How many pronouns are there in all, of the first person?
Q. How many of the second, and how many of the third?
Q. The pronouns of the nominative case, singular, are called leading pronouns: how many of these are there?

133. Five—I, thou or you, he, she, it.
Q. Why are not the possessive and objective cases of the singular and plural numbers, also the nominative plural, reckoned in the number of the leading pronouns?

134. Because they are all considered as variations of the nominative singular.
ENGLISH GRAMMAR.

Q. To which of the pronouns is it customary to apply gender?

135. To the third person singular, he, she, it.

Q. Why are not the first and second persons each made always to represent a different gender?

136. The first and second persons being always present, their genders are supposed to be known.

Q. If, as we have seen, pronouns stand for nouns, what gender, number, and person ought they to have?

137. The same as the nouns for which they stand.

Q. What, then, may be considered a rule for the agreement of the pronouns?

RULE V.

Pronouns must agree with the nouns for which they stand in gender, number, and person.

QUESTIONS ON PARSING.

Q. How many different sorts of words have we now found, and what are they?

138. Four—the NOUN, the ARTICLE, the ADJECTIVE and the PRONOUN.

Q. The word part you know, means division; and speech, the power of using words, or language: what, therefore, shall we call these grand divisions of words?

139. Parts of Speech.

Q. When, then, I ask you what part of speech boy is, for instance, what do you understand me to mean?

140. The same as to ask me whether boy is a noun or not.

Q. What part of speech, then, is William, and why? (36.)

1. "He went to school."
2. "She went to her task."
3. "William went to his play."
4. "John returned from his school."
5. "I request you to mind your studies."
6. "The book was mine, but now it is yours."

Q. Will you name the pronouns in the six foregoing examples?

Q. How many are there in all?

Q. What is the gender, number, and person of those in the first? second? third? fourth? fifth? sixth?

Q. Will you name the nouns in the first sentence? in the second? third? fourth? fifth? sixth?

X. OF THE VERB.

Q. When I say, "James strikes William," which word tells what James does?

141. Strikes.

Q. The word verb means word; and as the words in all sentences, which tell what the nouns do, are the principal ones, what shall such words be called?
ENGLISH GRAMMAR. 17

142. VERBS.
Q. If, in the phrase, "William strikes James," we leave out the word strikes, you perceive at once that the sense is destroyed: what reason, then, can you give, for calling some words in a sentence verbs, and others by a different name?

143. The words which we call verbs are the most important.
Q. "William studies his lesson." Which word is the verb here, and why?
144. Studies, because it tells what William does.
Q. When I say, "John dances," which word is the verb, and why?
Q. When I say, "James strikes John," which word shows that an action is performed?
145. Strikes.
Q. What kind of a verb, then, shall we call strikes?
146. An active verb.
Q. What kind of a verb is walks, in this sentence, "John walks," and why?
147. Walks is an active verb, because it expresses action.
Q. "He beat William." Which word here is the verb? Is William an agent or an object?
148. An object.
Q. When I say, "The child walks," walks, it is true, is an active verb, but it has no noun after it for an object, as beat has, in the phrase above; neither can we supply one; for we cannot say, "The child walks," any thing: what, therefore, is to be inferred from this fact, in regard to the nature of active verbs?
149. That some active verbs will take nouns after them for objects, and others will not.
Q. We will next notice this difference. The term transitive means passing over; and when I say, "William whips Charles," the verb whips shows that the action which William performs, passes over to Charles as the object. What kind of a verb, then, shall we call whips?
150. An active-transitive verb.
Q. What, then, is an active-transitive verb?
151. It is one that either has, or may have, an object after it.
Q. Walks, we found, would not take an object after it; and, as intransitive means not passing over; what shall we call such verbs as walks?
152. Active-intransitive verbs.
Q. What, then, is an active-intransitive verb?
153. An active-intransitive verb is one that expresses action, but will not take an object after it.
Q. When I say, "He eats it," "He beats him," we immediately determine that beats and eats are active-transitive verbs by the objects after them: how, then, may transitive and intransitive verbs be distinguished?
154. When we can place him or it after any active verb; and make sense, it is transitive: otherwise, it is intransitive.
Q. "James remains at home — sleeps at home — is at home." Which words are the verbs here?

155. Remains, sleeps, and is.

Q. These verbs do not imply action, like strikes, beats, &c.: what do they imply?

156. Existence, rest, or being, in a certain state.

Q. These verbs, and others of similar character, have been called neuter (signifying neither) by grammarians, because they are neither active nor passive. On a future occasion, I will make you fully acquainted with a passive verb. It is sufficient for our present purpose, that you perceive the reason of the name of the neuter verb. What is a neuter verb?

157. A neuter verb is one that simply implies being or existence in a certain state.

Q. Will you inform me now, in general terms, what is a correct definition of a verb?

158. A verb is a word which signifies action or being.

Q. When I say, "I strike," in what number and person is strike, and why?

159. Strike, is of the first person singular, because its agent, I, is of this person and number.

Q. Hence you may perceive, that verbs, in themselves considered, do not have person and number: why, then, are they said to have these properties at all?

160. On account of the connection which they have with their agents or nominatives.

Q. We say, "I write," and "He writes;" hence you perceive that the ending of the verb varies, as its agent or nominative varies: what, then, will be the rule for the nominative case?

RULE VI.

The nominative case governs the verb in number and person.

Q. If the nominative case governs the verb in number and person, in what respect must the verb agree with its nominative case?

RULE VII.

A verb must agree with its nominative case in number and person.

Q. When I say, "James beats him," the pronoun him is the object of the action denoted by beats, and is, therefore, in the objective case: what, then, will be a good rule for the objective case after active verbs?

RULE VIII.

Active-transitive verbs govern the objective case.

Q. I will now give you the different endings of the verb love, in its different numbers and persons. Will you repeat them?

2. Pers. You are.
3. Pers. He is.

Plural.

1. Pers. We are.
2. Pers. You are.
3. Pers. They are.

Q. Will you repeat, in the same manner, the variations of

"I study my lesson."

EXERCISES IN PARSING.

163. I is a PRONOUN, a word used instead of a noun—PERSONAL; it always denotes the same person, (the first)—FIRST PERSON; it denotes the speaker—SINGULAR NUMBER; it means but one—"Nom. I"—made in the NOMINATIVE CASE to study, according to

Rule VI. The nominative case governs the verb in number and person.

Study is a VERB; it expresses action—TRANSITIVE; it admits an object after it—"1 Pers. I study"—made in the FIRST PERSON—SINGULAR NUMBER, because its nominative I is, with which it agrees, agreeably to

Rule VII. A verb must agree with its nominative case in number and person.

My is a PRONOUN, a word used for a noun—PERSONAL; it always represents the same person—FIRST PERSON; it represents the person speaking—"Nom. I; Poss. my, or mine"—made in the POSSESSIVE CASE—and governed by the noun lesson according to

Rule I. The possessive case is governed by the following noun.

Lesson is a NOUN—COMMON; it is a general name—NEUTER GENDER; it is neither male nor female—THIRD PERSON; it is spoken of—SINGULAR NUMBER; it means but one—and in the OBJECTIVE CASE; it is the object of the verb study, and governed by it, according to Rule VIII. Active-transitive verbs govern the objective case.

EXERCISES IN PARSING CONTINUED.

Transitive Verbs.

"I lament my fate."
"You regard your friends."
"We desire your improvement."
"We love our children."
"You make a knife."
"I love him."
"I lament her."
"You assist them."
"He struck her."

"He found a dollar."
"She attends the school."
"It retards the work."
"They shun vice."
"Ye derive comfort."
"She forsook you."
"They annoy me."
"We took it."
"She relieved us."
"John reads his book."

His is a pronoun, a word used instead of a noun—personal; it uniformly stands for the same person—masculine gender, third person, singular number, because the noun John is, with which it agrees, agreeably to Rule V. Pronouns must agree with the nouns for which they stand, in gender, number, and person.

"Nom. he; Poss. his"—made in the possessive case—and governed by the noun book, according to Rule I. The possessive case is governed by the following noun.

The remaining words, book, reads, and John, are parsed as before.

3. "Mary studies her lesson." "Virtue rewards its followers.""The girls love their books." "A disobedient son grieves his parents.""Good children mind their parents." "The intemperate man loves his dram."

In parsing personal pronouns, we do not apply Rule V. unless the nouns for which they stand are expressed.

Intransitive Verbs.

Neuter Verbs.

"William is (1.) discreet." (2.) "John’s wife is fortunate." "James is happy." "John’s brother is unhappy." "He was studious." "The eagle’s flight was sudden." "He became intemperate." "The scholar’s duty is plain."

XI. INDICATIVE MOOD—TENSE.

Q. When James says, "I will learn," he evidently means, by his manner of speaking, to express his intention to learn; but when he says, "I can learn," what does he mean?

165. That he has the ability to learn.

Q. What does the word mood mean?

166. Mood means manner.

Q. What, then, does the mood of verbs denote?

167. The different manner of representing actions.

(1.) Is is a verb; it implies being—neuter; it is neither active nor passive, but expresses being, merely—"1 pers. I am; 2 pers. You are; 3 pers. He or William is"—made in the third person, singular, because William, its nominative, is, and agrees with William, according to Rule VIII. A verb must agree with its nominative case in number and person.

(2.) Discreet belongs to William, by Rule IV
ENGLISH GRAMMAR.

Q. What does the word indicative mean?

168. Declaring or showing.

Q. When I say, "William has studied," I declare some fact: in what mood, then, shall we class has studied?

169. In the indicative mood.

Q. When I say, "Has William studied?" the only difference between this phrase and the foregoing consists in a change in the order of the words, so as to show that a question is asked: in what mood, then, shall we call has William studied?

170. Indicative mood.

Q. What, then, is the indicative mood used for?

171. The indicative mood is used for asserting, indicating or declaring a thing, or asking a question.

Q. In what mood is, "They do sing?" Why? (171.)

Q. What does the word tense mean?

172. Tense means time.

Q. What does present mean?

173. Present means now.

Q. When I say, "The bird sings," I mean that the bird sings now: in what tense, then, is sings?

174. In the present tense.

Q. What, then, is the present tense used for?

175. The present tense is used to express what is now taking place.

Q. In what tense is, "The dog runs?" Why? (175.)

Q. "James wrote." "James has written." These phrases denote what is past: in what tense are they?

176. In the past tense.

Q. What does the word future mean; as, "At some future time?"

177. Future means yet to come.

Q. In what tense are the phrases, "I will come," "I shall have come?"

178. In the future tense.

Q. How many grand divisions of time do there appear to be, and what are they?

179. Three—the present, past, and future.

Q. When I say, "John wrote," is the action here spoken of past and finished?

180. It is.

Q. What does imperfect mean?

181. Unfinished, or incomplete.

Q. "John was writing when I saw him." This denotes an action unfinished in past time, and corresponds with what is usually denominated in Latin the imperfect tense: hence the origin of the name selected by English grammarians to denote action past and finished; a term not at all significant of an action finished in past time: what, then, does the imperfect tense express?

182. The imperfect tense expresses what took place in past time, however distant.
Q. "Peter wrote yesterday, and has written to-day." Here both acts of writing are past and finished; but which has more immediate reference to the present time?

183. Has written.

Q. To distinguish this tense from the imperfect, grammarians have called it the perfect tense: what, then, will the perfect tense express?

184. The perfect tense expresses what has taken place, and also conveys an allusion to the present time.

Q. "James had read before I wrote." Here both acts are past and finished; which took place first?

185. The act of reading.

Q. What does the word pluperfect mean?

186. More than the perfect.

Q. What tense, then, shall we call, "James had read?"

187. The pluperfect tense.

Q. What, then, does the pluperfect tense express?

188. The pluperfect tense expresses what had taken place at or before some past time mentioned.

Q. "John will come." This, you know, was called the future tense: can you tell me why?

189. Because it implies time to come.

Q. What, then, does the future tense express?

190. The future tense expresses what will take place hereafter.

Q. "I shall have learned my lesson by noon." Here, an action is to take place at a future time specified or mentioned; and since we already have one future tense, we will call that the first, and this the second future tense: what, then, will the second future tense express?

191. The second future expresses what will have taken place at or before some future time mentioned.

Q. What does synopsis mean?

192. A concise and general view.

Q. I will now present you with a synopsis of all the different tenses, illustrated by the verb learn: will you repeat it?

 For the benefit of those who choose to retain the second person singular, as given in former treatises, the following synopsis is inserted.

SYNOPSIS.

195. 2d Pers. Sing. Pres. Thou learnest or dost learn.
2d Pers. Sing. Imp. Thou learnedst, or didst learn.
2d Pers. Sing. 1st Fut. Thou shalt or wilt learn.
2d Pers. Sing. 2d Fut. Thou wilt have learned.

Q. In what mood is, "I learn?" Why? (171.) In what tense? Why? (175.)
In what mood and tense is, "He learns?" "We learn?" "I did learn?" "I have learned?" "I had learned?" "I shall or will learn?" "I shall have learned?"

Q. In what person and number is, "I learn?" "You learn?" "We learn?" "They had learned?" "He shall learn?" "We had learned?"

Q. What does the word auxiliary mean?

196. Auxiliary means helping.

Q. In the phrase, "I will sing," will, you perceive, is used to help form the future tense of sing: will is, therefore, called an auxiliary verb, and the verb sing is reckoned the principal verb: what, then, are auxiliary verbs?

197. Auxiliary verbs are those by the help of which are formed the different tenses, moods, &c., of the principal verbs.

Q. The auxiliary verbs are not unfrequently denominated the signs of the tenses, because each tense has, in general, an auxiliary peculiar to itself: what, then, is the sign of the second future?

198. Shall or will have.

Q. What is the sign of the first future?

199. Shall or will.

Q. What is the sign of the pluperfect?

200. Had.

Q. What is the sign of the perfect?

201. Have.

Q. What is the sign of the imperfect?

202. Did.

Q. We can say, "I did strike yesterday," or, "I struck yesterday?" how, then, can we tell when a verb is in the imperfect tense without the sign did?

203. If we can place yesterday after the verb, and make sense, it is in the imperfect tense.

Q. What is the sign of the present tense?

204. Do, or the first form of the verb.

Q. From the foregoing, how many tenses does the indicative mood appear to have, and what are they?

205. Six—the present, the imperfect, the perfect, the pluperfect, the first and second future tenses.

EXERCISES IN PARSING.

"They have arrived."

206. They is a pronoun, a word used instead of a noun—personal; it always represents the same person—third person; it denotes the person spoken of—plural; it means more than one—"Nom. he; Poss. his; Obj. him; Plural. Nom. they"—made in the nominative case to have arrived, according to

RULE VI. The nominative case governs the verb.
ENGLISH GRAMMAR.

Have arrived is a verb, a word that implies action or being—active; it implies action—intransitive; it does not admit of an object—indicative mood; it simply indicates or declares a thing—perfect tense; it expresses what has just taken place—"1. I have arrived; 2. You have arrived; 3. He has arrived. Plural, 1. We have arrived; 2. You have arrived; 3. They have arrived"—made in the third person plural, because its nominative they is, and agrees with it, according to Rule VII. A verb must agree with its nominative case in number and person.

1. "They had come."
   "We did go."
   "The bird will return."

   "James loves William."
   "Susan beats him."
   "I have beaten them."
   "She had beaten us."
   "You shall assist him."
   "It did disturb me."

   "Do I disturb you?"
   "Did they learn their lessons?"
   "Have they recited?"
   "Does the instructor teach us?"

   "The sun has risen."
   "Dogs will fight."
   "Lions will roar."

2. "Columbus discovered America."
   "Piety promotes our happiness."
   "He will learn his lesson."
   "John did make great progress."
   "They do study their lessons."
   "Boys love sport."

3. "Shall I expect your assistance."
   "Will a virtuous citizen commit such (1.) acts?"
   "Have you found your knife?"

XII. POTENTIAL MOOD.

Q. What does, "He may write," imply?
207. Permission or liberty to write.
Q. What does, "He must write," imply?
208. Necessity of writing.
Q. What does, "He can write," imply?
209. Power or ability to write.
Q. What does, "He should write," imply?
110. Duty or obligation to write.
Q. What does, "He would write," imply?
211. Will or inclination to write.
Q. What does the word potential mean?
212. Able, or powerful.
Q. In what mood, then, do grammarians reckon can learn, may write, and, also, must write, should write, &c.?

213. In the potential mood.

Q. Why are all these different forms of representing actions considered to be in the potential mood, a name, as we have seen, peculiar only to that form of the verb which implies power?

214. To prevent multiplying moods to a great and almost numberless extent.

Q. What, then, does the potential mood imply?

215. The potential mood implies possibility, liberty, power, will, obligation, or necessity.

Q. What are the signs of this mood?

216. May, can, must, might, could, would, and should.

Q. What does the word conjugation mean?

217. Uniting, combining, or joining together.

Q. You recollect that, in varying the verb, we joined the pronouns with it; hence, this exercise is called conjugation: what, then, do you understand by the conjugation of a verb?

218. The conjugation of a verb is the regular combination and arrangement of its several moods, tenses, numbers, and persons.

219. Conjugation of the verb Learn.

Synopsis of the Second Person Singular, with Thou.

220.

Pres. Thou mayst, canst, or must learn.

Imp. Thou mightst, couldst, wouldst, or shouldst learn.

Perf. Thou mayst, canst, or must have learned.

Plup. Thou mightst, couldst, wouldst, or shouldst have learned.

Q. In what mood is, "I may learn?" Why? (215.)

Q. Will you repeat the synopsis with I? thou? he? we? ye? you? they?

Q. In what mood, tense, number, and person, is, "I can learn?" "You may learn?" "You might assist?" "They could have learned?" "He must study?"

Q. In what mood and tense is, "I have learned?" "He shall run?" "William did sing?"

Q. Will you conjugate learn in the present tense, potential mood? Will you conjugate love in the same mood, and imperfect tense? Strike, in the perfect tense? Come, in the pluperfect tense?

Q. How many tenses has the potential mood?

EXERCISES IN PARSING.

"He may return."

221. He is a pronoun, a word used instead of a noun—personal: it invariably represents the same person—masculine gender; it represents a male—third person; it denotes the person spoken of—singular number; it implies but one—and in the nominative case; it denotes the agent—"Nom. he"—nominative case to may return, by

Rule VI. The nominative case governs the verb.

May return is a verb; it implies action or being—active: it implies action—intransitive; it does not admit an object after it—potential mood; it implies possibility, liberty, &c. —present tense; it denotes what may be now—"1. I may or can return; 2. You may or can return; 3. He may or can return"—made in the third person; singular, because its nominative he is, with which it agrees, according to Rule VII. A verb must agree with its nominative case in number and person.

ENGLISH GRAMMAR.

PERFECT TENSE.

Singular. Plural.
1. I may, can, or must have been. 1. We may, can, or must have been.
2. You may, can, or must have been. 2. You may, can, or must have been.
3. He may, can, or must have been. 3. They may, can, or must have been.

PLUPERFECT TENSE.

Singular. Plural.
1. I might, could, would, or should have been. 1. We might, could, would, or should have been.
2. You might, could, would, or should have been. 2. You might, could, would, or should have been.
3. He might, could, would, or should have been. 3. They might, could, would, or should have been.

224. Synopsis of the Second Person Singular, with Thou.

INDICATIVE MOOD. POTENTIAL MOOD.
Pres. Thou art. Pres. Thou mayst, canst, or must be.
Imp. Thou wast. Imp. Thou mightst, couldst, wouldst, or shouldst be.
Pref. Thou hast been. Pref. Thou mayst, canst, or must have been.
Pret. Thou hast been. Perf. Thou mayst, canst, or must have been.
1st Fut. Thou shalt or wilt be. Imp. Thou mightst, couldst, wouldst, or shouldst be.
2d Fut. Thou wilt have been. Pres. Thou mayst, canst, or must have been.

XIV QUESTIONS ON THE FOREGOING CONJUGATION.

Q. Why is am a verb? (158.) What is it sometimes called? (222.) Why is it so called? (222.)
Q. Will you give the synopsis of the verb to be with /through the indicative mood?
Q. In what mood, tense, number, and person, is, "I am?" "Am I?" "You were?" "I have been?" "Have you been?" "He may or can be?" "We should be?" "He may have been?" "They should have been?" "Thou mayst be?"
Q. Will you repeat the synopsis with thou?

EXERCISES IN PARSING.

"The girls were industrious."

225. Were is a verb; it implies action or being—neuter; it is neither active nor passive, simply expressing being—indicative mood; it simply indicates or declares a thing—imperfect tense; it expresses past time—"1. I was; 2. You were; 3. He was. Plur. 1. We were; 2. You were; 3. They were, or girls were"—made in the third person plural, because its nominative girls is, with which it agrees, agreeably to

Rule VII. A verb must agree with its nominative case in number and person.
Industrious is an adjective, a word joined with a noun to describe it—"industrious, more industrious, most industrious"—in the positive degree; it describes, without any comparison—and belongs to the noun girls, according to Rule IV. Adjectives belong to the nouns which they describe. For the and girls, apply Rules III. and VI.

"William is attentive." "Am I young?"
"John is studious." "Was I wrong?"
"We are jealous." "Have we been wicked?"
"Thou art dutiful." "Were they penitent?"
"Mary has been intelligent." "Washington was patriotic."
"The boys will have been dutiful." "Columbus was enterprising."
"Their estate was small." "My wife's mother is sick."

XV. OF THE ADVERB.

Q. When I say, "The bird flies swiftly," I do not mean by swiftly to describe bird: what does swiftly describe?

226. The manner of flying.
Q. To what part of speech is swiftly joined in the phrase, "The bird flies swiftly?

227. To the verb flies.
Q. What does the word adverb signify?

228. Joined to a verb.
Q. What, then, shall we call all such words as swiftly?

229. Adverbs.
Q. "John runs very swiftly." Which word here describes or shows how swiftly John runs?

Q. What is the word very called, and all such words as qualify or describe adverbs?

231. Adverbs.
Q. "Industrious, more industrious, most industrious." What are more and most called here, and why?

232. Adverbs, because they describe or qualify adjectives.
Q. From the foregoing particulars, what appears to be a proper definition of adverbs?

233. Adverbs are words joined to verbs, adjectives, and other adverbs, to qualify or describe them.
Q. "John visits me often, but Thomas oftener." In this example, we see that adverbs may be compared: will you, therefore, compare soon?

234. "Soon, sooner, soonest."
ENGLISH GRAMMAR.

Q. Will you compare wisely?
235. "Wisely, more wisely, most wisely."

Q. How do adverbs ending in ly appear to be compared?
236. By the adverbs more and most.

Q. Will you in this manner compare admirably? foolishly?
237. Many adverbs are compared like adjectives of one syllable, as soon above; but there is a very considerable number, the comparison of which is not regulated by any general rule. The following list embraces adverbs variously compared: will you repeat the comparative and superlative of each, as I name the positive?

238. NOTE.—Adverbs, though very numerous, may nevertheless be reduced to a few classes. You will now read with attention the following list, and I will then ask you some questions respecting each class.

1. Of number: as "Once, twice, thrice," &c.
2. Of order: as, "First, secondly, thirdly, fourthly, fifthly, lastly, finally," &c.
3. Of place: as, "Here, there, where, elsewhere, anywhere, somewhere, nowhere, hence, thence, whithersoever," &c.

4. Of time.
   Of time present: as, "Now, to-day," &c.
   Of time past: as, "Already, before, lately, yesterday, heretofore, hitherto, long since, long ago," &c.
   Of time to come: as, "To-morrow, not yet, hereafter, henceforth, henceforward, by and by, instantly, presently, immediately, straightways," &c.
   Of time indefinite: as, "Oft, often, oftentimes, sometimes, soon, seldom, daily, weekly, monthly, yearly, always, when, then, ever, never, again," &c.
5. Of quantity: as, "Much, little, sufficiently, how much, how great, enough, abundantly," &c.

6. Of manner or quality: as, "Wisely, foolishly, justly, unjustly, quickly, slowly," &c. Adverbs of quality are the most numerous kind; and they are generally formed by adding the termination ly to an adjective or participle, or changing le into ly. as, "Bad, badly; cheerful, cheerfully; able, ably; admirable, admirably."

7. Of doubt: as, "Perhaps, peradventure, possibly, perchance."

11. Of comparison: as, "More, most; better, best, worse, worst, less, least, very, almost, little, alike," &c.

When a preposition suffers no change, but becomes an adverb merely by its application: as, when we say, "He rides about;" "He was near falling;" "But do not offer lay the blame on me."

There are also some adverbs, which are composed of nouns, and the letter a used instead of at, on, &c.: as, "Aside, athirst, afoot, ahead, asleep, aboard, ashore, abed, aground, afloat."

Q. Will you name two adverbs of number? two of order? two of place? two of time present? two of time past? two of time to come? two of time indefinite? two of quantity? two of manner or quality? two of doubt? two of affirmation? two of negation? two of interrogation? two of comparison?

Adjectives describe as well as adverbs: how, then, can you tell one from the other?

239. Adjectives describe nouns, but adverbs describe or qualify verbs, adjectives, and other adverbs.

Q. This fact should be remembered; you shall, therefore have it in the form of a rule: will you repeat it?

RULE IX.

Adverbs qualify verbs, adjectives, and other adverbs.

Q. From bad we form the adverb badly: how, then, may a large class of adverbs be formed?

240. By adding ly to adjectives.

Q. Will you in this manner form an adverb from wise? from great? from sinful?

EXERCISES IN PARSING.

"The bird sings sweetly."

241. Sweetly is an adverb, a word used to qualify a verb, adjective, or other adverb; in this example it qualifies the verb sings, agreeably to

RULE IX. Adverbs qualify verbs, adjectives, and other adverbs.

Ex. Sings, bird and the are parsed as before.

Adverbs qualifying verbs.

"The soldiers marched slowly."
"The girls sing delightfully."
"Henry improves rapidly."

Adverbs qualifying adjectives.

"He was very attentive."
"John is quite busy."
"William is really studious."

Adverbs qualifying verbs and other adverbs.

"You learn grammar very well."
"The boys write too fast."
"He will come much oftener."

Adverbs promiscuously used.

"He has read once."
"I will first remind you."
"I saw him yesterday."
"I have eaten sufficiently."

"They will return soon."
"The boys write admirably."
"Susan dances elegantly."

"James is more studious."
"Walter is most studious."
"Ellen is less happy."

"James writes most elegantly."
"I will assist you most cheerfully."

"John is not happy."
"Whither shall I fly?"
"My brother sends me the parser monthly."
XVI. OF THE PREPOSITION.

Q. To say, "The cider is in the cellar," would make no sense; can you inform me what would make sense?

242. "The cider is in the cellar."

Q. By adding the little word in after cider is, and before cellar, the sentence is rendered complete; what other, then, does it perform?

243. It connects words, and thereby shows the relation between them.

Q. What does the word "preposition" mean?

244. Placed before.

Q. When then, may these words like in be called, as they are placed before other words to connect them with words preceding?

245. Prepositions.

Q. What then are prepositions?

246. Prepositions are words used to connect words, and thereby show the relation between them.

247. List of the principal Prepositions.

Q. Will the meanings of the prepositions beginning with "a" with "of" of "to" fit?

248. a, of, to.

Q. Will you now repeat all the prepositions?

249. Do you say "He works for me;", it, "He works at me"?

Q. Precisely how is "at"?

Q. What case then follow prepositions?

245. The objective case.

Q. This fact is of sufficient importance to constitute a rule; will you, therefore, repeat:

RULE X.

Prepositions govern the objective case.

Exercises in Parsing.

"John found his hat in the road."

249. Is is a preposition, a word used to connect words, and show the relation between them; it here shows the relation between hat and road.

Road is a noun: it is a name—common; it is a general name—neuter gender; it is neither male nor female—third person; it is spoken of—singular number; it means but one
OBJECTIVE CASE; it is the object of the relation denoted by the preposition in, and governed by it according to

Rule X. Prepositions govern the objective case.

"John ran through the house into the garden."
"We have deceived him to our sorrow."
"We came in season."
"You study grammar for your improvement in language."
"From virtue to vice the progress is gradual."
"They travelled into France through Italy."
"He lives within his income."
"Without the aid of charity, he lived very comfortably by his industry."
"I will search the house diligently for him."
"We might learn the lesson before them."
"According to my impression, he is in fault."
"Notwithstanding his poverty, he was the delight of his acquaintances."
"On all occasions she behaved with propriety."
"Of his talents we might say much."
"We may expect a calm after a storm."

XVII. Of the Conjunction.

Q. When I say, "John—his book," the sense, you perceive, is incomplete. Can you put a word into the blank which will complete the sense?

Q. Can you inform me what the foregoing expression is called?

251. A sentence.

Q. What, then, is a sentence?

252. A collection of words, forming a complete sense.

Q. "Life is short." This expression is called a sentence: can you tell me what kind, and why?

253. It is a simple sentence, because it makes sense, and has but one nominative and one verb.

Q. What does the term compound mean?

254. It means composed of two or more things.

Q. "Life is short, and art is long." This sentence is made up of two simple sentences: what, therefore, may it be called?

255. A compound sentence.

Q. What, then, is a compound sentence?

256. A compound sentence contains two or more simple sentences connected together.

Q. What does the term conjunction signify?

257. Union or joining together.

Q. In the compound sentence, "John writes, and William learns," the simple sentences are joined together by the word and: what word, then, may and be called?

258. A Conjunction.

* The remaining words are parsed as before.
Q. The king and queen are an amiable pair.” In this sentence, words and not sentences are connected by and. can you point out the words so connected?

259. King and queen.
Q. From the foregoing particulars, what appears to be the use of the conjunction?

260. A conjunction is used to connect words and sentences together.
Q. When I say, “Five and four are nine,” what do I mean?
261. Five added to four make nine.
Q. What, then, is implied by and?
262. Addition.
Q. When I say, “I will go, if you will accompany me,” what does the conjunction if imply?

263. Condition or supposition.
Q. And, if, &c. are called copulative conjunctions: can you tell me why?

264. Because a copulative conjunction connects or continues a sentence by expressing an addition, a supposition, a cause, &c.
Q. The following are the principal conjunctions of this class: will you repeat them?

265. “And, both, because, besides, for, if, provided, since, then, that, therefore, wherefore.”
Q. When I say, “James and John will come,” I mean both will come; but when I say, “James or John will come,” what do I mean?

266. That either James or John, one of them, will come.
Q. Are the words in this sentence, then, joined or disjoined?

267. Disjoined.
Q. What word is it that expresses the disjoining?

268. Or.
Q. What part of speech is or?

269. Conjunction.
Q. What does the word disjunctive mean?

270. Disjoining or separating.
Q. What kind of a conjunction, then, shall we call or?

271. A disjunctive conjunction.
Q. “James will come, but Henry will not.” Here the two clauses of the sentence are opposed to each other in meaning, and the word but separates these two clauses: what, then, does this word imply?

272. Opposition of meaning.
Q. From the foregoing, what appears to be the use of the disjunctive conjunction?
274. The conjunction disjunctive connects sentences, by expressing opposition of meaning in various degrees.

Q. The following are the principal conjunctions of this class: will you repeat them?

275. "But, than, though, either, or, as, unless, neither, nor, less, yet, notwithstanding."

Q. Prepositions, you recollect, connect words, as well as conjunctions; how, then, can you tell the one from the other?

276. Prepositions show the relation between words, but conjunctions express an addition, a supposition, a cause, or an opposition of meaning.

Q. "He and she write." In what case is he? she?

Q. The pronouns he and she, you perceive, are both in the same case, and connected by the conjunction and: when, then, may nouns and pronouns be connected?

277. When they are in the same case.

Q. "She will sing and dances." How may this sentence be corrected?

278. "She will sing and dance."

Q. In what mood and tense is, "She will sing?"

Q. To say, "She dance," is incorrect; dance, then, in this example, cannot be in the present tense: will you, then, inform me what "She will sing and dance" means, when fully expressed?

279. "She will sing and she will dance."

Q. Here will dance is in the future tense, as well as will sing: when, then, may verbs, in general, be connected?

280. When they are in the same mood and tense.

Q. From the foregoing particulars, what appears to be the rule for the use of conjunctions, in connecting words?

RULE XI.

Conjunctions usually connect verbs of the same mood and tense, and nouns or pronouns of the same case.

EXERCISES IN PARSING.

"John assists his father and mother."

281. And is a conjunction, a word chiefly used to connect words and sentences—copulative; it connects father and mother.

Mother is a noun; it is a name—common; it is a general name—feminine gender; it is the name of a female—third person; it is spoken of—singular number; it means but one—and it is one of the objects of assists, and is, therefore, in the objective case, and connected with father by the conjunction and, according to Rule XI. Conjunctions usually connect verbs of the same mood and tense, and nouns or pronouns of the same case.

EXERCISES IN PARSING CONTINUED.

I will reward him and them at some future time.

"We in vain (1.) look for a path between virtue and vice."

"Reproof either hardens or softens its object."

"In the morning of life, we eagerly pursue pleasure, but oftentimes meet (2.) with sad disappointments."

"A good scholar never mutters nor disobeys his instructor."

"She reads well, dances (3.) elegantly, and plays admirably on the piano-forte."

"Intemperance destroys the mind and benumbs the senses of man."

"You may read this sentence first, and then parse it."

"He has equal knowledge, but inferior judgment."

"John rises early in the morning, and pursues his studies."

XVIII. OF INTERJECTIONS.

Q. When I exclaim, "Oh! I have ruined my friend," "Aias! I fear for life," which words here appear to be thrown in between the sentences, to express passion or feeling?

282. Oh! Alas!

Q. What does interjection mean?

283. Thrown between.

Q. What name, then, shall we give such words as oh! alas! &c.?

284. Interjections.

Q. What, then, are interjections?

285. Interjections are words thrown in between the parts of sentences, to express the passions or sudden feelings of the speaker.

LIST OF INTERJECTIONS.

1. Of sadness or grief; as, "Oh! oh! alas! ah!"
2. Of wonder; as, "Really! strange!"
3. Of calling; as, "Halloo! ho! hem!"
4. Of attention; as, "Behold! lo! hark!"
5. Of disgust; as, "Foh! fy! fudge! away!"
6. Of silence; as, "Hush! hist!"
7. Of contempt; as, "Fish! tush!"
8. Of saluting; as, "Welcome! hail!"

Q. Will you examine the foregoing list, and then name an interjection of grief? One of wonder? One of calling? One of attention? One of disgust? One of silence? One of saluting?

Q. How may an interjection generally be known?

286. By its taking an exclamation point after it.

EXERCISES IN PARSING.

"Oh! I have alienated my friend."

---

(1.) In vain means the same as vainly. It may, therefore, be called an adverbial phrase, qualifying look, by Rule IX.

(2.) Meet agrees with we understood, and is, therefore, connected with pursue by the conjunction but, according to Rule XI.

(3.) Dances and plays both agree with she, understood, and are, therefore, connected, the former with reads, and the latter with dance, by Rule XI.
287. Oh is an interjection, a word used to express passion or feeling.

"Oh! I must go and see (1.) my dear father before (2.) he dies." "Strange! I did not know you." "Hash! our instructor is at the door." "We eagerly pursue pleasure, but, alas! we often mistake the road to its (3.) enjoyment."

(1.) The sense is, "I must go, and I must see;" the verb see, then, agrees with I, understood, and is, therefore, connected with must go, according to Rule XI.

(2.) Before, an adverb.

(3.) Apply, first, Rule V.; then, Rule I.

CRITICAL REMARKS.

COMPOSITION.

XIX. ENGLISH GRAMMAR.

288. English Grammar teaches us to speak and write the English language correctly.

289. Grammar is divided into four parts, namely,

XX. OF ORTHOGRAPHY

291. Ortography includes a knowledge of the nature and power of letters, and teaches how to spell words correctly. This part of grammar is usually learned from spelling-books and dictionaries.

292. Ortography means word-making or spelling.

XXI. OF ETYMOLOGY.

293. Etymology teaches how to form, from all the words in the English language, several grand divisions or sorts, commonly called Parts of Speech.

294. It includes a knowledge of the meaning and use of words—also their different changes and derivations.

295. Etymology signifies the origin or pedigree of words.

XXII. OF SYNTAX.

296. Syntax teaches how to arrange or form words into sentences correctly.
297. It includes a knowledge of the rules of composition, formed from the practice of the best writers and speakers.

298. Syntax signifies arranging or placing together; or, as used in grammar, sentence-making.

XXIII. ETYMOLOGY AND SYNTAX COMBINED.

299. The words of the English language are usually divided into nine sorts, commonly called Parts of Speech, namely:

- NOUN.
- PROGNOUN
- VERB.
- ADJECTIVE.
- ADVERB.
- PREPOSITION.
- CONJUNCTION.
- INTERJECTION.

XXIV. OF NOUNS

300. A noun is the name of any person, place or thing; as, man, Richmond, knife.

301. Nouns are of two kinds, proper and common.

Common nouns are general names; that is, they are names common to all individuals of the same kind or sort: as, house, city, world.

Proper nouns are particular names; that is, they are the names of particular individuals of the same kind or sort: as, George, Sherwood, Indianapolis.

302. When proper names have an article placed before them, they are used as common names: as, "He is the Cleopatra of his age."

303. When a proper noun admits of a plural, it becomes a common noun: as, "The twelve apostles." or, "The seven churches." This is obvious from the fact that a proper name is, in its nature, descriptive of one object only, and, therefore, essentially singular. Accordingly, the nouns St. Peter, St. Jude, etc., are common nouns, as well as their plurals, Saints, Evangelists, Apostles, etc.

304. Common nouns may also be used to signify individuals, by the addition of articles or pronouns: as, "The boy is studious." "That girl is discreet."

305. When a noun signifies many, it is called a noun of multitude, or a collective noun: as, "The people." "The crew."

306. Abstract signifies taken from; hence an abstract noun is the name of a quality abstracted from its substance; as, kindness, honesty, joy, error, etc.

308. To nouns belong person, gender, number and case.

XXV. PERSON.

309. When any person, in speaking, introduces his own name, it is the first person; as, "I, James, of the city of Shreveport, do give," &c.

310. The name of the person spoken to, is the second person; as, "James, come to me."

311. The name of the person or thing spoken of, or about, is the third person; as, "James has come."

XXVI. GENDER.

312. Gender is the distinction of sex.

313. Nouns have four genders—the masculine, the feminine, the common, and the neuter.

314. The masculine gender denotes the names of males; as man, boy, &c.

315. The feminine gender denotes the names of females; as, woman, girl.

316. The common gender denotes the names of such animals as may be either male or female; as, parent, bird.

317. The neuter gender denotes the names of objects which are neither males nor females; as, chair, table.

318. Some nouns, naturally neuter, do, by a figure of speech, as it is called, become masculine or feminine; as when we say of the sun, "He is setting," and of a ship, "She sails well," &c.

319. The English language has three methods of distinguishing sex, viz:

319-1. By different words; as,

XXVII. NUMBER.

320. Number shows how many are meant, whether one or more.

- 321. Nouns have two numbers, the singular and the plural.
- 322. The singular number expresses but one; as, boy.
- 323. The plural number implies more than one; as, boys.
- 324. Some nouns are used in the singular number only; as, wheat, gold, sloth, pride, dutifulness.
- 325. Other nouns are used in the plural number only; as, bellows, scissors, lungs, riches, &c.
- 326. Some nouns are the same in both numbers; as, deer, sheep, swine.
- 327. The plural number of nouns is regularly formed by adding s to the singular; as, sing. dove, plur. doves.

328. The irregular mode of forming the plural is as follows: when the noun singular ends in s, ch, sh, or th, we add es to form the plural; as, bus, churches, churches; books, lathes, lathes.

329. Nouns ending in f or fe, change these terminations into v to form the plural; as, elf, half, elfes, halves.

330. When a noun singular ends in y, with a vowel before it, the plural is formed regularly; as, lady, ladies, lady, ladies. But if the y does not have a vowel before it, the plural is formed by changing y into i es, as, fly, flies, beauty, beauties.

331. The following nouns form their plurals not according to any general rules:

332. Mathematics, metaphysics, psychology, ethics, politics, &c. are reckoned either as singular or plural nouns. A name is equally true of men, sons, persons. Antithesis, antithesis, singularity, likeness, likeness, &c. are always plural. Nouns is now considered the singular of numbers. The noun news is always singular. Many nouns form their plurals according to the laws of the language from which they are derived. The following are of this class:

XXVIII. CASE.

333. Case means the different state, condition, or relation which nouns have to other words in the same sentence.

(1.) Pennies when the coin is meant. (2.) Dues for coming. (3.) Piece and pieces, meaning quantities; but peas and peas, when number is meant.

(4.) Cerium when denoting aerial or imaginary spirits; genius, when denoting persons of genius. (5.) Income, when denoting points or tables of contents; indices, when referring to algebraic quantities.
331. In English, nouns have three cases—the nominative, the possessive, and the objective.

332. The nominative case is usually the agent or doer, and always the subject of the verb.

333. The subject is the thing chiefly spoken of; as, "John assists William:" here, John is the subject spoken of, or the nominative case to the verb assists.

334. The possessive case denotes possession, ownership, property, &c.; as, "William’s book." This case may be distinguished from the other cases by the apostrophe or the letter s.

335. A noun in the singular forms its possessive case by taking the apostrophe and the letters after it; as, "John’s hat."

336. Plural nouns usually form their possessive case simply by taking the apostrophe; as, "On eagles’ wings."

337. When the plural of nouns does not end in s, they form their possessive case by taking both the apostrophe and the letter s; as “Men’s houses.”

338. When the singular ends in s, the apostrophe only is added; as, “For goodness’ sake!” except the noun witness; as, “The witness’s deposition.”

339. Nouns ending in s form the possessive by adding the apostrophe only; as, “For convinced sake!” because an additional s would occasion too much of the hissing sound, or increase the difficulty of pronunciation.

340. The objective case denotes the object of an action or relation.

341. In the sentence, "John strikes him," him is the object of the action denoted by strikes; and in the sentence, "He went from London to York," York is the object of the relation denoted by the preposition to.

342. Declension of Nouns.

Rule I.

The possessive case is governed by the following noun.

Exercises in Syntax.

"John's wife returned."

343. John’s is a proper noun, of the masculine gender, the third person, singular number, possessive case, and governed by wife, by Rule I.

Wife is a common noun, of the feminine gender, the third person, singular number, and nominative case to returned, by Rule VI.

Returned is an intransitive verb, in the indicative mood,
ENGLISH GRAMMAR.

IMPERFECT TENSE—"1. I returned; 2. You returned; 3. He returned, or wife returned"—made in the third person, singular, and agrees with 's, Rule VII.

MORE EXERCISES IN SYNTAX.

"William's son has come." "William's wife's sister remained in town."
"John's brother died." "Polly studied Johnson's Dictionary."
"John makes (1) boys' hats. " "Mary's bonnet is old."
"The boys neglected their lessons." "Virgil's record is sure." (2.)
"Intemperance ruins its victims." "Rum's ban is now."...SENTENCES TO BE PARSED AND CORRECTED.

"Brothers estate:"

347. If you examine the foregoing example, you will find it difficult to ascertain whether the estate is the property of one brother or more; if of one only, an apostrophe should precede the s, thus: "Brother's estate;" but if it belongs to more than one, an apostrophe should follow the s, thus: "Brother's estates." Mistrakes of this sort often occur; hence you perceive the importance in writing of attending to the subject of grammar.

"Mary's happiness."

348. Incorrect, because 'mary' is in the possessive case, singular number, and, therefore, the apostrophe should be placed before the s, according to the observations above, and Art. 338.

"John's son departed." "I discovered Mary's faults."
"Susan's sister will learn." "She made little Harry's bonnet."
"Charles' task is too difficult." "Johnson makes more shoes."
"I have read Willie's poem."

EXERCISES TO BE WRITTEN.

349. Will you write down two sentences, one containing a proper noun, as for example, "William learns grammar"? One containing a common noun? One, containing a noun of the fourth person singular? One, of the third person plural, and in the nominative case? One, having a noun of the second person singular and in the feminine gender? One, having a noun the name of some article of food? One, having a noun the name of some quality? One, having a noun of multitude? One, having your own name associated with book, as, "John Griscom's book?"

XXX. OF ARTICLES.

350. Articles are words put before nouns, to point them out, or to limit their meaning.

351. There are two articles, a or an, and the.

352. A or an is called the indefinite article.
808. This is called the definite article.

The article the is called the definite article, because it indicates or requires the thing that is intended to be understood. Thus, "the house" means a particular house; "the snow" means a particular snow. The article the is used to denote a thing, an idea, or an opinion.

809. The definite article is used in the singular number, as "the book," "the bird," "the bird's nest," "the bird's wing," "the book that you read," etc.

810. The definite article the is used in the singular number, as "the book," "the bird," "the bird's nest," "the bird's wing," etc. It is used to denote a particular thing, idea, or opinion.

RULE III.
The definite article the belongs to nouns of the singular number.

RULE IV.
The definite article the belongs to nouns in the singular or in the plural number.

811. Exercise. When the article the is used before a noun, the noun is always in the singular number. The article the is placed before the noun, as "the book," "the bird," etc.

EXERCISES IN STYRAX.
"The bird flies swiftly."

812. This is a definite article, and belongs to bird, according to Rule III.

Bird is a common noun of the common gender, the third person, singular number, and in the nominative case, to flies, by Rule V.

Fliy is an active intransitive verb, indicative mood, present tense—"I fly; You fly; He flies, or bird flies"—made in the third person, singular, and agrees with him, by Rule VIII.

Swiftly is an adverb, qualifying "fly" by Rule IX.

EXERCISES IN STYRAX CONTINUED
"The boy has arrived securely." "Children attend the school." "The man is busy." "Children attend the school." "The man is busy." "Children attend the school."

(5. Apply Rule VIII.)
ENGLISH GRAMMAR.

SENTENCES TO BE PARSED AND CORRECTED.

"He had a ulcer."

331. Incorrect, because we use an before a vowel, except u long: a should, therefore, be on: thus, "an ulcer."

"A enemy approaches."  "Three factory-boys make a team."
"James procured a husband."  "Little soup makes a cope."
"He conferred a honor."  "They formed an union."
"An ant figure occupies the lowest place in scale numbers."  "He quoted an hard saying."
"Thomas has lost an Acts."

SENTENCES TO BE WRITTEN.

332. Will you write down two sentences, using in one the definite and in the other the indefinite article? One, containing a definite article correctly used: "The桌子."

One, having a definite article correctly used: "I desire the connection."

Will you write two sentences, the names of different things in the school-room? Two, the names of different cities? One sentence, having a proper noun used as a common noun?

XXX. OF ADJECTIVES.

363. An Adjective is a word joined to a noun, to describe or define it: as, "An obedient son."

364. In English, an adjective is varied only to express the degrees of comparison. There are three degrees of comparison—the positive, the comparative, and the superlative.

365. The positive degree simply describes an object: as, "John is good."

366. The comparative degree increases or lessens the positive in meaning: as, "William is better than John." It implies a comparison between two.

367. The superlative degree increases or lessens the positive to the highest or lowest degree: as, "Thomas is the best."

368. It implies a comparison between three or more.

369. The simple word, or positive, if a single-word, (1) becomes the comparative by adding er or est, and the superlative by adding est or est to the end of it: as, "fast," "faster," "fastest.

370. In words of more than one syllable, the comparison is usually made by placing the adjectives more and most before the positive, or, better for, the superlative.

371. The comparison is sometimes formed by the adjectives less and least: as, "less weight, least weight."
EXERCISES IN SYNTAX.

Adjectives belong to the nouns which they describe.

EXERCISES IN SYNTAX.

"John is sincere."

879 John is a PROPER NOUN, OF THE THIRD PERSON, SINGULAR NUMBER, MALE, and in the NOMINATIVE CASE, TO IS, by RULE VI.

Is is a VERB, IN THE INDICATIVE MOOD, PRESENT TENSE — "1. I am; 2. You are; 3. He or John is," — made in the third person singular, and agrees with John, according to Rule VII.

Sincere is an ADJECTIVE,—"sincere, more sincere, most sincere,"—made in the possessive case, and belongs to John, by Rule IV.

EXERCISES IN SYNTAX CONTINUED.

"You are studious." "One man has come."
"John is more studious." "Two men have departed."
"William is most studious." "Twenty men will sail."
"Mary is intelligent." "James wrote his name on the first page."
"James is active." "Here comes a great man."
"Thomas is less active." "Here comes a greater man."
"Charles is happy." "Here comes the greatest man."
"Mary is tall. She is taller."
"No composition is perfect."
"No composition is perfect."
"Religion makes its votaries happy."
"The first deed contained five hundred men."
add nothing to the sense, should be avoided; as, worser more wiser, &c; also, lesser, supremest, most infinite, &c.

SENTENCES TO BE WRITTEN.

Q. Will you write down two sentences, each containing a different adjective in the positive degree? Two, with adjectives in the comparative degree? Two with adjectives in the superlative degree?

Q. Will you supply such adjectives in the following sentences as will make sense? “A —— boy studies his lesson.” “A —— boy deserves punishment.” “A man helps the —— man.” “Merchants own —— ships.” “The instructor loves —— scholars.” “William is a —— scholar, Rufus is a —— one, but Thomas is the —— one that I ever saw.”

XXXII. OF PRONOUNS.

381. A PRONOUN is a word used instead of a noun, to avoid a disagreeable repetition of the noun.

382. A PERSONAL PRONOUN is so called, because it invariably represents the same person. There are five personal pronouns—I, thou or you, he, she, it. They have person, number and case, like nouns; and those of the third person have gender also.

383. I is the first person, thou the second, he, she, or it, the third. He is masculine, she is feminine, and it is neuter.

384. Pronouns, like nouns, have three cases—the nominative, the possessive, and the objective; and two numbers —the singular and plural.

385. Mine and thine, instead of my and thine., were formerly used in the solemn style, before nouns and adjectives beginning with a vowel or silent h; as,
“Plit out all mine iniquities.”

XXXIII. COMPOUND PERSONAL PRONOUNS.

386. Compound personal pronouns are formed by adding the word self, in the plural selves, to the simple pronouns;
as, himself, themselves, &c.
RULE V

Pronouns must agree with the nouns for which they stand, in gender, number, and person.

EXERCISES IN SYNTAX.

"John found his knife."

387. John is a proper noun, of the masculine gender, the third person, singular number, and nominative case, governed by Rule VI.

Found is an active-transitive verb, in the indicative mood, imperfect tense—1. I found; 2. You found; 3. He or John found”—made in the third person singular, and agrees with John, by Rule VII.

His is a personal pronoun, of the third person singular, masculine gender, and agrees with John, according to Rule V ; in the possessive case, and governed by knife, by Rule I.

Knife is a common noun, of the third person singular, neuter gender, the objective case, and governed by found, according to Rule VIII.

EXERCISES IN SYNTAX CONTINUED

1. "James obtained his request;" "You deserve respect;" "I will assist you;" "They mend their pens;" "Mary tore her handkerchief;" "Virtue has its reward;" "She received them;"
   "An indulgent father will reprove his son when ( ) he deserves it;" "I found Mary and her mother in trouble, and ( ) comforted ( ) them;"

EXERCISES TO BE WRITTEN.

Q. Will you compose two sentences, each having a different personal pronoun of the first person? One, having a pronoun of the first person plural?

1. Adverb. 2. Conjunction. 3. Apply Rule XI.
Q. Will you fill up the following sentences with suitable pronouns, so as to make sense? "— lost my hat, but found — again." "Let barley — hogs, for — will need — to grind this lesson." "The travelers lost — way and the boys conducted — to homes.

Q. Will you fill up the following blank sentences with suitable words to make sense? "Intelligence — and — of his — Columbus — always. "Exception — inflections." "The __________ is __________ wise. " — this man.

ANTH OF ADJECTIVE PRONOUNS

81. In the sentence, "Both wealth and poverty are extremities, it tends to conduct the "distinctions," we perceive that the word it represents wealth, and the word it represents poverty. and that the adjectives resemble pronouns, and may be used either as adjectives or as pronouns.

82. When I say, "This horse is mine, that barn is yours," the words the and that are joined to nouns like adjectives to define or qualify them; they may, in this account, be called adjectives.

83. Adjective pronouns, then, are words that resemble both nouns and adjectives. These pronouns are sometimes called pronominal adjectives, or specifying adjectives.

84. The adjective pronouns may be divided into three sets — the distributive, the demonstrative, and the indefinite.

85. The distributive are those that relate to persons or things, taken separately and singly.

DISTRIBUTIVE PRONOUNS.

Each, every, neither, and sometimes neither.

86. Each relates to one or more persons or things, taken separately, as, "Each of his brothers is doing well.

87. Every relates to several persons or things, and singles out each one of them, taken separately, as, "Every letter must be answered in time.

88. Neither relates to two persons or things, or two separately, and signifies the one of the persons or things not seen of, or "Neither of the letters is answered."

89. "Neither means not either that is, not one nor the other as, "Neither of the invitations was there."

810. The demonstrative (3d.) pronouns are those which precisely point out the things to which they relate.

DEMONSTRATIVE PRONOUNS.

Sing. | Plt.
---|---
This. | These.
That. | Those.
Former. | Former.
Latter. | Latter.
400. This and these refer to the nearest person or things,—that and those to the most distant; as, "These gloves are superior to those." "Both wealth and poverty are temptations; that tends to excite pride, this discontent."

401. The indefinite are those that refer to things in an indefinite or general manner.

INDEFINITE PRONOUNS.

402. Some, other, any, one, all, such, none. Of these pronouns, one and other are declined like nouns. Another is declined in the singular, but it wants the plural.

We say, "This book," but, "These books;" also, "One man," "Twenty men;" hence,

405. Note I. Adjective pronouns and numerals must agree in number with the nouns to which they belong.

EXERCISES IN SYNTAX.

"These two books belong to me."

406. These is an adjective pronoun of the demonstrative kind, in the plural number, and belongs to books, according to Note I. Two is a numeral adjective, and belongs to books, by Note I. Books, belong, &c. are parsed as before.

"The old bird feeds her young ones."

407. Ones is an indefinite pronoun, representing birds; in the common gender, third person plural, in the objective case, and governed by feeds, agreeably to Rule VIII.
ENGLISH GRAMMAR.

"One boy influences many others." others spend their time in idleness; "None act their part too well." the former will receive praise, the "Some scholars study diligently;" latter censure."

We cannot say, "Them run," but, "They run:" hence,

Note II. When a noun or pronoun is the subject of the verb, it should be in the nominative case.

It is very common for persons in conversation to say, "Them books," "Them knives," &c. instead of "Those books," "Those knives," &c. The incorrectness here alluded to consists in substituting a personal in the place of an adjective pronoun; hence,

Note III. The pronoun Them should not be used in the place of these or those.

SENTENCES TO BE WRITTEN.

Q. Will you compose two sentences, each having a different adjective pronoun? One, having a demonstrative pronoun? One, having an indefinite pronoun used as a noun?

Q. Will you fill up with pronouns suitable to make sense the following phrases? "When Harriet found — book, — tore —, and then flung — away."

"— man likes — farm, — merchandise."

XXXV OF RELATIVE PRONOUNS.

408. In the sentence, "That man is happy, who lives virtuously," the word who is a pronoun, because it stands for a noun (the noun man), and it is a relative, because it relates or refers to this noun in the same sentence; hence,

409. A relative pronoun is a word that usually stands for some noun before it in the same sentence.

410. There are three relative pronouns, viz.

411. Who, which, and that.

412. Who is used in speaking of persons; as, "The man who came."

413. Which is used in speaking of animals or things; as, "The bird which sings," "The tree which I planted."

414. Which, however, is used in speaking of persons, when we wish to distinguish one of two individuals, or a particular person among many others; as, "Which of the two is he?" "Which of them has gone?"

415. That, as a relative, is often used, in speaking either of persons or things, in the place of who or which; as,

"The boy that reads," or, "The boy who reads;" "The bird that flew," or, "The bird which flew;" "The bench that was made," or, "The bench which was made."

That is used in preference to who or which, in the following cases:

1. In speaking both of persons and things; as, "The man and the beast that I saw, perished."
ENGLISH GRAMMAR.

2. In speaking of children; as, "The child that I met."

3. After the adjective same; as, "He is the same man that we saw yesterday."

4. After the superlative degree; as, "He is the wisest man that the world ever produced."

5. After the relative who; as, "Who that reflects."

471. Exception. That, as a relative, cannot take the preposition immediately before it; as, "He is the same man with that you are acquainted." For with them, correct is with. It is remarkable, however, that, when the arrangement is a little varied, the word that admits the preposition; as, "He is the same man that you were acquainted with."

472. We can say, "The man who," or "The men who," using the relative who; speaking either of one man or more than one; who, then, is of both numbers and is thus declined:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Case</th>
<th>Form</th>
<th>Plural</th>

</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>

<td>Who</td>
<td>Who</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Nom.</td>
<td>Whose</td>
<td>Whose</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Accr.</td>
<td>Whom</td>
<td>Whom</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>

475. Which and that are of both numbers, but they are not declined, except that whose is sometimes used as the possessive case of which; as, "Is there any other doctrine which followers are punished?"

476. When used in the manner last described, is made to represent three words; as, "Philosophy whose end," "for the end of which."

479. _Note: _signifies going before.

50. The noun or pronoun which goes before the relative, and to which the relative refers, is therefore called the antecedent of the relative; as, "John, who has gone." Here, John is the antecedent of who.

481. When you are told that who, which, and that are relatives, you should not get the impression that the last two are always relatives; for that is a relative only when it is used in the sense of _who_ or _which_; that is, when _who_ or _which_ may be used in its place, without destroying the sense; as, "Here is the knife that I found," which can be altered to "Here is the knife which I found," without injury to the sense.

482. That, when it points out or specifies some particular person or thing, is known as an adjective pronoun. When not used as a relative, nor as an adjective pronoun, it is reckoned a conjunction; as, "He studies that he may learn."

483. Hence it appears that the word _that_ may be used sometimes as a relative pronoun, sometimes as an adjective pronoun, and sometimes as a conjunction.

484. Since relative pronouns stand for nouns, as well as personal pronouns, they should therefore agree with nouns in the same particulars and by the same rule. Rule V will therefore apply to both.

EXERCISES IN SYNTAX.

"That man is happy who lives virtuously."

405. That is a _demonstrative pronoun_, of the singular number, and belongs to _man_, by _Note I_.

Who is a _relative pronoun_, of the masculine gender, third person singular, and agrees with _man_, by _Rule V_. It is in the _nominative case to live_, according to _Rule VI_.

You taught the boy whose hat I "The boy whom I last saw leaves with"

SENTENCES TO BE PARSED AND CORRECTED.

"The man whom I saw."

426. Incorrect; because, in speaking of persons, who, whose, or whom is generally to be used. It should therefore, read "The man whom I saw."

SENTENCES TO BE PARSED AND CORRECTED CONTINUED.

The boy whom I killed had made "Then who are in prosperity must generally be more careful."

The man whom visited me has left "He which makes wise lives generally practice virtue."

This man is happy whom is virtuous, "I, who live by personality, should be grateful."

SENTENCES TO BE WRITTEN.

9. Will you construct a sentence containing the relative who? One, containing whom? One, containing the?

9. Will you fill up the following sentences with relatives correctly used?

"The man who is unclean," "The boy who hurt me,

9. Will you embrace in different sentences, each of the following words? who, whom, whose, whose, whom, whose. Write them all in your notebook.

XXXVI. OF COMPOUND AND INTERROGATIVE PRONOUNS.

427. "I took what you gave me."

"I took the thing which you gave me."

"I took the thing which you gave me."

428. By examining the foregoing sentences, you will see that the word who, in the first example, means the same as the words in whom is unclean. The word whom, in the second example, means the same as the words in whom is unclean. Hence, the word whom, in the phrase "that which," or "the thing which," is the antecedent of which.

429. What is a compound relative pronoun, including both the antecedent and the relative, and is generally equivalent to that which.

ENGLISH GRAMMAR.

430. Who, which; and what have sometimes the words ever or ever annexed to them: and each combination of this sort is called a compound relative; as, whoever, whosoever, whichever, whichsoever, &c. They are not often used.

431. Who, which, and what are called interrogatives, or relatives of the interrogative kind, when they are used in asking questions; as, "Who is he?" "Which is the book?" "What are you doing?" These relatives, you perceive, have no antecedents, but relate to some word or phrase contained in the answer, which is called a subsequent, because it follows after the relative; as, "Whom did you see?" Ans. "John." Here John is the subsequent to which whom refers.

432. Hence it follows, that antecedent and subsequent are opposed to each other in meaning; the former signifying going before, the latter following after.

433. Whether was formerly made use of to express interrogation; as, "Whether of these shall I choose?" but it is now seldom used, the interrogatives which supplying its place.

434. Which, what, and, as we have already seen, that, when joined to nouns, are adjective pronouns; as, "unto which promise our twelve tribes."

435. When what and which are joined to nouns in asking questions, they are called interrogative adjective pronouns; as, "Which horse did he take?"

436. In some instances, we find what used in the sense of an interjection; as, "What! take my money, and then my life?"

EXERCISES IX SYNTAX.

"I will leave what is useless."

437. What, in the example above, means the same as, "that which," or, "the thing which;" we will, therefore, in parsing it, bear in mind that it has the government and agreement of two separate words. We will first parse it as standing for thing, and secondly for which.

What is a compound relative pronoun, and is equivalent to "that which," or, "the thing which." In representing thing, it may be considered a pronoun of the third person singular, neuter gender, in the objective case, and governed by leave, according to Rule VIII.

What, in representing which, may be considered a relative pronoun of the third person singular, neuter gender, and relates to thing for its antecedent, according to Rule V and in the nominative case to is, by Rule VI.

Is is a neuter verb, in the indicative mood, present tense —"1. I am; 2. You are; 3. He or which is"—made in the third person singular, and agrees with which, the relative part of the pronoun what, according to Rule VII.

Useless is an adjective, in the positive degree, and belongs to what, by Rule IV.

"James will do what is proper." "William demands what I cannot give." "Whatever improves delights him." "They advocate what is excellent."
A verb is a word that expresses action or being. Verbs are of three kinds—active, passive, and neuter.

An active verb expresses action, and the actor is always the nominative case; as, “John runs.” Active verbs are either transitive or intransitive.

An active verb is transitive, when it either has or may have an object after it, on which the action terminates; as, “John beats William.”

An active verb is intransitive, when it neither has nor can have an object after it.

Passive means suffering or receiving.

When I say, “John is beaten by William,” is beaten is a verb, because it expresses action; and it is a passive verb, because it expresses the action received by John; and if John receives the action, then he is the object of it; hence,

A passive verb expresses action or effect received.

The object is always its subject or nominative case.

Active nominative, or actor, “John strikes William.”

Passive nominative or object, “William is struck by John.”

By examining the foregoing examples, you will see that when the verb is active, its nominative is likewise active; and when the verb is passive, its nominative is likewise passive.

The passive voice is a convenient mode of expression on occasions when we wish to state what has been done, without exposing the author; thus, instead of saying, “William struck John,” I can, to avoid alluding to William, say, “John was struck.”

A neuter verb is one that is neither active nor passive, expressing simply either being or existence in a certain state, as, “He sits,” “He is at home.”

Mood, or mode, is the manner of representing action or being.

The indicative mood is used simply for indicating or declaring a thing, or asking a question; as, “I walk;” “Do I walk?”

The potential mood is used for expressing possibility, liberty, power, will, or obligation, either with or without asking a question; as, “I may go;” “May I go?” “He must read,” &c.

ENGLISH GRAMMAR.

471. In the positive, a verb in the potential may be changed to the subjunctive; as, "I walk," the indicative mood becomes subjunctive; "If I walk," the indicative mood becomes subjunctive.

472. Of the same importance, when it is, "I am going."

473. When I say, "We are going," and you ask, "What is your plan?" we may change, in the positive, the verb into the subjunctive.

474. The mood, in verbs designed before,

475. The imperative mood, here, is used for commanding, enjoining, exhorting, or describing an action;

476. In the imperative mood, the verb is sometimes omitted, and the subject is expressed in the infinitive, or in the present tense, to denote the subject of the action. Consequently, a verb in the mood cannot have any object.

477. The subject of the action is expressed in the present tense, and in the singular number.

478. The imperative mood is used to express an action not limited either by person or number.

479. In the present tense of this mood, is sometimes understood; as, "Let me go," instead of, "I go." But in the present tense, is not varied to correspond with the number of the person of the other words.

480. In the imperative mood, it is used to express an action not limited either by person or number.

481. From the foregoing, it appears that there are the modes—the indicative, the imperative, the potential, the subjunctive, and the indicative.
453. This tense is often employed to express the actions of persons long since dead; as, “Seneca reasons and moralizes well.”

454. The present tense, preceded by the words when, before, after, as soon as, &c., is sometimes used to point out the relative time of a future action; as, “When he arrives, he will hear the news.”

455. This tense is elegantly applied to qualities and things which are in their nature unchangeable; as, “Truth is eternal,” “William boldly asserted that there was no God;” properly, “is no God.”

456. In animated (1.) historical narrations, (2.) this tense is sometimes used for the imperfect; as, “He enters the territory of the peaceable inhabitants; he fights and conquers, takes an immense booty, which he divides among his soldiers, and returns home to enjoy an empty triumph.”

457. The imperfect tense expresses what took place in time past, however distant; as, “John died.”

458. The perfect tense expresses what has taken place, and conveys an allusion to the present time; as, “I have finished my letter.”

459. When any particular period of past time is specified or alluded to, we use the imperfect tense; as, “John wrote yesterday;” but when no particular past time is specified, we use the perfect tense; as, “I have read Virgil many times.”

460. The perfect tense and the imperfect tense both denote a thing that is past; but the former denotes it in such a manner that there is still actually remaining some part of the time to slide away, wherein we declare the thing has been done; whereas the imperfect denotes the thing or action past, in such a manner, that nothing remains of that time in which it was done. If we speak of the present century, we say, “Philosophers have made great discoveries in the present century;” but if we speak of the last century, we say, “Philosophers made great discoveries in the last century.”—“He has been much afflicted this year.” “I have this week read the king’s proclamation.” “I have heard great news this morning.” In these instances, “has,” “have,” “had,” “have read,” and “heard,” denote things that are past; but they occurred in this year, in this week, and today; and still there remains a part of this year, week, and day, whereof I speak.

461. In general, the perfect tense may be applied wherever the action is connected with the present time, by the actual existence, either of the author or of the work, though it may have been performed many centuries ago; but if neither the author nor the work now remains, it cannot be used. We may say, “Cicero has written orations;” but we cannot say, “Cicero has written poems;” because the orations are in being, but the poems are lost. Speaking of priests in general, we may say, “They have, in all ages, claimed great powers;” because the general order of the priesthood still exists: but if we speak of the Druids, as any particular order of priests, which does not now exist, we cannot use this tense. We cannot say, “The Druid priests have claimed great powers;” but must say, “The Druid priests claimed great powers;” because that order is now totally extinct.

462. The pluperfect tense expresses what had taken place at some past time mentioned, as, “I had finished my letter before my father returned.”

463. The first future tense expresses what will take place; as, “John will come.”

464. The second future expresses what will have taken place, and conveys an allusion to the present time; as, “I will have read Virgil many times.”

(1.) Lively. (2.) Descriptive, or telling what has been done.
place, at or before some future time mentioned; as, “I shall have finished my business before the steam-boat starts.”

404. Tense is the distinction of time, and admits of six variations, namely—the present, the imperfect, the perfect, the pluperfect, and the first and second future tenses.

XL. OF PARTICIPLES.

405. In the phrase, “I found a man laboring in the field,” the word laboring shows what the man was doing, and therefore resembles a verb. When I say, “The laboring man should not be wronged,” laboring is joined to the noun man, to describe it, and therefore resembles an adjective.

406. The word laboring, then, partakes of the nature of two different parts of speech; and since participle signifies participling, we shall call such words as laboring, participles.

407. All participles are derived from verbs: thus, from labor comes laboring; from last, lasting, etc., hence.

408. The participle is a word derived from a verb, and partakes of the nature of a verb and adjective.

409. When I say, “John is writing,” the participle writing shows what John is now doing, but has not finished; writing, then, may be called a present participle; hence,

500. The present participle expresses what is now taking place, but not finished.

500—1. This participle always ends in ing, as, writing, writing, waiting, saying, hence. There are many words of this termination, which are not participles; as, were, even, which are verbs; waiting, waiting, which are adjectives. The fact that these cannot be formed from verbs which you with a certain rule for distinguishing the participle from all other words of the same termination; as, for instance, interesting, we know is not a participle, because there is no such verb as uninteresting, from which to form it.

501. “The letter is written.” Here the participle written shows that the act of writing is past and finished; it may then be called a perfect participle; hence,

502. The perfect participle expresses what is past and finished.

502—1. This participle may always be distinguished by its making sense with having; thus, having written, having sung, etc. Here written and sung are perfect participles.

503. “John, having written his letter, sealed it.” Here you doubtless perceive that the act of writing took place before that of sealing; also, that the participle is composed of two words, having and written; it may then be called a compound perfect participle; because it denotes also an action past and finished, it may very properly be called a compound perfect participle; hence,

504. The compound perfect participle expresses what took place before something else mentioned.

504—1. This participle is formed by placing the present participle having before the perfect participle of any verb; as, having fought, having slashed.
XLI. FORMATION OF THE PASSIVE VERB.

509. Strike is a perfect participle, from the verb strike, and this you know, because it makes sense joined with having; as, having struck.

510. If, you doubtless recollect, is a variation of the verb to is; as, "I am, you are, he is." Now, by joining is with strike, we can form the passive verb is struck. "John struck Joseph," is active; but, "Joseph is struck by John," is passive.

511. In these two examples, you perceive that the sense of each is the same; hence, by means of the passive verb, we are enabled to express, in a different form, the precise meaning of the active, which you will oftentimes find, contributes not a little to the variety and harmony of the language.

512. By examining the conjugation of the verb to be, you will discover that it has, in all, ten variations: viz. am, art, is, are, was, were, be, been, and being. Every passive verb must be composed of one of these ten variations, and the perfect participle of any active transitive verb. Thus, taking am, and joining it with the perfect participle of the verb beat, namely, beaten, we form the passive verb was beaten, to which prefixing an object, or nominative case, we have the phrases, "William was beaten."

513. It is a fact worthy to be remembered, that the passive verb always retains the same mood, tense, number, and person, that the verb to be has, before it is incorporated with the participle; thus, "He has been," is the indicative perfect, third person singular; then, "He has been rejected," is likewise the indicative perfect, third person singular, passive. It cannot, therefore, be difficult to tell the mood, tense, number, and person, of any passive verb, if you are familiar with the conjugation of the verb to be.

From the foregoing particulars, we derive the following general rule:

514. All passive verbs are formed by adding the perfect participle of any active-transitive verb to the neuter verb to be.

——

XLII. OF THE AUXILIARY VERB.

515. Auxiliary verbs are those by the help of which the principal verbs are conjugated.

516. The auxiliary verbs are may, can, must, might, could, would, should, and shall. The following are sometimes auxiliaries, and sometimes principal verbs: do, be, have and will.

517. When, in the formation of any tense, we use an auxiliary verb, that tense is called a compound one; and the tense formed by the principal verb alone is called a simple tense.

XLIII. SIGNS OF THE MOODS.

518. The indicative mood may be known by the sense, or by its having no sign except in asking a question; as, "Who comes here?"

519. The potential mood has for its signs the auxiliaries may, can, must, might, could, would, and should; as, "I could love," &c.
516. The subjunctive mood has usually for its signs the conjunctions if, though, unless, except, whether, and lest; as, "Unless he repeat," &c.

517. The infinitive mood has usually for its sign the word to; as, to sing.

518. The imperative may be distinguished by its always being in the second person, and by its agreement with thou, or ye, or you; as, "Depart thou," &c.

XLIV SIGNS OF THE TENSES OF THE INDICATIVE.

519. The present tense has for its sign the first form of the verb; as, went, remain, &c.; excepting the occasional use of do; as, "I do learn."

520. The imperfect tense has no auxiliary for a sign, except did, which is sometimes used. If, however, the verb is not in the present tense, and has no auxiliary, it follows that it is in the imperfect; as, "I forgot."

521. The perfect tense has for its sign the word have; as, have loved.

522. The pluperfect has for its sign had; as, had loved.

523. The first future has for its sign shall or will; as, shall or will love.

524. The second future has for its sign shall have or will have; as, shall have loved, or will have loved.

525. The indicative mood has six tenses.

526. The subjunctive mood has six tenses.

527. The potential mood has four tenses.

528. The infinitive mood has two tenses.

529. The imperative mood has one tense.

XLV CONJUGATION OF VERBS.

530. When I ask you to raise your voice, in reading, you readily understand what I mean by voice; but in grammar, its application is somewhat peculiar. Grammatically considered, it refers to the active and passive nature of verbs.

531. The conjugation of a verb is the regular combination and arrangement of its several numbers, persons, moods, and tenses.
532. The conjugation of an active verb is styled the active voice, and that of a passive verb the passive voice.

533. Verbs are called regular, when they form their imperfect tense of the indicative mood, and their perfect participle, by the addition of ed to the verb in the present tense, or d only when the verb ends in e; as,

For the benefit of those who wish to retain the pronoun they, in the conjugation of verbs, the following synopsis is given. The pupil can take it separately, or he taught it in connection with the other persons of the verb, by substituting them for you, in the foregoing conjugation.
ENGLISH GRAMMAR.

Synopsis with Thou.

INDICATIVE MOOD.

Imp. Thou lovest. Thou wast loved. Thou wast.

Pres. Thou hast loved. Thou hast been loved. Thou hast been.

Perf. Thou hast been loved. Thou hast been.

1 Fut. Thou shalt or wilt love. Thou shalt or wilt be loved.

2 Fut. Thou wilt have loved. Thou wilt have been loved.

POTENTIAL MOOD.

Pres. Thou mayst or canst love. Thou mayst or canst be loved.

Imp. Thou mightst, couldst, wouldst, or shouldst love.

Pres. Thou mayst or canst have loved. Thou mayst or canst have been loved.

Perf. Thou mayst or canst have been loved.

537. SUBJUNCTIVE MOOD.

Pres. If thou lovest. If thou art loved. If thou art.

Imp. If thou lovedst. If thou wast loved. If thou wast.

Pres. If thou love. If thou be loved. If thou be.

Imp. If thou loved. If thou wert loved. If thou wert.

540. Indicative Present.

Singular.

1. Do I love?
2. Do you love?
3. Does he love?

Plural.

1. Do we love?
2. Do you love?
3. Do they love?

542. You will find, on examination of the foregoing conjugation, that the tenses of the subjunctive are in every respect similar to the corresponding ones of the indicative, except the following, namely, the present and imperfect of the verb to be; the present and imperfect of the passive; the present and the second future active. The last, however, corresponds in termination, but not in formation. Among the exceptions should be reckoned the use of the conjunction if. There are instances, however, of the subjunctive form, when no conjunction is expressed, but in all such cases it is plainly understood; as, "Were I to go, he would not follow;" "Had he known me, he would have treated me differently;" that is, "If I were to go," and, "If he had known." Examples of this description are conjugated as follows:

544. The second person singular of all verbs formerly (1.) ended in st, as, "Thou hast," "Thou wast," &c. This form is still retained by that respectable class of persons denominated (2.) Friends, and in the Sacred (3.) Scriptures. (3.)

545. "Eth, for the termination of the third person singular, obtained (4.) very generally till within a recent (5.) period, especially on grave (6.) and didactic (7.) subjects; as, "He that hath ears to hear, let him hear;" "Simple multiplication teacheth to repeat," &c. But the custom of the present day is decidedly (8.) against the usage. (9.)

546. The Scriptures abound (10.) with instances of the use of the pronoun ye for you, as, "Ye are the salt of the earth;" but it is scarcely to be met with in any standard works of modern date.

547. The following conjugation accords with the ancient usage of the verb.

RULE VI.

The nominative case governs the verb in number and person.

RULE VII.

A verb must agree with its nominative case in number and person.

RULE VIII.

Active-transitive verbs govern the objective case.

EXERCISES IN PARSING.

553. We say, "I have seen," "I have seen," and "I am seen," using the participle seen instead of the verb see: hence,

Note VI. We should use participles, only, after have, and had, and the verb to be.

EXERCISES IN SYNTAX.

"John has written his copy."

554. Has written is an irregular active-transitive verb, from the verb to write—"Pres. write; Imperf. wrote; Perf. part. written."

1. I have written; 2. You have written; 3. He or John has written"—found in the indicative mood, perfect tense, third person, singular number, and agrees with John, by Rule VII.

John, copy, and his, are parsed as before.

XLVII. GOVERNMENT OF THE INFINITIVE.

555. When I say, "John begins to read," to read is a verb in the infinitive mood; and it follows, as you perceive, the verb begins: hence we say that it is governed by begins.

"He is beginning to read." Here, the infinitive follows the participle beginning, it is, therefore, governed by beginning.

"He is eager to learn." Here, the infinitive follows the adjective eager; we therefore say that it is governed by eager.

"He has an opportunity to learn." Here, the infinitive, to learn is governed by the noun opportunity, because it follows the noun.

In like manner the infinitive may be governed by pronouns; as, "There is a fine opportunity for him to learn:" hence,

RULE XII.
The infinitive mood may be governed by verbs, participles, adjectives, nouns, and pronouns.

EXERCISES IN SYNTAX.
"James begins to learn."

556. To learn is a regular transitive verb—"Pres. learn; Imperf. learn; Perf. part. learned"—made in the infinitive mood, present tense, and governed by begins, agreeably to Rule XII.

"John saw the man strike (1.) the boy."
"The instructor made him submit."
"They need not proceed to such haste."
"See (2.) the blind beggar dance."

Note VII. The infinitive mood is sometimes governed by conjunctions or adverbs; as "The summit of a mountain so high as to be invisible."

XLVIII.

557. We have before seen, that participles partake of the nature of two parts of speech, namely verbs and adjectives. One point of resemblance which participles have to adjectives is in referring to some noun in the sentence in which they are used; as "The sun is setting." Here, the participle setting is said to refer to the noun sun. Hence,

RULE XI.

Participles refer to nouns.

The present participle, when used as a noun, often has the definite article the before it, and the preposition of after it; as, "By the observing of truth, you will command respect." With equal propriety, however, it may be said, "By observing truth," i.e., omitting both the article and the preposition. If we use the article without the preposition, or the preposition without the article, the expression will appear awkward: hence,

Note VIII. The definite article the should be used before, and the preposition of after, participial nouns, or they should both be omitted.

XLIX. OF THE AUXILIARY VERBS.

564. The verbs have, be, will and do, when they are unconnected with a principal verb, expressed or understood, are not auxiliaries, but principal verbs; as, "We have enough;" "I am grateful;" "He will do it to be so;" "They do as they please." In this view, they also have their auxiliaries; as, "I shall have enough;" "I will be grateful," &c.

565. The peculiar force of the several auxiliaries will appear from the following account of them.

566. Do and did mark the action itself, or the time of it, with greater energy and positiveness; as, "I do speak truth;" "I did respect him;" "Here am I, for thou didst call me." They are of great use in negative (1.) sentences; as, "I do not fear;" "I did not write." They are almost universally employed in asking questions; as, "Does he learn?" "Did he not write?" They sometimes also supply (2.) the place of another verb, and make the repetition of it, in the same or a subsequent sentence, unnecessary; as, "You attend not to your studies as he does;" (i. e. "as he attends," &c.) "I shall come, if I can; but if I do not, please to excuse me;" (i. e. "if I come not.")

567. May and might express the possibility or liberty of doing a thing; can and could, the power; as, "I may rain;" "I may write or read;" "He might have improved more than he has;" "He can write much better than he could last year."

568. Must is sometimes called in for a helper, and denotes necessity; as,

(1.) Denying. (2.) To fill up.
ENGLISH GRAMMAR.

We must speak the truth, wherever we do speak, and we must not be made to do so.

The first person singular and plural. It is the only nature of the present tense, the only nature of the past tense, and the only nature of the future tense. We shall see the difference between these tenses, and we shall see the difference between these tenses, and we shall see the difference between these tenses.

The present tense, in the first person, simply foretells: in the second and third persons, it generally signifies the present; as, "I shall do so," we shall see at home, "and such, or you shall inherit the kingdom." The following passage is not translated, but according to the discussion on the meaning of the words, and not to the meaning of the words, the meaning of the words, and I shall see in the meaning of the words, and I shall see in the meaning of the words, the meaning of the words, and I shall see in the meaning of the words, the meaning of the words, the meaning of the words.

These observations respecting the importance of the verbs will apply to many other cases of expression, just as much as they will apply to the case of the verbs, just as much as they will apply to the case of the verbs, just as much as they will apply to the case of the verbs, just as much as they will apply to the case of the verbs, just as much as they will apply to the case of the verbs, just as much as they will apply to the case of the verbs.

When the verb is put in the sentence, the meaning of these circumstances is entirely different; as, "I shall do so," "I shall see at home," "and such, or you shall inherit the kingdom." In the latter part of the sentence, in the latter part of the sentence, in the latter part of the sentence, in the latter part of the sentence, in the latter part of the sentence, in the latter part of the sentence, in the latter part of the sentence.

The first person singular and the plural, or the singular and the plural.

Do and have are sometimes used as principal verbs, according to the following:

I. The first person singular and plural.

Do. I do.

Have. I have.

I shall do. I shall have.

I shall have done. I shall have and.

II. The second person singular.

Do. I may or can do.

Have. I may or can have.

I should, would, or should have.

I may or can have done.

Would, or should, or should have.

III. The third person singular.

Do. I do.

Have. I have.

I may or can have.

I should, or will have.

IV. The third person plural.

Do. Do you, or Do you have.

Have you, or Do you have.

(1) To ask the truth. (2) To show. (3) To express. (4) To name. (5) To carry. (6) To what happens. (7) To name. (8) To exchange one for the other. (9) In the first place.

L. OF DEFECTIVE VERBS

379. Defective verbs are those which are used only in some of the moods and tenses.

380. The following are the principal ones:

<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th></th>
<th></th>
<th></th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>May.</td>
<td>Might.</td>
<td>(Wanting).</td>

<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Must.</td>
<td>Must.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>Ought.</td>
<td>Ought.</td>
<td></td>
</tr>
</tbody>

Of these, ought and must, you perceive, are not varied.

381. Ought and must are always used as principal verbs. Ought is the same in the imperfect tense as in the present, and is always followed by an infinitive; as, "He ought to study;" "He ought to have read." In this last example, ought is in the imperfect; and in the first, it is in the present. Thus we determine by the infinitive, which follows the verb, thus: when the present infinitive follows ought, ought is in the present tense; but when the perfect infinitive follows it, it is in the imperfect tense.

382. In English, verbs are often used both in a transitive and intransitive, or neuter signification. Thus, to eat, when it signifies to eat an apple, or let, is an active transitive verb; but when it signifies to grow, dull, or insipid, it is an intransitive verb.

383. A neuter or intransitive verb, by the addition of a preposition, may become a compound active-transitive verb: as, to smile is intransitive; it cannot, therefore, be followed by an objective case, nor be changed into the passive form. We cannot say, "She smiled him," or, "He was smiled;" but we say, very properly, "She smiled on him;" "He was smiled on by her."

384. Prepositions affect the meaning of verbs in different ways. To cast means to throw: as, "He cast a stone at her." To cast up, however, means to compute; as, "He casts up his accounts." In all instances in which the preposition follows the verb, and modifies its meaning, it should be considered a part of the verb, and be so treated in parsing.

385. There are some verbs, which, although they admit an objective case after them, still do not indicate the least degree of action: as, "I resemble my father." This seeming inconsistency may be easily reconciled by reflecting that, in all such cases, the verb has a direct reference to its object. Of this nature are the verbs see, resemble, own, have, &c.

386. Some neuter or intransitive verbs admit of a passive form, and are thence called neuter passive verbs: as, "John is home to-night." Here goes is an intransitive verb. But in the sentence, "John is gone home," he goes is a neuter passive verb. Again, in the phrase, "William comes," comes is an intransitive verb, and in the phrase, "William is come," is come is a neuter passive verb.

3. "Charles resembles his parents." "He retains his place." "She smiles sweetly." "She smiled on John." "His father does not hesitate to trust him."

4. "The merchant casts up his accounts often." "John was smiled on by fortune in every undertaking." "William has gone to visit his parents." "Mary was gone before her mother came." "Susan has gone."

II. OF ADVERBS.

Adverbs are words joined to verbs, participles, adjectives, and other adverbs, to qualify them.

Expressions like the following, namely, a few days ago, long since, none at all, at length, in vain, by no means, a great deal, &c., are denominated adverbial phrases, when they are used to qualify verbs or participles, by expressing the manner, time or degree of action.

The definite article the is frequently placed before adverbs of the comparative and superlative degrees, to give the expression more force; as, "The more he walks, the better he feels." When the article is used in this sense, both the article and adverb may be reckoned an adverbial phrase, and be so considered in parsing.

You have doubtless noticed that most words ending in -ly are adverbs. The reason of this is that -ly is a contraction of the adverb like; thus, from man-like we form manly; gentleman-like is a contraction of gentleman-like.—Hence,

If you meet with a word ending in -ly, implying in its signification the idea of like, you may conclude at once that it is an adverb.

RULE IX.

Adverbs qualify verbs, participles, adjectives, and other adverbs.

EXERCISES IN SYNTAX.

"In vain we look for perfect happiness."

(1.) What stands for "that which," or, "the thing which." Apply Rules V., VI. and VIII.

LIII. OF PREPOSITIONS.

595. Prepositions are used to connect words, and to show the relation between them.

596. We not unfrequently meet with verbs compounded of a preposition and verb; as, "to uphold," "to invest," "to overlook," and this composition sometimes gives a new sense to the verb; as, "to understand," "to withdraw." But the preposition more frequently occurs after the verb, and separate from it; as, "to cast up," "to fall on." The sense of the verb, in this case, is also materially affected by the preposition.

598. The prepositions after, before, above, beneath, and several others, sometimes appear to be adverbs, and may be so considered; as, "They had their reward after," "He did not live before," "He dwells above," but if the noun time or place be added, they lose their adverbial form; as, "He did not live before that time," i.e.

599. There is a peculiar propriety in distinguishing the correct use of the different prepositions. For illustration, we will take the following sentences:

(1.) A few days ago—an adverbial phrase.

*For the adjective good, we should use the adverb well, according to Note IX.

+ Reads agrees with John, understood, and is, therefore, connected with writes by the conjunction but, agreeably to Rule XI.
ENGLISH GRAMMAR.

"He walks with a staff by moonlight." He was taken by stratagem, and killed with a sword." Put the one preposition for the other, and say, "He walks by a staff with moonlight." "He was taken with stratagem, and killed by a sword;" and it will appear that they differ in signification more than one, at first view, would be apt to imagine.

RULE II.

Prepositions govern the objective case.

EXERCISES IN SYNTAX.

"John lives within his income."

600. Within is a preposition.

Income is a common noun, of the third person, singular number, neuter gender, objective case, and governed by within according to Rule II.

SENTENCES TO BE WRITTEN.

601. Will you fill up the following sentences with suitable prepositions to make sense? "John was — the house when he was seized — a fit." "The busy bee — summer provides food — the approaching winter — the prudence — a rational being."

Will you supply the objects to the following? "James was catching —.

"He was beating —." "He supports —."

Will you supply agents or nominative cases to the following? — was running, — was dancing.

Will you supply verbs in the following? "A dutiful child — his parents."

"Grammar — us — correctly.

Will you compose two or more sentences about boys? One, about whites? One, about slaves? One, about poor? One, about parents? One, about brothers? One, about sisters? One, about uncle? One, about aunt?

LIII. OF CONJUNCTIONS.

602. A conjunction is a word that is chiefly used to connect sentences, so as, out of two or more sentences, to make but one.

603. Relative pronouns, as well as conjunctions, serve to connect sentences; as, "Blessed is the man who feareth the Lord."

604. Conjunctions very often unite sentences when they appear to unite only words; as, in the following sentences: "Duty and interest forbid vicious indulgences." "Wisdom or love governs us." Each of these forms of expression

(1.) The sense is, "He made the moon." Moon, then, is in the objective case, governed by made understood, and connected with sun, by Rule XI.
ENGLISH GRAMMAR.

contains two sentences, namely, the first, "Duty forbids visions in his gaze;" the second, "Wisdom governs us!" "Duty governs us."

RULE XI.
Conjunctions connect verbs of the same mood and tense, and nouns or pronouns of the same case.

EXERCISES IN SYNTAX.
665. "William writes and ciphers."

And is a correlative conjunction.

Ciphers is a regular active-intransitive verb, from the verb to cipher.—Present, ciphers; Imperf. ciphered; Past part. ciphers. 1. He ciphers; 2. You ciphers; 3. He or William ciphers.—Made in the indicative mood, present tense, third person singular, and agrees with William, understood, and is connected to writes by the conjunction and, agreeably to Rule XI.

"John ciphers rapidly, and ciphers correctly. Through he is bribed, yet he is not too speedy."
"If we contend about tribes, and firmly maintain our opinions, we shall gain but few friends." He wished that he circulated the report.

SENTENCES TO BE WRITTEN

1. Will you compose a sentence containing the conjunction if? One, containing and? As many sentences as there are conjunctions which follow; each sentence containing one. Although, Unless, For, Because, Etc.

2. Will you compose a sentence about Cipher? One, about Calhoun? One, about Homer? One, about William? One, about George, etc.?

LIV OF INTERJECTIONS.

INTERJECTIONS are words thrown in between the parts of sentences, to express the passions or sudden feelings of the speaker.

We do not say, "Ah, I!" "O, I!" but, "Ah, me!" "Oh, me!" using the objective case after the interjection. The pronoun here spoken of, you perceive, is of the first person; hence.

Note X. Pronouns of the first person are put in the objective case, after the interjections Oh! O! 'ah!' &c.

We say, "O thou persecutor!" "Oh, ye hypocrites!" "O thou who dwellest," &c.

Note XI. The interjections O 'ah!' and ah! require the nominative case of pronouns in the second person.
ENGLISH GRAMMAR.

EXERCISES IN SYNTAX.

610. "Ah, me! I must perish."

Ah is an interjection.

Me is a personal pronoun, of the first person, singular, objective case, and governed by ah, agreeably to Note X.

"O, thou (1.) who hast murdered thy friend!"

"Ah! unhappy (2.) thou, who art dead!"

"O, thou who hearest prayer!"

"Ah, me! must I endure all this?"

SENTENCES TO BE WRITTEN.

611. Will you compose a sentence containing alas? One, containing oh? One, about volcanoes? One, about lakes? One, about islands? One, about Webster, the statesman? One, about a good scholar? One, about a poor scholar? One, about a good instructor?

LV OF THE AGREEMENT OF NOUNS.

612. Apposition, in grammar, signifies the putting of two nouns in the same case.

613. When I say, "John, the mechanic, has come," I am speaking of only one person; the two nouns John and mechanic, both meaning or referring to the same person; consequently they are put, by apposition, in the same case: hence,

RULE XV.

When two or more nouns, in the same sentence, signify the same thing, they are put, by apposition, in the same case.

EXERCISES IN SYNTAX.

614. "Webster the statesman has left us."

Statesman is a common noun, masculine gender, third person, singular number, nominative case, and put in apposition with Webster, by Rule XV

"I, I am the man who committed the deed."

(1.) For thou, apply Note XI. (2.) Agree with thou, by Rule IV.

(3.) Belongs to whom, by Rule IV. (4.) Apply Rule IV

(5.) Myself is a compound personal pronoun, first person, singular, nominative case, and put in apposition with I, by Rule XV
Remark 1.—For the same reason that one noun agrees with another in case, it agrees with it in number and person also.

"I, Alexander, by the grace of God. " We, the representatives of the people of these colonies, do make this declaration."

Remark 2.—When one noun describes or qualifies another, the one so qualifying becomes an adjective in sense, and may be so considered in parsing. Accordingly, Tremont, in the passage, "Tremont House," is an adjective belonging to Rem., by Rule IV.

EXERCISES IN SYNTAX.

"The Marlborough Hotel is situated in Washington street." "John Boson was in town yesterday." "The firm of Messrs. Williams & Sons. has broken his leg."

Remark 3.—When the nouns which refer to the same person or thing are separated by verbs, as, "Webster is a statesman," it is customary to apply one or more of the following rules:

1. Any verb may have the same case after it as before it, when both words refer to the same thing.
2. The verb to be, through all its variations, has the same case after it as that which precedes it.
3. Passive verbs of motion, suffering, etc., have the same case after them as before them.
4. Never verbs have the same case after them as before them.

Remark 4.—The foregoing rules, in the opinion of the writer, are wholly unnecessary, tending merely to confuse the mind of the learner by requiring him to make a distinction in form, when there exists none in principle. In corroboration of this fact, Mr. Murray has the following remark:—

"By these examples it appears, that the verb to be has no government of case, but serves in all its forms as a conductor to the cases, so that the two cases, which, in the construction of the sentence, are the next before and after it, must always be alike. Perhaps this subject will be more intelligible by observing that the words, in the cases preceding and following the verb to be, may be said to be in apposition to each other. Thus, in the sentence, "I understood it to be him," the words it and him are in apposition; that is, they refer to the same thing, and are in the same case."

"He walks a queen." (1.) "He was named John." (1.)

"She was named John." (1.)

"Susan took him to be Mary." (1.) "He was named John." (1.)

2.

"We at first took it to be her, but afterwards were convinced that it was not she." (1.)

"I took him to be John," (2.) "Colin." (1.)"
ENGLISH GRAMMAR.

"He is not the person who (a) he was."
"I understood it to be him (b) who is."

EXERCISES IN SYNTAX.

622. "John, will you assist me?"

John is a proper noun of the second person, singular number, masculine gender, and nominative case independent, according to Rule XVI.
ENGLISH GRAMMAR.

1. "My lords, the time has come when we must take some decisive measures." "Gentlemen of the jury, James, I study at your school." "William, do try to get your lesson today!"

2. "Boys, attend to your lessons." "Girls, come into school." "Did you speak to me, girls?"

LVII. OF NOUNS IN THE CASE ABSOLUTE.

625. In the phrase, "The sun being risen, we set sail," the first clause of the sentence, namely, "The sun being risen," has nothing to do with the remainder: the noun and participle may, therefore, when taken together, be said to be in the nominative case independent, but as we have already one case of this nature, we shall, for the sake of making a distinction, call this the noun joined with a participle the nominative case absolute. Hence.

RULE XVII.

A noun or pronoun before a participle, and independent of the rest of the sentence, is in the nominative case absolute.

---

EXERCISES IN SYNTAX.

"The sun being risen, we set sail." "Wellington having returned to England, tranquility was restored to France." "Egypt being conquered, Alexander returned to Syria." "Shame being lost, all virtue was lost." "The soldiers retreating, victory was lost." "The sun being risen, we set sail." "The conditions being observed, the bargain was a mutual benefit." "Him only excepted, who was a murderer." "Him being destroyed, the remaining robbers made their escape." "The sun being risen, we set sail." "The soldiers retreating, victory was lost." "The condition being observed, the bargain was a mutual benefit."

LVIII. OF THE INFINITIVE MOOD.

Note XII.—A verb in the infinitive mood is sometimes placed independently: as, "To be frank, I own I have injured you."

1. Rule XVI. 2. Imperative mood, and agrees with thou or you understood, by Rule VIII.
3. In the nominative case absolute with being risen, by Rule XVII.
4. Rule XIII. 5. When a noun is in the case absolute, it should be in the nominative case. Else should therefore be is, by Rule XVII.
EXERCISES IN SYNTAX.

"To confess the truth, I was in fault." "To tell the plain truth, I persuaded him to stay." "To display his power, he oppressed his soldiers." "To convince you, I will continue here till you return."

"To play is pleasant." What is pleasant? "To play." The infinitive to play is, then, the nominative case to is. "Thou shalt not kill, is required of all men." What is required? "Thou shalt not kill." The verb is required, then, agrees with "Thou shalt not kill," as its nominative. Hence,

NOTE XIII.—The infinitive mood, or part of a sentence, is frequently put as the nominative case to a verb of the third person singular.

EXERCISES IN SYNTAX.

"To excel requires much exertion." "To abandon friends will sink a man's character." "To practice religion is our duty." "To write a fair hand requires practice." "Thou shalt not kill, is the command of God." "To practise virtue will be productive of happiness." "To do good to our enemies, is not natural to our hearts."

1. The infinitive mood, or a part of a sentence, is frequently the object of a transitive verb; as, "Boys love to play." What do boys love? "To play." The object of love, then, is to play. "Children do not consider how much has been done for them by their parents." Consider what? "How much has been done for them by their parents;" including for the object of the verb the whole phrase in italics.

NOTE XIV.—The infinitive mood or part of a sentence, may have an adjective or participle agreeing with it, when there is no noun, either expressed or understood, to which the adjective may belong.

EXERCISES IN SYNTAX.

"To see the sun is pleasant." "Defraud not thy neighbor, is binding on all." "To practice virtue will be productive of happiness." "To do good to our enemies, is not natural to our hearts."

Remarks.—Pleasant agrees with, "to see the sun," by Note XIV. Binding agrees with, "Defraud not thy neighbor," by the same authority. To is apply Rule VII.; to sun, Rule VIII.; to the infinitive to see, Note XIII.

SENTENCES TO BE WRITTEN.

Will you compose one or more sentences having an infinitive governed by a participle? One, using an infinitive after a noun? One, describing the manner of playing ball? One, or more, on the manner of playing tag? One, on the duty of children to mind their parents? One, or more, on industry? One, on the business you intend to pursue for life?

LIX.

In the phrase, "John and James are here," the sense is, that "John and James are both here," two persons are therefore spoken of, which renders it necessary to use the plural verb are, to agree with two nouns which individually are singular: hence,
RULE XVIII.

Two or more nouns or pronouns, of the singular number, connected together by AND, either expressed or understood, must have verbs, nouns, and pronouns, agreeing with them in the plural number.

EXERCISES IN SYNTAX.

“William and James run.” “John and Joseph can get their lessons.”
“Mary and Harriet study; and they will therefore excel.” “Time and tide wait for no man.”
“You and I are in fault.” “My coat and pantaloons were made by Watson.”

“William and Thomas say they intend to study Latin.”

Remarks.—William is one of the nominatives to the verb run. James is in the nominative case to the verb run, and is connected with the noun William, by Rule XI. Run agrees with William and James, by Rule XVIII.

SENTENCES TO BE PARSED AND CORRECTED.

“Mary and her cousin has come.” “The farmer and his son is in town.”
“You and I makes progress in our studies.” “Susan and her sister is deceitful.”
“Life and health both uncertain.” “William and John both wish a good hand.”

Remarks.—For has come, we should read have come, that the verb may be plural, when it has two nominatives connected by and, according to Rule XVIII.

Exception 1.—When and connects two or more nouns in the singular, which refer to the same person or thing, the verb must be singular: as, “Thay, the philosopher and naturalist, has greatly enriched science.”

SENTENCES TO BE PARSED AND CORRECTED.

“That superficial scholar and critic have given new evidence of his misguided judgment.” “Mr. Cooper, the sailor and novelist, visit La Fayette, the patriot and philanthropist.”

“Time and tide wait for no man.”

Remarks.—For visit, we should read visits, because reference is had to each person, individually considered, which, in respect to the verb, is the same in effect as if one person only was spoken of.

Note. XV.—Every is sometimes associated with a plural noun, in which case the verb must be singular: as, “Every hundred years constitutes a century.”

SENTENCES TO BE PARSED AND CORRECTED.

“Every twenty-four hours afford us the vicissitudes of day and night.”

Remarks.—Aford, in the example above, is a violation of the note: it should be afforded, in the singular number. The reason of this is, that “every twenty-four hours” signifies a single period of time, and is therefore, in reality singular.
Note XVI.—A verb in the plural will agree with a collective noun in the singular, when a part only of the individuals are meant; as, "The council were divided in their sentiments." When the noun expresses the idea of unity, the verb should be singular; as, "The council was composed wholly of farmers."

Remarks.—In the foregoing example, we use the plural verb were divided, because we refer to the individuals composing the council; but if no allusion of this sort had been made, we should have used the singular verb, according to the common rule; as, "The council is composed wholly of farmers."

We apply to council, in the first example, Note XVI.; to were divided, the same note; and to council, and was composed in the second example Rules VI. and VII.

636. Exercises in Syntax.

"The council were divided in their sentiments."  "My people do not consider."

"A part of the men were murdered."  "The multitude eagerly pursue pleasure as their chief good."

637. Sentences to be parsed and corrected.

"My people doth not consider."  "The committee was divided in their sentiments, and has referred the business to a general meeting."

"The people rejoices in that which should give it sorrow."  "The multitude rushes to certain destruction."

LX.

638. Negative means denying; and affirmative, asserting or declaring positively. A sentence in which something is denied is a negative one, and a sentence in which something is affirmed or positively asserted, is an affirmative one. "Vice degrades us," is an affirmative sentence, and "Labor does not injure us," is a negative one. Not, nothing, none at all, by no means, no, in no wise, neither, no, none, etc., are negative terms.

The phrase, "I have nothing," has one negative, and means, "I have not any thing." The phrase, "I have not nothing," cannot mean the same as "I have nothing," but must mean, on the contrary, "I have something." This last, you perceive, is an affirmative sentence, and signifies the same as the foregoing one, "I have not nothing." Two negatives, therefore, are equal to an affirmative. Hence,

Rule XII.

Two negatives in the same sentence, are equivalent to an affirmative.

639. Sentences to be parsed and corrected.

"He spends all the day in idleness, and I cannot prevail on him to do nothing."  "Do (1.) honest, nor (2.) take (3.) no shape nor semblance of disguise."

"He cannot get no employment in town."  "He is so (4.) indolent, that he will not do nothing."

"I did not say nothing."

(1.) Be agrees with thou or you understood, by Rule VII.

(2.) For nor, read and.

(3.) Take is in the imperative mood, and agrees with thou or you understood and is therefore connected to be, according to Rule XI.

(4.) Adverb.
"I cannot by no means consent." "He cannot do nothing acceptable to John."
"I shall not take no interest in the affair." "I never studied no grammar."

Remarks.—For nothing, in the above examples, read anything, in accordance with Rule XIX.

PROMICIOUS EXERCISES IN SYNTAX.
"Deep rivers move with silent majesty; but small brooks are noisy." "Power discovers the disposition of man."
"Deeds are fruits; words are but leaves." "Quarrels are easily begun, but with difficulty ended."
"It is a bad horse indeed that will not carry his own pretended" "Force without forecast is of little worth.
"The boy never looks up to him who thrashes down the acorns." "Rome was not built in one day."
"Add not trouble to the grief-worn heart." "In youth and strength think of old age and weakness."
"If the council be good, it is no matter who gives it." "To say well is stood, but to do well is better."
"By others' faults wise men correct their own." "No fear should deter us from doing good."
"When the world says you are wise and good, ask yourself if it be true." "Pride, perceiving Humility honorable, often borrows her cloak."
"Sin and misery are constant companions." "Say what is well, but do what is better."

SENTENCES TO BE WRITTEN.
Will you compose one sentence describing the business of an instructor? One, the business of a doctor? One, of a dentist? One, of a surgeon? One, of a lawyer? One, of a merchant? One, of a fisherman? One, of a grocer? One, of an apothecary? One, of a legislator? One, of a judge? One, of a colonel? One, of a captain? One, of a general? One, of an agent in a factory? One, of the director of a bank?

LXI.

When I say, "He taught me grammar," I mean, "He taught grammar to me." Grammar, then, is the object of the verb, and me is governed by the preposition to, understood. In the first example, we have two objective cases after the verb taught: and since there are many instances like the preceding, in which transitive verbs are followed by two objective cases—hence the following,

RULE XX.

Two objective cases, the one of a person, and the other of a thing, may follow transitive verbs of asking, teaching, giving, &c.; a preposition being understood.

"He taught me grammar."

Remark 1.—In the foregoing example, me and grammar are both governed taught, according to Rule XX.

EXAMPLES IN SYNTAX.
"He taught me grammar." "My instructor gave me a valuable book, for my attention to study."
"William asked me some questions." "She forbade him the presence of the emperor."
"My mother wrote me a precious letter in the mouth of May." "The French denied him the privilege of an American citizen."
"They allowed him his seat in Congress." "John gave me a detailed account of the whole transaction."
The natural construction of the passive voice requires the object of the active verb to become the nominative to the passive verb; as, "He taught me grammar;" "Grammar was taught me." In some few instances, just the reverse takes place; as, "I was taught grammar;" here the object, grammar, is placed after the verb: we therefore derive the following,

RULE XXI.

An objective case may follow passive verbs of asking, teaching, and some others, as, "I was taught grammar."

Apply to Rule VI.; to was taught, Rule VII.; to grammar, Rule XXI.

EXERCISES IN SYNTAX.

"John taught me music." "I was taught grammar." "The presence of the emperor was forbidden Theresa." "Reading is taught in almost every school."

RULE XXII.

Home and nouns signifying which way, how far, how long, or time when, &c., are in the objective case; a preposition being understood.

EXERCISES IN SYNTAX.

"He came home last May." "Susan rides out every day." "William sleeps comfortably all night." "John was absent from home six years." "James lived six years at Richmond, twelve years at Shreveport."

"He ran a mile."

"He is like his brother." "John behaves like a man in a violent rage."

"He is unlike any other mortal."

NOTE XVII.—After the words like and unlike, the preposition to or unto is frequently understood; as, "He is like his father;" that is, "like to his father." "She is unlike her sister;" that is, "unlike to her sister."

"William unlike his father, falsified his word." "He is unlike any other mortal."

NOTE XVIII.—Nouns signifying duration, extension, quantity, quality or valuation, are in the objective case, without any governing word. The following are examples:

"Charles studies six hours every day." "John rode that way."
ENGLISH GRAMMAR.

"The Atlantic ocean is three thousand miles wide."

"William's knife is worth eighteen cents."

"For that article, which is six inches long and from twenty to thirty feet in height, he cannot always get fifty cents." (The noun article is governed according to Note XVIII.

NOTE XIX.—The conjunction as, after such, many and same, is generally considered a relative pronoun; as in the following examples:

"He receives into his school as many scholars as I, apply." (Apply Note XVIII.

"Our instructor, who is scrupulously exact in the execution of justice, punishes severely all such as disobey his commands."

Remarks.—1. As is a conjunction used here as a relative, according to the Note preceding; of the third person plural, masculine gender, agreeing with scholars, according to Rule V; and in the nominative case to whom, according to Rule VI.

Note XX.—The conjunction than seems to have the force of a preposition before the relative whom, in a sentence where a comparison is made, as follows:

"Which, when Zechariah perceived, "A wiser king never reigned than he," that is "than he was."

SENTENCES TO BE WRITTEN.

Will you compose a sentence having a proper example under Rule III. IV. V. VI. VII. VIII. IX. X. XI. XII. XIII. XIV. XV. XVI. XVII. XVIII. XIX. XX. XXI. XXII. — 2. Will you construct a sentence descriptive of the calamities arising from fire one, on the character of our furniture one, on the effects of rain one, on the utility of wood one, on the usefulness of the one one, on fields?

"A youth, unknown to fortune and to fame, rests here his head upon the lap of earth."

"When, young, life's journey I began,
The glittering prospect charmed my eyes;
I saw along the extended plain,
Joy after joy successive rise:
But soon I found 't was all a dream,
And learned the fond pursuit to shun,
Where few can reach the purposed aim,
And thousands daily are undone."
