Since its foundation Emory College has had many hardships to face and many obstacles to overcome. Four wars have been waged during the life of the College and Emory men were in the forefront of each from its very beginning. During the Civil War the College supported her beloved South whole-heartedly, giving her buildings to be used as hospitals, and her sons to serve in the army. Due to the greatly depleted student body and disturbed state of affairs College activities were almost entirely done away with, but the spirit of the institution survived these trials without a blemish. The Mexican and Spanish wars did not strike the College so badly, though she answered loyally to each call.

At last, after years of steady growth, the idea of the University of the South was conceived, and Emory University was founded. Just as the plans were beginning to be carried out the great World War commenced, but despite all adverse conditions the University has continued in her steady progress.

Emory has at all times been a place of training for world leaders. She has sent forth ministers and missionaries who are spreading Christianity in all parts of the earth. From her halls have come numerous educators, legislators and jurists, who have brought honor to her name. Her brave sons have also won undying glory on the field of battle. The activity most interesting to the younger generation is athletics. Emory has had many able athletes, though she has always stood against intercollegiate athletics, but unless some better form of athletic competition is developed, she will, in time, carry away her honors here as elsewhere.

Emory has at all times been a leader among the colleges of the South, but when she moves to Atlanta this fall she will enter upon the brightest part of her history. Starting as a small school, she has progressed to such an extent that her influence which, at first, was confined to the State, spread rapidly throughout the South, and by the time she reaches her full stride, will be of national importance.

'TIS DONE, the Campus of nineteen-nineteen is here, and though our trials and delays have been many, still we are proud of the work and feel that it is a credit to the University and the board of editors. Work on the annual was delayed from September till January on account of unsettled conditions, and only through the great spirit of co-operation of the student body this year’s Campus was made a reality. The student activities were interrupted by the Students Army Training Corps, but we have portrayed them as best we could, and feel grateful over the results. Whether we have succeeded or not, YOU are the judge, and we are sure that you will criticise this publication in the same spirit that you have shown toward other college activities.

Cupid Declares War

Straight out into "No Man's Land,"
With my heart I strode;
The greenness of grass was sprinkled
With lilies along the road.

The gray mist uprising among the
Stately pines and bramble, drew
A panoramic cover o'er the way,
Of lovely mid-year hue.

'Twas yester-week, methinks—ah, no,
It seems but a day,
So radiant was all nature,
So lovely was the way.

So, proudly walked I, just my Heart and I, alone,
Not knowing where I walked,
Satisfied to roam.

As I was speechlessly admiring how
God had adorned the field,
All Nature called to me, "Behold,
Before our queen you must kneel!"

So, as I kneeled in "No Man's Land"
Before you, maiden fair,
Cupid started the warring game
Which was, I think, unfair.

Fate pierced my heart with the arrow of love;
He took me unaware:
Isn't it interesting, one wants to fight
When Cupid should war declare—

BUT

Dearest, I am tired of war,
I surrender on terms like these:
"I am heartless—you have my heart—
Keep it, won't you please?"

Senior Class History

How different must be the history of the present Senior Class from the career predicted for us by the worthy prophet of the Freshman Class of 1916. At that time, with all the pleasures and trials of college life ahead of us, we had visions of a great, strong class fighting our way as an undivided unit through the wilderness of mechanics, analyt., and other seemingly impregnable fortifications of our friendly enemies, the faculty, and finally reaching the final goal of all our efforts, a bit of sheepskin labeled "DIP".

How different, say we, has been our history from this prophetic vision. Each year has witnessed the departure of some of our dear class-mates, and among these some of the strongest characters in the class. Some heard the call of their country for service in the army and navy, and went forth to fight gloriously for the Stars and Stripes. Others listened to the voice of the siren when their thoughts turned the way of most young men's thoughts in the spring, and followed the paths of matrimony. Still others went forth into the business world and have been making good there, from all that we can hear. And this little handful of us that is left will soon be with them for our college days are fast drawing to a close. As Freshmen we have longed for the time when we might take our seat in the Allen Memorial Church and listen to the final words of counsel imparted to us by our Chancellor, the Bishop. As Sophomores we did not have time to think of things so serious—we were too busy trying to make everybody believe that we were really the essential element in the composition of Emory College. As Juniors, we could do nothing but labor with the terrible obstacles along the rocky road—for a dip seemed yet a long way off in the hazy distance, and every five or below caused the mirage to move farther and farther away. Now, as Seniors, our hardest work and our greatest joy, the joy of happy college friendships and associations which we will never forget, are behind us. We go forth to face the world, and to show the world that an Emory man is a man who is going to make good.

We do not claim that this is an accurate and detailed history of the Senior Class. The story of our achievements and failures is written in detail in the memory of each and every Senior, and a recapitulation of these details would be even more monotonous than the foregoing story has been. Among other points that have been shown to us during our sojourn here is the fact that "ideas, not facts, are the things that really count". As the time draws nearer and nearer when we shall "call it a day", and we realize that our college life is nearly done, we also realize:

That pleasures are like poppies spread,
You seize the bloom, its bloom is shed;
Or like the snowfall in the river,
A moment white—then gone forever

Jas. L. Graham, Historian

CHARLES KNOX BIVINGS, B.Ph.
JAKIN, GA.

Kappa Alpha Fraternity; D. V. S.; Cum Laude Degree; Class President '18-'19; Honor Roll '18-'19; Owl Social Club; Central Board '19; Chairman Athletic Committee '19; Junior and Senior Commencement Speaker; Secretary and Treasurer Class 17; Phi Gamma Chapter Alpha Phi Epsilon Literary Society; President Phi Gamma '19; Secretaries Phi Gamma '18; Sophomore-Freshman Debate '17; Spring Term Debate '18; Athletic Committee '17-'18; Football '16-'17-'18; Captain Football '17; All-Emory Football '16, '18; Captain All-Emory Football '18; Baseball '18; Second Lieutenant U. S. Infantry.

"Biv" is one of the strongest characters on the campus. With the strength of his personality he has drawn around him a bunch of associates who really count for something at this 20th Century Sleepy Hollow. Both an athlete and a "shoot-'em-up," he is one of our star pupils.

PIERCE GROOVER BLITCH, B.Ph.
EASTMAN, GA.

Alpha Tau Omega Fraternity; Owls Social Club; Pan-Hellenic Council '19; Phi Gamma Chapter of Alpha Phi Epsilon Literary Society; Secretary and Treasurer Pan-Hellenic Council '19; Secretary Phi Gamma '19; Censor Morum Phi Gamma '18; Editor-in-Chief of Annual '19; Basketball '18-'19; Y. M. C. A.; Lieutenant Cadet Corps '18; Enlisted Plattsburg, N. Y., July 18, '18; Entered S. A. T. C. at Emory College October 1, '18; Sergeant S. A. T. C.

Pierce prides himself on being a member of the Ministers' Sons' Club. Not that he is a desperado, but rather that he is a typical parsonage product. He is a splendid student and has left an enviable record for little Pierce, Jr., to hold up as a beacon light to guide his collegiate footsteps—(should there be a little Pierce, Jr.)
"Trifle not with me! I am a man of business."

Lovett had the misfortune to be named after Madam's fiery steed, but unlike that prehistoric creature he is modern in every branch of his college work. He likewise plays a mean game of baseball, and has so mixed work with pleasure that we feel sure that college life has meant more to him than four years of incipient otiosity—if you know what that means!

ALEXANDER BURNS ELIZER, B.Ph.
HILLSBORO, GA.

Left College June, '17; Enlisted 121st Infantry; Received Commission Second Lieutenant U. S. Infantry; Made Lieutenant Machine Gun Instructor September, '18; Honorable Discharge December, '18; Re-entered College January, '19; Few Literary Society; Impromptu Debate '19; Champion Debate '19.

Elizer comes back to us after having been absent since 1917. And it seems that he has indeed learned quite a bit from the stern taskmaster we call life. He is afflicted with poetry—which is a terrible handicap, according to our notion.
"He is a paragon of mankind;
So like a Chesterfield he stands."

Hosale is a member of the Ministerial Association and is proud of it. He also plays at football and we believe he captained a team of that nature once upon a time. We've never heard him preach, but it is our opinion that he could deliver a heluva good sermon.

"Matty" is a good old scout—and when you say that you about write his biography. He has been a leader, a thinker, and a good companion. The only fault we have to find with him is that he is always buying up various brands of hair-restorer.
And laughter holding both his sides.

Despite the handicap of being born in a college town and also being a prof's son, Keller has added an enviable list of honors to his name. Keller does a great many things with facility—and does them well. It is as a musician that we would accord him the most praise, and that would be a great deal!

If they had just thought to add Julius Caesar and George Washington to the list, we would say that Kelso had some name(s). However, he has made that name a criterion for all that is good and manly in college life, and it is such men as he that make this institution safe for Democrats.

"Parsy," with an inherited New England thrift, has shown himself capable of laying up stores in this world, as well as the world to come. He is one of those fellows that twine themselves into your friendship the more you know them. Unless W. W., and S. get him, we predict a brilliant future.

"Penn" enjoys the reputation of being Emory's most astute politician. He has an uncanny habit of getting what he wants—and he isn't particular about his desires. He is a likable fellow and with his native ability should make good.

Being president of our student body has made no noticeable change in Wiley from the days when he was one of us bourgeoise. He is an astute manipulator of votes, but we have reason to believe that he is strictly on the square.
"He stuck a feather in his hat

JOSEPH WORTH SHARP, B.Ph.
OXFORD, GA.

Entered College Fall '13; Re-entered Winter '19; Honor Roll '14; U. S. Marine Corps '17.

Worth has that well-known and proverbial "pep" which has made him a welcome classmate. It is the opinion of the writer of this fragment that he possesses the brightest mind in school, but like others of his kind he doesn't seem to put out much effort. However, when Worth decides to settle down we predict that he is going to be a worthwhile person.

WALTER GLENN SHIELDS, B.Ph.

Speaking of male vamps—meet Mister Shields! Walter is more or less coy and with the vampish knack he has should find himself a happy home with some peachy wren. Walter is a good student and goes down as one of our foremost "sharks".

 Raised under the shadow of Wesleyan, Leon comes to us endowed with a vast knowledge of the fairer sex—and we might add that he is more or less a lion with the same. As a business manager, he is a good 'un and deserves the graft he is rumored to have garnered.

"Strick" is one of the best liked men in college, which we attribute to his sunny disposition. He is ever up for any kind of lark—except hazing, which habit he was cured of in his "Soph" year. Dean ought to be heard of after he leaves here.

Bill is probably the most modest boy in school. He has annexed honors that would have increased the mean circumference of many a fellow's head but, so far as we know, he wears the same size hat that he did when he entered this Pierian tributary. If assumption is an essential, Bill won't get anywhere, but if true worth is worth a whoop he will be there with bells on.

No one would ordinarily think that "Sub" would have a boon companion, but in sooth such is to be had in the form of "Wee Willie," who is a veritable Boswell to our local Johnson. Bill has a remarkable faculty of agreeing with the Dean every time an argument arises—which, we opine, does not hurt his grades considerably. Bill is one of our foremost scholars and chose the Bachelor of Arts for his intellectual gambols.

Blount and "Dude" have conspired to beat this old institution out of a "dip" by collaborating on Greek "Lit." This is really a remarkable pair and have many points in common. We hope Blount will enjoy his future years as much as he has those at Emory.
Today

There are some who dwell in the long-dead world
   Of the days that are no more.
There are some who read the Future's scroll,
   And peer through its tight-closed door.
Our Past is a record forever sealed,
   And the Future—not ours to say:
So—a health to the Present—forget the rest!
   We must live and love Today!

With the warmth of your kisses upon my lips
   I could stare Death's cold eyes down;
All drunk with the riotous wine of love,
   I could brave High Heaven's frown!
We are gods Today. Let us play the part.
   Tomorrow—then come what may!
The Past forgotten—the Future dared—
   Let us live, oh my love, Today!

History of Class of '20

In the fall of 1916 there came to Emory one of the largest classes that has ever been known to this ancient and classic seat of learning—numbering one hundred and nineteen strong. Since that eventful day, our ranks have become thinned and the gloss of freshmen has worn away, revealing the splendid fibre of true men beneath.

The Class of '20 has been a winner from the very beginning. It has been in, or near, the lead in all college activities since its birth, and has literally “mopped up” with all opponents, whoever they may be and from wherever they may come. Our football teams are feared, and baseball is our specialty. When you hear the mention of basketball at Emory, you immediately think of our team and its wonderful pennant-winning teamwork.

From the number of “E’s” that our men wear and the enviable athletic record that we possess you might be inclined to think athletics our vocation, but glance further at the record. Our men excel in literary attainments, in the debating societies, and in the class rooms. The literary fraternity has been attacked with splendid success. Few and Phi Gamma Literary Societies are proud to own us as their sons, not only for what we have done, but also for what her representatives of the 1920 class give promise of doing. The professors and honor roll have been more than conscious of our presence, as they have been seized with equal success.

Yet, you have not read the most glorious part of our record. Many of our most brilliant men, our best athletes, and the finest types of manhood that Southern homes can give the world have poured forth their life’s blood on the battlefields of France, or have been in the service of their country, that “democracy might not perish from the earth”.

As our men in the past have sown, so will be continue to sow. With a brilliant past, we intend a more brilliant future. And as we are to have the honor of being the first of the Liberal Arts classes to graduate on the Emory University campus, we shall strive to set a standard that all future classes may hope to attain.

Some Day

Out of a night of swirling black,
I'm going to start the journey back,
Along an old familiar track,
Some day.

Back to a land not named in books,
Of shady lanes and cozy nooks,
Of burning lips and longing looks,
Some day.

Across a drift of mottled snow,
I'll hear the call that I must go,
Where balmy Southern breezes blow,
Some day.

A note that makes the senses start,
And rends the binding thongs apart,
Will take me back to you, Dear Heart,
Some day.

W. E R E N S T R O G E S
Now and anon the memory
That once I was a Freshman
Rises up,
And, rising, smiles!
Like Banquo's ghost, it will not down!
Sophomore Class History

Not because we of '21 have left behind no great record and wonderful achievements, but because histories are such dry reading matter and long ones are so seldom read, I, as historian, am a man of few words.

Occurrences are almost too jumbled for record. The war, the S. A. T. C., and, for a moment we were all excited over intercollegiate athletics, but soon this fear was banished. Right on its heels came November 11, the day that old Oxford awoke, and next came African golf and prohibition. These are glimpses of the first three months of this college year, while under the guiding care of our "dear old uncle." We were all one big class with one big purpose in those three months, and that purpose was victory.

And now we are back on a pre-war basis, making a good name for the last Sophomore Class in Emory while at Oxford, Georgia. Our men on the Glee Club are many, our orators are great, and in basketball we copped three out of the six "E" men, and do our prospects in baseball look good? I'll say they do.

The half is not told, but I must live up to my opening statement. In the meantime, just watch us go.

Revelation

(Prize Poem)

Your eyes aren’t stars to me, dear heart,
(Stars grow dim as day draws near.)
Your cheeks from roses seem apart,
(Roses shatter in the year.)
Your lips are not of coral, Sweet,
(Coral’s cold as winter’s sea)
And though you’re Nature’s all complete,
You’re simply YOU to me.

W. Ernest Rogers, '20
Freshman Class History

The place of the Class of '22 in the history of Emory is unique, for it stands upon the divide between the old and and the new Emory. Our class has the distinction of being the last class to enter Emory in old Oxford. Our place in the re-establishment of Emory is very important, for us will come the task of transplanting the old traditions of Emory in the new field.

The Freshman Class of '22 arrived on the campus on September 18th, 1918. The “new boys” brought with them their ideas of college, but to their great disappointment their dreams were not allowed time to be realized, for Uncle Sam, on October 1st, stepped into the arena to shape college life as he chose, not as the boys would have it. With the passing of the S. A. T. C., the old regime comes into its own, and we have been able to enjoy six months of Emory Freshman life.

On the athletic field, the Class of '22 has achieved success. Because of the S. A. T. C. we could not prove our prowess upon the gridiron, but when basketball season—well, a Freshman pennant tells the story. We had two men on the All-Emory basketball team.

Already we have shown that the Class of '22 is one of extraordinary intellectual ability. Among our number are boys who “shoot the profs” at will. In the future, when we meet our “dips” face to face, we will have gained an enviable record for scholarship, but our greatest achievement will be in the fact that we shall have carried with us to Atlanta the cherished traditions and ideals of Old Emory, and there planted them in a new field where they will blossom forth into a greater, better Emory. When we have done this, we will have done our bit for our Alma Mater.

Pre-Medical Class History

On one memorable day in the month of September, 1919, one might have looked out upon the Emory campus and seen a host of unimportant-looking specimens of youth, crowding, with meanness and dread, around the window of the registrar's office, where they were to register as B. S. Med. Careful, lest they trample upon forbidden ground, they were led on through ambition and desire for distinction; these being the only things that encouraged them to brave the hazards of the all-important first year at college. This one year that is so often an indication of the success or failure of a man's college career, but the "Pre-Meds" of '18 have withstood the strain most wonderfully. As time passed on, various events among the fellows have attracted the attention of the upper class-men who, at first inclined to ridicule, are compelled to watch in silence as the Class of '18 progresses.

The S. A. T. C. broke into the regular routine and with many of the usual advantages taken away, the class has been retarded somewhat, both on the athletic field and in the class room. Having no opportunity to show our ability on the gridiron, we came to the front gloriously in basketball, contributing our share to the Freshman team, who were the champions of '19. We must not pass by the class honors shared by the "Pre-Meds." We have quite a bunch of "shoot-'em-ups," who take an unusual amount of interest in their studies and in "those labs." Several of our number have been frequent contributors to the Emory Phoenix, and when the Honor Roll is written we will be well represented.

There is a recognized necessity for well-trained medical men in the professional world of today and there is no doubt that the efforts of the largest Pre-Medical class registered here, will not have been in vain. We will have, at the end of this year, set a record that the oncoming "Pre-Meds" may strive to attain.

The Student Government Association

In order to improve its own internal condition and to furnish a better means of co-operation among the several departments of the institution of which it is the very heart, the Student Government Association of the School of Liberal Arts adopted a new constitution. The mass meeting of the students at which the constitution was discussed and adopted was held in the Old Oxford Church on the evening of April 24, 1919.

The new constitution was drawn up by a committee composed of: W. B. Sanders, C. K. Bivings, S. M. Mathews, B. F. K. Mullins, W. B. Stubbs, Jr., Robert Flowers, M. L. Greene and W. E. Rogers. Dr. E. H. Johnson and Dr. T. H. Jack offered some valuable suggestions to the committee. In framing the constitution, the members of the committee had in mind two dominant ideas, viz: the abolition of the old system of Emory politics and the inauguration of an honor system.

For many years a student who aspired to the presidency of the student body had to spend a great portion of his time in personal persuasion and “boot-licking” of the members of the student body. The other offices demanded proportionate attention to the whims of the voters. By putting the nominations under the guidance of a council, and by providing that the nominations be kept secret until the time of the election, the new constitution hit politics a deadly blow.

During the past few years, there has been some agitation among the students in favor of some form of an honor system. At the time the new constitution was adopted, the favorable sentiment was practically unanimous. Consequently, the new constitution holds the members of the Student Government Association directly responsible for honesty on examinations and fairness in class-room work. The rules to carry the system into effect are somewhat similar to those in operation at the University of Virginia.

Some changes occur in the organization of the committees in charge of athletics and publications. Every athletic team must have a coach, who is to be appointed by the athletic committee. The business managers of the student publications are to be chosen after competitive bidding.

With the new constitution as a basis for organization, the Student Government Association expects to develop to a high degree the desirable extra curriculum activities of college life, and to make the atmosphere on the new campus the most desirable for students and faculty members.

Preference

I love the rose at early morn,
    When jeweled with the dew,
I love its gentle modesty,
    Its lovely crimson hue:
And yet, my love, I far prefer
    The coral lips of you!

I love the verdant sylvan scene,
    The woodland wild and free,
I love to rest beneath the care
    Of some majestic tree:
And yet I far prefer the sweet
    Companionship of thee!

I love to walk abroad at night,
    When stars their beauty shine
And listen to their whispered words
    Of sympathy divine:
Yet I prefer to ev'ry star
    Those wondrous eyes of thine!

Tennessee Club History

The Tennessee Club of Emory College was organized long before the College expanded into the University of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. This class was instrumental in keeping the Tennessee boys united in friendly relations during the collegiate career. In accord with these facts, at the first meeting of the Tennessee Club in January of 1919, a motion was made and carried to draw up a constitution, thereby placing the club on a firmer basis for further operation.

The outstanding purpose of the club is to foster mutual friendship of the Tennessee boys, the hearty cooperation in their scholastic and social life, and finally to measure up to the standards of this great institution, and the illustrious men of Tennessee.

To these worthy and laudible ends each member of the club cheerfully pledges himself, and the club is looking forward to a great success in the future.

Doctors’ Sons’ Club

Through patriotism to their fathers’ pocketbook and their monthly check, this noble bunch of hoboes organized the "Doctors’ Sons’ Club" in order to put more students on the sick call. Due to the change in the "Liars' Den" their cause from now on is a thing of the past, as very few seem to be sick these days. Instead of decreasing the health of the student body, this noble organization has been a great stimulus in many respects to the health of the University. Since their first motives have been changed, they are now on the road to fame and deserve credit for increasing the attendance of our future doctors to their respective works.

Alpha Epsilon Upsilon Honorary Society was organized in the year 1907 for the purpose of promoting scholarship and friendship among the students and graduates of Emory College. Membership in this organization upon class standing and members are elected annually from duly qualified students or graduates of Emory College. Selections from each class before graduation never exceed one-fifth of its membership. In addition to scholarship, and with a view toward making membership an honor all the more to be cherished, high moral character is a qualification.

The following are the scholastic requirements for eligibility:

1. An undergraduate who has been in college for at least eight terms and who has attained at either period of eligibility an average grade of 8.8, shall be qualified for election.

2. An undergraduate who has been in college for less than eight terms, but for as many as five terms, and has attained an average grade of 9.4, shall be duly qualified for election.

Y. M. C. A. History

The Spring of 1919 finds the Emory Y. M. C. A. at its high tide, and going strong. We have well attended religious meetings, a much-used social room, crowded picture shows, Bible study groups, and a growing influence in the student body.

Last fall, during the S. A. T. C. days, there was no Emory "Y". The members of the study cabinet were all, or nearly all, in the service and the college was not large enough to be allotted a paid worker. However, under Y. M. C. A. auspices, two picture shows a week were given in the Old Church, and there was a supply of stationery for the boys to write home on.

After Christmas, the Cabinet got together and started having the regular Saturday night religious meetings. When Mr. Shelnutt was sent down to put in his whole time for the Y. M. C. A., we blossomed forth with moving pictures and a "Y" room. This room is furnished with a piano, Victrola, magazines and games, and in it we see an "earnest of success" for our dream of an Emory Y. M. C. A. building on the Atlanta campus.

Our membership rolls are large. Already between a hundred and a hundred and twenty-five membership cards have been issued. Bible study groups, embracing every class of boys in the college, have been formed and are in a thriving condition. The honor system has been brought to the attention of the student body, and we are hoping that it will be incorporated in our new student government constitution.

We hardly know how to plan for the future, as conditions will be so greatly changed by our removal to Atlanta; but we will have the assurance that we enter into our new and greater University life strong in the year just closed.

Secretary of the Cabinet

Love

Most wonderful of all peculiarities is love;
'Tis the making of a man.
The foundation of the land;
That's how wonderful and peculiar is love.

Love of which I speak is the true and noble kind;
Lofty and elevating love,
Like the cooing of a dove.
The kind that exists in a godly mind and heart.

Most antique in its nature, old-fashioned in its way;
Our grandsires wooed and won
The belles of '51;
Still, this love is most preferred this modern day.

For true love is from a heart—
It matters not about the man,
Whether polished cheeks, or tan,
Where marriage vows ne'er mean to quarrel or part.

True love makes the worst of worlds grow strong
In truth and justice to every man,
In broadcast freedom to a corrupt land;
A devil in hell to err from most gigantic wrong.

Phi Gamma History

For, lo! these many years has old Phi Gamma trained Emory men to speak in public and to hold their own in debates and public discussions, and it is with a feeling of reluctance that we undertake to write this final episode in her history at Oxford.

Only twice since the present hall was built has it been used for anything other than the purpose for which it was originally built, that of training its members to speak. The first was during the Civil War, when it was converted into a hospital; and the second was during the reign of Lieutenant Fatheree and his able advisor, the right honorable Lieutenant Burrus, sometimes called Thelma, when it served as a canteen. We know not what the future holds in store for Phi Gamma, but it has been suggested that it will probably be used as a Junior Phi Gamma to prepare the members for more efficient work in the new Phi Gamma at Emory University, near Atlanta.

In 1918, Phi Gamma sent a representative to a convention in Montgomery, Alabama, which convention was called for the purpose of organizing a Southern literary society, and of which society Phi Gamma was to become a member. Delegates were there from most of the leading colleges of the South, each delegate representing the leading literary society in his particular school. A constitution was drawn up and the name chosen for the society was Alpha Phi Epsilon. Each chapter had the privilege of choosing its own name, and Phi Gamma retained the one which she has always been known by, becoming Phi Gamma chapter of A. P. E. Due to the confusion during the S. A. T. C., and also to the fact that this is her last year here, she has not taken an active part in the work of this society, but has continued her work as heretofore. Next year she intends to take her place as an active member of A. P. E., and to engage in several debates with other chapters.

May the brilliant record which she has behind her be undimmed by her future career. May she continue to train such men as Warren A. Candler and Atticus G. Haygood, and long after her walls have crumbled into dust may the greater Phi Gamma at Emory be true to the traditions of the old Phi Gamma at Oxford.

Few Literary Society History

The birth of Few Literary Society dates back to 1839, two years after the founding of Emory College. To begin with the College had only one literary society, but some of the men thought that friendly competition would be conducive to development and for that reason half of the members of Phi Gamma withdrew and organized Few Literary Society, naming it in honor of the first president of Emory, Dr. Inatius A. Few.

History has shown that these founders were wise for their followers have been diligent workers and debates have been known to have been carried on for hours. This energetic work continued until the bugle called the men to take their part in the Civil War. However, the halls did not stand idle, but were used as a shelter for the wounded of both the Blue and the Gray.

After the great conflict the society membership was made up of only two men, a Mr. Roberts and the Rev. Chas. Lane, not a great number, but they exercised their power to place Few on a good footing.

Few is today a leading element in the life of many an Emory man and on the new campus we are sure she will continue the work “with a view to the promotion of virtue and patriotism, the cultivation of forensic powers, and for the sake of general improvement in science and literature.”

Dooley's Diary

This has indeed been an eventful year and it has taxed my patience and endurance to record all the happenings of the terms just past, but take it as reliable information that from my point of vantage in the Biology Lab., few things of interest have escaped my notice. This may be my last appearance in these classic pages due to the fact that these new-fangled notions are permeating this institution and the College goes to Atlanta, and I'm afraid I'm not flossy enough to go to the city. However, if I am left, there will be no regrets and I wish you luck! Here's my diary which, I hope, will recall to your minds incidents of the past:

September 18—The prides of their home town breeze in bedecked with all the brilliant colorings of their various department stores. Fraternities are unusually attentive to special Freshmen. Freshman Brandon hits town. Whew!

September 21—Pandemonium reigns at the various fraternity houses. The old goats are oiled up and do the dirty work.

September 29—“Gloomy” Dorough smiles. (See November 27.)

October 3—Carnival hits Cove. McNulty gets homesick and can’t break away from the white lights.

October 6—S. A. T. C. men are called to barracks. “Kinney” McEllan makes off with a dormitory mattress. Oh, you ministerial association!

October 8—Reyburg starts his merciless crusade toward “downing syrup”—he downed nearly all the commissary had in stock.

October 12—The “flu” begins claiming its victims. Severe run on the castor oil market. Reyburg succumbs.

October 15—Lieutenant Burrus discovers that he is about the most important fellow on the campus. Funny nobody else had noticed it.

October 20—Everybody attends church. (Dooley must have his little joke.)

October 27—“Ernie” Rogers celebrates his 21st birthday. Drinks a brace of chocolate milks and has to be led home.
October 30—S. A. T. C. contingent takes up boxing. "Lefty" Humphries knocks out "Josh" Westmoreland.

November 5—Neal Thomas—beg pardon! Lieutenant Thomas hits town for a few hours. Proves to be the same old likable cuss.

November 9—MacDonnell goes through the Alpha Sigma Sigma initiation. Hunts the soft spots around the Stewart House to sit on. Looks like a likely member.

November 11—WAR IS OVER! The faculty does the unheard-of and declares a holiday. A. B. Wight gets careless and buys two packages of chewing gum.

November 17—Miss Josephine Franklin returns from Wesleyan. All the social boys begin a stampede in the direction of "Cove." Mathews gets run over in the rush.

November 21.—Reyburg takes the syrup cure and rises from his "flu"-stricken bed.

November 27—"Gloomy" Dorough smiles.

November 29—S. A. T. C. gets paid off. African golf occupies the attention of the local sports. "Pat" Greene resigns as president of the Fish Club.

December 3—Wesleyan is closed on account of the "flu" and things pick up around here considerably. Stone does rushing jitney business.

December 5—"C. P. O." Greene is fallen on by a band of his military equals. Gilliam presents "Pat" Greene with a box of rolled cabbage.

December 9—W. B. Cates, alias W. H. Toole, does "Cove" society and comes back walking on air.

December 13—Friday, the 13th, and exams for the Fall Term come on the same day. S. A. T. C. men don't care to be bothered with them.

December 20—Christmas holidays begin. Little Senator Sharp buys him a great big, old stocking to hang up for Santa. Freshmen feel like "old men" and go off smoking cigars, etc.

January 2—Winter Term begins. A large crop of shave-tails are found on the campus. Several well-developed cases of "lurgy" crop out.
January 5—Keller Melton and "Ernie" Rogers hold a reunion on the mandolin and guitar. The old bunch gathers 'round to listen to the jazz.

January 6—Glee Club try-out produces several who have evidently hollered for pigs too loud. "Willie PEW" Brandon can't decide whether he'd rather be dean of the school or not.

January 13—Phi Gamma meets. Stubbs wants to collect all the money in the house, much to the disgust of the assembled throng.

January 15—"Baldy" Mathews seen smuggling a bottle of hair tonic into the Hanner House. Naughty! Naughty!

January 23—"Gloomy" Dorough and "Old Man" Grimes indulge in a little fisticuff. Only two blows passed, to-wit: "Gloomy" hit Grimy and Grimy hit the wall.

January 26—Big doings in "Cove". Bivings, Mathews, Melton, Greene, and Rogers, E., foot it in from said destination at 2 p.m.

January 29—"Sub" has some visitors from Agnes Scott. The sporty fellows put on their Sunday clothes and try for a little bootlicking.

February 6—"Senator" Sharp runs afoul of "Cove" society. Proudly exhibits "Brass-knuck" marks at chapel next morning. "Sen" says he'll get 'em!

February 7—Elberton High and Covington High indulge in a hot basketball game. Keller Melton and John Parsons do yeoman service when the young lady turns her ankle.

February 10—Impromptu Debate came off. Phi Gamma humbled Few for the second successive year. Elizer is right.

February 14—All the nice little boys send valentines to their girls.

February 22—K. A.'s throw their reception with much success. The old town don't look anyways natural with all the women present. "Strick" slicks up his chin.

February 30—The College gives every two-legged man a ten-dollar bill. They do this every year on this date.

March 6—Glee Club warbles to the discomfort of all non-combatants.
March 18—Revival calls out the old backsliders. Great rustling of new leaves turning over.

March 31—Wesleyan Glee Club hits town. Leon and “Pat” buy up a few bags to hold their graft. “Ernie” gets vamped.

April 4—A. B. Wight, Bob Flowers and Goldsmith disregard convention and go about without collars and ties on.

April 14—Glee Club hits the road. Great trip!

May 9—Weather getting warmer and baseball boys are busy.

May 13—Fellows getting ready for Commencement, although it’s a month away. “Madam” gets a hair-cut.

May 25—“Gloomy” Dorough smiles.

June 7—Everybody says “Let’s go!” and it seems to be a popular expression.

June 10—The old school bids farewell to the classic shades and prepares to make the big hop to the city.

Hoping this will prove satisfactory, I am,

Yours truly,

Dooley.
The Woman Higher Up

(Prize Story)

BY W. ERNEST ROGERS, '20

I

"The 'Lady' has claimed another one," came the voice of Clarke Craig, star reporter of the Evening Sun, over the 'phone. "Old Man Gibson, of the Western Gold Corporation, was found dead in his office about eleven-thirty with a bullet through his heart. No mark save a tiny figure '7' on his forehead and the place where the bullet entered his chest. Get Williams to run the feature stuff for the first edition and I'll be in later to run the regular story for the home edition. Make it snappy!"

As the 'phone snapped, "Old George" Lewis, the keen-eyed city editor, turned to his desk with a steely glint in his eye. Lewis knew a good story was ready to be flung across the front page. However, his brow wrinkled with perplexity as he recounted the fact that this was the sixth murder of recent date evidently perpetrated by the same master hand. Always the crimes were sprung at about the same hour, with no evident signs of violence save the tiny blue hole indicative of the entrance of the death-dealing missile. Every time the figure "7" appeared on the victim's forehead. These frequent happenings were becoming a sore spot to the staff of the Sun, which had made an open boast that it would run the mysterious murderer to earth.

All was action in the office.

"Williams! Get on this story," snapped Lewis, "and say that we are closing in on the author of these crimes. 'Bull,' of course, but the public wants to read it. Tell the history of the previous crimes. You'll remember the five other victims were all members of the old Western Gold Corporation. Gibson is the sixth and also a member of the company. Harvey Morgan is the only remaining member. Run about three columns and let's have it quick."

Clarke Craig, running over to the office of the late Joyce Gibson, was keyed up to the highest pitch. His delicate nostrils trembled as he scented the trail of the "Lady." It was truly a piece of this effeminate crook's work, but absolutely nothing left behind to condemn. He turned over every suspicious-looking material and started for the office in disgust.

The "Lady" was a mysterious personage. Craig had seen him once when out on a sensational beat, but aside from that knew him only by reputation. He never did any dirty work himself, but was known to be at the head of the strongest crook organization in that part of the country. He wore a silky little moustache which he was invariably twisting. This composed Craig's knowledge of the "Lady"—but he was becoming familiar with his work.
"If they get old Morgan, the entire Western Gold Corporation will have gone under," he mused as he trudged toward the office. "It surely seems that some jinx has been pursuing the corporation since they smashed Ben Cameron."

Coming into the editorial room he was aware of a terrible confusion at the desk.

"What's up?" asked Craig rushing up.

"Morgan was found dead in bed about ten minutes ago," one of the men on the edge of the crowd told him.

Immediately Craig's logical newspaper mind connected the previous happenings in beautiful sequence, forming a story that would bring the city to its feet. After a short conference with Lewis he turned to his machine and went to work on his story. Completing the task he left the office after a brief interview with the night editor.

II

The Paragon Club was in the midst of its big annual dance at the exquisite club rooms on DeLand Drive when the news of the Morgan murder came out. Shortly after the papers were out, Dorothy Cameron, beautiful debutante, came in, accompanied by Craig. The handsome pair created a ripple of comment as they stood poised in the door.

Craig had gone to Dot's about one o'clock and they had come on to the big dance as these affairs were not formally opened until about twelve. The writer wanted to rest his brain for the task that stared him in the face.

"You look tired to death, Craig," Dot remarked as they stepped briskly into the latest fox-trot.

"Tired, maybe, but I can't let up until this mystery is cleared," he answered languidly. "I'm hoping to get on the right track before long. This story will make me in the newspaper world if I get it across. I'm on the job all the time, but I hope to have time to be with you more after awhile. When June comes singing along we'll hear those wedding bells chime."

III

Time flies quickly when one is occupied with an absorbing work. Craig, his eyes sunken, hair rather disheveled, but with an alert expression on his face, was talking to the proprietor of one of the worst dives in the city.

"You say the 'Lady' was talking to Sandy Weston the night before the big murders?" queried Craig.

"Yep," the proprietor answered, "he says to Sandy that they'll all rest after the big job comes across. You might get something from Sandy."

Craig had no difficulty finding Weston. He was in a drinking house trying in vain to keep his feet after taking on an excess cargo of rye products. Craig got him into a private room, and after a few more drinks had been added to Sandy's collection, the ex-pugilist grew loquacious.
“Sure, the ‘Lady’ has this job done,” the crook began. “Never knew him before these jobs began coming off. Come to me one night an’ asks if me an’ muth gang wants to pick up a bunch of coin. ‘Course we were on, an’ took him up. He never done nothin’ save furnish the details as to where the guys was that we wuz to eradicite. Never missed a detail. Always on the job when it came to information, but the minute the rough stuff began he beat it. Mate, lez ‘ave ‘nuther drink. The ‘Lady’s’ goin’ to pay us off tomorrow night about twelve o’clock at Tom Shore’s place. He says he’s through an’ goin’ to leave town. I’ll have some party when I get this new bunch of coin.”

Craig had what he wanted, so he made his way to his rooms to await developments on the morrow.

Tom Shore’s was an out-of-the-way road house frequented by the lower stratum as a general meeting place and on the particular night in question was brilliantly lighted due to the fact that the “Lady” was giving a party.

Craig arrived about eleven-thirty, in a costume which completely concealed his true features, and loafed around awaiting the entrance of the master mind. His diligence was rewarded in about twenty minutes by the arrival of the immaculate “Lady.” The “Lady” was dressed in the best of taste without any flashy ostentation.

As Craig watched the “Lady” he saw him make a quick signal and start for one of the back rooms. His senses keyed to the highest pitch, Craig followed. Inside the room he heard the rumble of voices in subdued speech and after a period of quiet the gang silently filed out, with the exception of the “Lady.” Waiting for a moment the reporter shuffled into the room and saw the “Lady” sitting in a chair before the fire burning some papers.

Quick as a flash Craig covered the crook with a gun and in a low voice demanded that the “Lady” quietly put his hands up or be blown into eternity; but without the least hesitation the “Lady” reached for his gun. To avoid noise Craig grabbed him by the hands and held them in a vise-like grip. The “Lady” winced beneath the pressure and turned pale as he seemed to recognize Craig despite his make-up. This caused the crook to renew his efforts, and in the struggle a miracle came to pass. The silky moustache came off in Craig’s hand and Clarke Craig stood in petrified astonishment looking at Dorothy Cameron, his fiancee.

“What in the world does this mean?” Craig asked Dot in a dazed way.

“Oh, Clarke, I can never explain this horrid situation. In your eyes I’m a despicable crook, but, Clarke, I’ve been crazy with grief since father’s death. You know it was brought on directly by the operations of the Western Gold Corporation. They robbed him of his money and hounded him to his grave. I’ve been under a physician’s care, as you know, for the past few months and I know I’m not responsible for what may have transpired during that time. I would go to bed as normal as ever, but I’d wake up in the morning with a suit of man’s clothes on my chair and in a high state of excitement. The night of the Paragon dance I had just come in when you arrived, after waking up in a strange place.
I just seemed to come out of a dazed state. The same was true when I saw you tonight here in this room. I can only tell you this. Turn me over to the police and let me go to the fate the world would think I deserve."

The delicate shoulders of the Cameron offspring trembled as she drooped her head.

Craig was in a quandary. Here was the woman he loved. Should he write his great newspaper scoop story and achieve fame? Or should he turn to the poor girl and take her to his heart.

With the same spirit that has permeated man since Adam ate tempting fruit Craig took the woman he loved in his arms and in the affinity of lip on lip buried his love's secret in the bottom of his heart.
Benson's "From a College Window"

(Prize Essay)

By E. Clyde Smith, '22

The engineer of a railroad constructing party chooses with much consideration the path that is to lead the locomotive into an unsettled country. An artist picks with utmost care the position from which he can best draw his picture. And an author decides with prolonged deliberation upon the angle by which he is to approach his subject. The author of the essays "From a College Window" climbs the stairs of his study in Cambridge, and takes his seat at the window so as to get a full view of the old college. It is in this position that he takes up questions of every-day life, ponders over them, reads diligently about them, and discusses them, giving his own opinion. We can readily see where he got the title for his essays, and, furthermore, we can understand why this learned man takes this position to give to the world just such thoughts as an intelligent man thinks when he views the things about a college quadrangle.

The very first of his essays seems to come to him inspired by his position at the window, for in "The Point of View" he talks of the many different points of view people have upon the same things, and pictures to the reader some of the plans and thoughts that are coursing through the minds of many college professors. It would be difficult to arrange his essays in chronological order, for we do not know exactly which follows the other, and it seems unnecessary for such an arrangement, because the subjects written upon have no connection whatever, except that they are all written for the same purpose. The purpose that is in the mind of our author is to give us an explanation of the subjects that he writes upon, in order that we may form a better conception of them, and think more about them as we pass them daily. His thoughts on "Growing Older" and "A Conversation" are especially good, inasmuch as young people have a vague feeling toward growing older, and know very little of the art of conversation. He attempts to define certain lines of thought that are always present in the minds of boys who are preparing for places in life. A standard is set as a goal for everyone. Egotism, sociabilities, and education are discussed in such a refined manner that any young man may well take Benson's definitions for what they are worth, and his opinion is worth a great deal to the man that is endeavoring to make every effort count. No one can do better than to think upon these lessons for there is something in them that sounds the real truth, the deep sincerity, and the profound nobleness of the author.

Some essayists lack the quality of reaching the minds of young people. Matured minds are apt to cling to the old conception rather than to give way to new ideas, which make an unqualified essayist of little value to the public. Growing minds are ever hunting for guidance, seeking for truths, and reaching for something they know not what.
Benson's essays are all within range of the college boy's mind. There may be some things that have to be studied very carefully before they are mastered, but, all in all, the average boy can understand every point of Benson's essays. He seems to convey his message in such a way that the point he is trying to make, and the aim which he has sought are revealed, not in one statement, but in the unfolding of thought originating at the beginning and continuing throughout the article, becoming gradually plainer and plainer until it is distinctly portrayed to our minds. His works are not bare of interesting and amusing qualities, because he often relates a good joke upon some of his acquaintances and gives the reader a hint that, for one to be popular, or to be recognized as a real man, one must first learn how to appreciate humor as well as dignity.

When the subject of essays is brought up before a student, he is prone to think immediately of something dry, something without flavor, and something tiresome. But upon studying Benson's essays, we find that it is not necessary for essays to be a bore to young people. He sought to accomplish his task of bringing a message as pleasantly and instructively as he could. He succeeded wonderfully in his purpose, for one feels enlightened after reading his essays.

R. N. EMMETT, AMERICUS, GA. Line. "Tub," with his heavy weight, is a very valuable man. He puts all he has in the game.

T. L. HARMON, '20, MACON, GA. Backfield. Leon is a brainy, sure and consistent player. He was the bulwark of strength to his team.

C. R. HOSALE, '19, ASHLAND CITY, TENN. Line. Hosale is a good, hard-working player and perhaps the best plunger in school.
K. F. MELTON, '19, Oxford, Ga. Line. Though being a ladies’ man, his qualities as a center are equally as valuable to his mates. He has considerable experience and shows up well.

W. W. STANCIL, '19, Sale City, Ga. Line. His football experience is better than his ‘Y’ experience at Maysville. Stancil has the grit and puts much life in the game.

C. K. BIVINGS, '19, Jakin, Ga. Backfield. He has plenty of “pep,” though his weight is a drawback, he is one of the best players in school.
