To the PROGRESS OF CHILDREN'S DENTISTRY and to those who have made it possible for us to receive the rewards of their knowledge and labor.

To Dr. and Mrs. DeLos L. Hill, we deeply appreciate the worthy donation of a children's clinic—"The DeLos L. Hill, Jr., Memorial Children's Clinic," in memory of their young son.

"To live in hearts we leave behind is not to die."
To Dr. Walter T. McFall, who in teaching us the care of the child’s health, finds the highest happiness in knowing and passing his knowledge to others—who left his Alma Mater to prepare himself for a wider service and who now has returned and is lavishly pouring out his spirit for us and the advancement of Children’s Dentistry—to these we affectionately dedicate the “1936 Asodecoan.”
Foreword

In this Sixteenth Volume, you will find a record of a college year—the chronicles of one more Senior Class. Through this volume runs the theme of the various ages of man, quoted and paraphrased from Shakespeare's "As You Like It." As we enter each stage, may we act well our parts and remember the old saying, "The mill grinds on but the water never returns."

In years to come, as we turn these pages in the light of memory, may we see a life well lived.

Quotation from Shakespeare's "As You Like It."

Act II Scene VII

Joan—All the world's a stage, And all the men and women merely players; They have their exits and their entrances; And one man in his time plays many parts, His acts being seven ages. At first, the infant, Mewling and puking in the nurse's arms; Then the whining school-boy, with his satchel And shining face, creeping like snail Unwillingly to school. And then the lover, Sighing like furnace, with a woeful ballad Made to his mistress' eyebrow. Then a soldier, Full of strange oaths, and bearded like the pard, Jealous in honour, sudden and quick in quarrel, Seething the bubble reputation

Even in the cannon's mouth. And then the Justice, In fair round belly with good capon lin'd, With eyes severe and beard of formal cut, Full of wise saws and modern instances; And so he plays his part. The sixth age shifts Into the lean and slipper'd pantaloons, With spectacles on nose and pouch on side; His youthful hose, well sav'd a world too wide For his shrunk shank; and his big manly voice, Turning again toward childish treble, pipes And whistles in his sound. Last scene of all, That ends this strange eventful history, Is second childishness and mere oblivion; Sans teeth, sans eyes, sans taste, sans everything.

CHILDREN'S DENTISTRY—PAST, PRESENT AND FUTURE

By Sheppard W. Foster, D.D.S., F.A.C.D.,
President, The Atlanta-Southern Dental College.

The dental graduate of 1936 will find it difficult to realize that less than twenty-five years ago practically nothing was done by members of the dental profession to satisfy the particular demands that dentistry for children makes upon dental practice. In fact, the attitude towards children’s dentistry before 1915 was even worse than apathy. Many dentists frankly admitted they did not care to work for children. Parents thought of all deciduous teeth as being merely temporary substitutes, requiring no particular attention, since they were to be lost sooner or later. It is rather embarrassing to admit that many dentists shared this erroneous attitude regarding deciduous teeth. As a result, many children, upon reaching maturity, paid dearly for the price of this neglect in impaired health and in poorly developed dental arches.

The first change in this general attitude became apparent when Mr. James Bennett Forsyth, prominent Boston inventor and businessman, endowed the Forsyth Dental Infirmary for Children. The Infirmary was incorporated in 1910 and housed in a beautiful building reputed to have cost nearly two million dollars. Since that time, various other dental clinics for children have been established. Some of the most important of these are the Eastman Clinics, located in Rochester, N.Y., and in European cities; The Guggenheim Clinic, in New York City; The Kellog Foundation, with headquarters in Battle Creek, Michigan, and the Joseph Samuels Clinic for Children. The Cousen's Foundation of Michigan and the $85,000 fund left the Kansas City Western Dental College for children's dentistry are two other outstanding examples of the importance of dentistry for children. Our own DeLos L. Hill, Jr., Memorial Children's Clinic, operated on the interest from a $50,000 endowment from Mrs. Hill and supplemented by the college, is known far and wide as an important expansion in the direction of improved children's dentistry.

It is gratifying to recall these developments; at the same time, it must be realized that dentistry for children is really in its infancy and that the dental profession is witnessing only the beginning of this important work. It may confidently expect many more endowments for children's dentistry in the near future.

To the young graduate of today, I would give this advice: Get into the spirit of this movement for better children's dentistry. Throw into it your energy, your enthusiasm, and the ability which your four years of intensive dental training has given you. It is platitudinous to say that upon your shoulders rests the responsibility of furthering the cause of children's dentistry and dentistry in general, but it is a truism worth repeating. The extent of the progress of children's dentistry will be in direct proportion to the support given to it by the younger dentists of America. I have confidence enough in the recent graduate to believe that he will waken to the possibilities of this branch of dental practice. Therefore, I can confidently predict for children's dentistry a great and satisfying development within the next few decades.
PRE-DENTAL EDUCATIONAL REQUIREMENTS

By Ralph R. Byrnes, D.D.S., F.A.C.D.,
Dean, The Atlanta-Southern Dental College.

LAYMEN sometimes express surprise that a student should be required to attend college before studying dentistry. Knowing very little of the scope and extent of a dental course, they look upon pre-dental college training as being more or less superfluous. Many still think of dentistry as being fundamentally mechanical. However, those who have kept abreast with the times now realize that many of the systematic diseases of the body can be traced to foci of infection in and around teeth. Since dentistry is in reality, if not in name, a branch of medicine, the dentist's knowledge of the factors underlying health and disease should be extended. The dentist must have a good foundation in the basic sciences, if he is to widen his conception; hence, the necessity of pre-dental training in a liberal arts college.

Beginning with the session of 1937-1938, all “Class A” dental schools will require two years of pre-dental college preparation. This increased pre-professional training will result in a still higher type of professional man. The whole profession of dentistry, and the public as well, will benefit by this. Modern progress says to the dentist, “You must keep pace with scientific development.” The dentist must heed this injunction if he is to continue to render a real health service to the people. Where would dentistry be today if the former requirements of only a grammar school education still obtained?

Some will say, “Why shouldn’t a dental student be required to complete a four-year college course before entering the dental school?” They reason that he would be even better qualified, with a diploma from a college of arts and sciences. That may be true. But one must consider that, from the standpoint of socio-economics, such an extended preparation for dentistry would be inadvisable at this time. There are many obvious reasons against such a requirement. I have not the space to mention them in this brief article.

It would seem that two years of pre-dental college work strikes the happy medium,—a requisite that undoubtedly will be of vast benefit to the future dental practitioner and one which will not disturb the delicate economic and social relationship between the dentist and the public.

THE years 1932-1936 respectively, mark the period that has molded our embryonic careers; instilling in us a fervent love for all that is beautiful in dentistry. A stimulating spirit has woven itself so delicately and harmoniously about our being, that we cannot help feeling we are part of what the "profession" stands for.

As freshmen we were naturally green and unfamiliar with our new surroundings, awkward at first in our laboratory procedures, and fearful of the outcome. As time went on, we mastered the technique of mixing plaster, of carving correct anatomical teeth from compound and composition bone; and learned the basic principles of denture construction—we also familiarized ourselves with the gross and histological anatomy of the body. This was our baptism into the "healing art." We took it all with a grain of salt, and anticipated the coming year.

Upon our return to school, after an abbreviated summer vacation, and with high hopes and a spirited feeling, we took our places in the sophomore laboratory. Here the students could be seen working diligently on the construction of various metal crowns "fit for a King," on fixed and removable bridges of all designs and on metallic fillings in artificial teeth, housed in articulators. One could hear the roar and hissing sound of blow torches and casting machines, feel the intense heat, and see the constant filtering of dust and green particles as the sun's rays shone through the windows. This was our atmosphere as "suffermores," and we grew to love it. Our faces would gleam with a glow of satisfaction, and our hearts swell with pride whenever our instructors would "check off" an assigned piece of work, upon completion.

Soon the junior year presented itself, and with it our entrance into the practical side of dentistry. Our objective now as dental students was to serve humanity willingly, relieve suffering, beautify the mouth, and spread the gospel of "prevention." In due time we accustomed ourselves to routine clinical procedures, overcoming fear and timidity. Life now seemed more full. A day hardly passed in which we did not better our dental education. What peaceful contentment the feel of a white, immaculate jacket and a wholesome freshness about the body would give us!

Into the senior year we drifted, realizing more and more our obligation to society. We buckled down and worked hard and earnestly in acquiring our necessary dental credits, so that we might be eligible for graduation. By constant repetition at the chair, we obtained the "digital dexterity" and approach that is so essential to a dentist. From our various therapeutical courses, we have assimilated a comprehensive knowledge, in preparation for our dreaded "State Board Examination."

A strong bond of loyalty and love will forever bind us to our beloved Alma Mater. We thank the faculty for their guidance and assistance in helping us over the hazardous roads; we shall forever be indebted to our "Prexy" and Dean for their many inspirational talks, for their encouragement, and for the ideals and standards they have set before us. And in our climb to success we shall never forget those who have held the ladder for us.

ON the first of October, 1933, we came as freshmen to the Atlanta-Southern Dental College to begin training in our chosen profession. Since that time we have forged ahead to our standing as juniors and nearer to our goal.

Our thoughts of a brief "school beginning" vacation were too soon exploded by "Gray's anatomy," and the checking in of instruments, equipment, and what-not that was entirely foreign to us. Soon we began making plaster blocks, casts, ash trays and other things. The well-dressed freshman wore plaster on his pants and shoes. In carving compound and bone teeth, brass instruments, and the like, we learned what the term "digital dexterity" meant.

Examinations came but were soon forgotten in a whirl of fishing, swimming, camping, and many other things done during a summer's vacation.

But not for long did we remain outside the realm of the dental profession. Knowingly, we began the technical procedures in the sophomore laboratory. We learned cavity classification and preparation, the use of hand instruments, the engine, and the steps in making crowns, bridges, inlays, partial dentures, plates, and other mechanical contrivances preparatory to work in the dental clinic. In our classes and other laboratories we learned the theory connected with dentistry and medicine.

Before we knew it, examinations came and passed, and summer vacation was with us again, to enjoy in any way possible.

For the third time we assembled—this time to don our white coats and begin dealing with actualities. At first we were nervous, uncertain, and half afraid to begin work, but after the first extractions we regained part of our lost sense of security.

Under the new system of sections that came with the change in the curriculum, we feel that we are getting a more diversified teaching. If we complete the amount of work, no doubt will linger in our minds as to the success of our progress in the dental profession.

SOPHOMORE CLASS HISTORY

THE year of 1935 saw a class of freshmen who, through adversities brought about by the nation’s condition, were fighting to attain their spurs in a more advanced class, known in college as “Sophomores.”

After the completion of our freshman year, we “Doctors” thought that we were endowed with the knowledge necessary to start a practice. However, when embarking upon our sophomore course we were soon grounded upon the shoals of misconception, somewhat in the manner of ships navigating in unfamiliar waters.

After a short period in the sophomore class we delved into the interesting study of crown and bridge, operative, and other work, which up to this point was entirely foreign to us. Also we became familiar with the many instruments employed in the preparation of dental appliances and we acquired digital dexterity to some extent.

Our affiliation with the doctors charged with the duty of teaching the practical side of dentistry was indeed one of inspiration, although the study meant hard work and many sacrifices. Our earnest hope is that we, when our work is complete, shall be an asset to the memory of the Atlanta-Southern Dental College.

It was then that we came to the realization that dentistry covers a wide field, offering opportunities seldom found in many professions.

This year saw for the first time the installation in our College of an extra curriculum activity known as “Stunt Night.” The sophomore class contributed their part in the success of this entertainment.

Time passed rapidly, and soon the Christmas holidays were at hand. Everyone was anxiously looking forward to the trip home but was at the same time reluctant to leave their many friends. The speedy termination of this vacation found us back to normal again, rested in mind but a little tired physically. Again we took up our burdens and trudged onward towards the next objective, the junior class.

In conclusion we extend at this time our earnest wishes for the fullest measure of success to the present senior class, and we hope that we shall live up to the high standards set by the juniors.

Jack William Vosper, Historian.
AUTOMOBILE JUNK YARD

Gathered from restless roadways of the earth,
That led them singing over hills and plains,
These wayworn cars, like things of mortal birth,
Whisper through gaping doors and broken panes
Their bright, incredible tales of long ago,—
Lost hours upon the highway, reckless, free,
When whirling hills swooned backward, row on row,
And waves ran past, like plumes, along the sea.
The steering wheel, disconsolate, recalls
A lithe, young hand; the brakes, impatient feet
Speeding past mountains, streams and waterfalls,
Where laggard summer and late autumn meet
Like lovers in a parley, long denied.
The metal heart will never throb again
To find for ghostly lovers, side by side,
A silence in the night, where dark trees strain
To hear their words. No startled midnight town
Will quiver with these motors whirring by;
To dust again the weary cars go down,
Even as men, with all their dreams, must die.

Sam Zion

1936
ON September thirty, we poor insignificant freshmen arrived at the sacred portals of the far-famed Atlanta-Southern Dental College. With the aid of the strange term "Doc" we were immediately taken in hand by the esteemed exponents of the dental supply houses and led the devastating chase of purchasing equipment for the year to come. Time came too soon for the gathering of text books, the most discouraging looking of which was the huge red-covered Anatomy text. However, Dr. Stegall endeavored his utmost to banish any fear that we might have along that line by introducing to us the dignified cadavers of Archibald, Minnie the Moocher, Popeye, and various others.

Before the close of the week, "rush season" was in full swing, and we found ourselves making the rounds of one gay and hilarious time after another. The fraternities were determined to show those of us not accustomed to the beauty of Atlanta that the fair city lived up to its reputation one hundred per cent. We have agreed heartily, and endorse Atlanta as the city of unexcelled feminine splendor.

While on the subject of the feminine aspect of school life it would be well to mention the particular aversion dental students have toward co-eds. We are able to disregard this when such a charming personage as Miss McGuire is in our midst.

We were hastily initiated into the correct handling of plaster, modeling compound, base plates, and last but not least, a comprehensive schedule of carving teeth which has proved to be a nightmare to the majority of us. We believe that we were progressing famously, but Dr. Brown claimed, "I haven't yet found an unbreakable thing that a freshman can't break."

After the first four or five nerve-racking examinations we all settled down to the routine with increasing steadiness. We began to worry less and to study more. Spot questions were forever popular, but there was always the inevitable to arise and knock us down. By determined effort (brilliant future Doctors of Dental Surgery excepted) we were able to stumble over the inevitable and slowly build up our averages.

Now that we have come to the end of our first year as young hopefuls we feel that our chosen profession of Dentistry is among the most admirable in the field of art and science. Each and every task has been approached with the ultimate end in view, thanks to the fine tutelage of our instructors. We agree unanimously that our school is the finest of its kind, and if it is in the power of the school we shall all be leaders in our profession and in social and civic life.

Robert H. Bemister, Class Historian.
This night is mine, these stars that burn
In cool, far meadows of the sky,
These winds that pass us and return,
Like ghosts of lovers, gliding by.
Where are the cares I knew by day?
They melt beneath this moon that pours
Its liquid light across our way.
This night is mine. Come, make it yours.

This night is yours, this night of peace,
Heavy and sweet with breath of flowers.
You, too, must give your heart release;
This night is yours; come, make it ours.
"This night is ours," I hear you say,
"But what of morning, grey with sorrows?"
Let thoughts of day remain with day!
This night is ours and not tomorrow's!

Lambda Chapter

The Omicron Kappa Upsilon Fraternity was organized by the Faculty of Northwestern University Dental School in 1914, to encourage and develop a spirit of emulation among students of dentistry, and to recognize in an appropriate manner those who distinguish themselves by a high grade of scholarship. Not more than twelve per cent. of the highest ranking members in scholarship of each graduating class are elected to membership in this fraternity. Lambda Chapter was chartered in 1925, in Atlanta-Southern Dental College.

BASKETBALL AT ATLANTA-SOUTHERN DENTAL COLLEGE

COUNTLESS crowds of spectators blame captain "Doggy" Anderson's fighting "Dental Five" for their breathless condition, lost hats and torn garments. These guilty demons are represented by none other than our hard-working and seemingly docile professional brothers:

Manager Bob Frey did no poor job of managing.

Encouraged and inspired by Dr. Coleman's active interest and enthusiastic backing, these determined athletes with no little mental craftiness and a surprising physical prowess quickly established a reputation for themselves among Atlanta's athletic fans.

The college was a member of the City League, sponsored by the Y. M. C. A. Playing fourteen games in the first half of the season, the Dental Quint's paced third in the league. After Christmas, in the strenuous second half of the season, the determined dentists fought seven more games, reluctantly but most creditably taking a fourth place in the final rating.

The college, to show their appreciation to her athletes, feted them in March to a most enjoyable and entertaining banquet.

Next year's season, to the fighting dentists, looms brightly ahead.

Sixth Stage of Man...

The sixth age shifts
Into the loose and aching teeth,
With spectacles on nose and pouch on side;
His youthful muscles well worn, a bite too wide
For his shrunken gums; and his big manly voice,
Turning again toward childish treble, pipes
And whistles through his plates.

An old-time Chinese dentist pulling a tooth with his fingers

DENTISTS—OLD AND NEW

I—IN CHINA AND EGYPT

An old custom of Chinese dentists was to pull teeth without the help of pincers. Instead of pincers they used their fingers.

We are told that the art of caring for teeth has been practiced in China for more than 4,000 years.

At least forty ways of treating toothache and other troubles of the mouth came to be known to the Chinese. Powders, pills and mouth washes were used, and are used now to some extent. One remedy is made in this manner:

"A bit of garlic is roasted and crushed between the teeth. Then it is mixed with milk and chopped horseradish seeds, and the paste is rolled into pellets which are dried and used as pills."

Two other "cures" are in powder form, and are sniffed up the nose.

In Egypt, the story of the dentist goes back to a still more distant date than in China.

To stop the "throbbing" of toothache, the Egyptians mixed honey, oil, and many other things, including "the powder of flint stone."

One of their remedies was made with eight parts of dough, one part of onion, two parts of "the fruit of the gobi," and thirty-two parts of water. The paste was left to stand and then was "chewed for four days."

While looking at mummies in the Peabody museum of Harvard university, Prof. Kurt Thoma found that a tooth in the lower jaw of one of them had a little round hole in it. This made him study the jaw more carefully, and under the tooth he found two more holes. They looked as though they might have been cut through the jaw bone while the Egyptian was alive, in order to treat an abscess.

An X-ray picture showed what looked like an abscess chamber in the jaw; and this was so interesting to the director of the museum that he took the jaw apart.

A barber-surgeon pulling a tooth
(Modeled after an old wood-cut)

DENTISTS—OLD AND NEW
II—IN OLDEN EUROPE

A picture made about 400 years ago shows a "barber-surgeon" with a patient. The barber-surgeon cut hair, trimmed beards, "bled" patients for the good of their health (as he supposed), and sometimes pulled their teeth.

In the picture, this barber-surgeon holds a pair of pincers of large size. In fact the pincers look large enough to pull an elephant's tooth!

The use of pincers goes back to ancient times in Europe. Greek and Roman dentists had them, and we may see examples of them today, in museums of Athens, Rome and other cities.

After a Greek lost one or more of his teeth, he might be able to find a skillful dentist who would make new ones for him. False teeth were held in place by passing metal bands around them and around the true teeth.

Toothpicks are no longer in fashion in most parts of our land; but they were popular not so many years ago. When we study the ways of people in Roman times, we find that the toothpick was known even then. Sometimes a Roman used a small, sharp-pointed bone to pick his teeth, and in other cases he employed a toothpick of wood or quill or metal. Golden, as well as bronze, toothpicks have been found among the remains of those ancient folk.

Roman dentists used gold and ivory to make false teeth. We also have proof that at least once in a while a thin cover of gold was placed over a tooth which had decayed, or which had been filed away.

A Roman poet wrote about "two old witches" who were running away. He said that one of them lost her false hair, and that the other lost her false teeth.

In a famous set of laws called the Twelve Tables, the Romans had rules about the teeth. It was stated that gold should not be buried with a dead person, except any gold which might have been used to bind teeth together. Another law stated:

"Anyone who shall cause the tooth of a free man to fall shall pay a fine of 300 (pieces of money)."

The fine amounted to about $30 in our money. There was also a fine of half as much for doing the same thing to a slave.

We may suppose that the fines were had only when teeth were knocked out or pulled without good reason. A Roman doctor wrote:

"When a tooth aches, and it is thought well to take it out because medicine does not help it . . . the tooth must be shaken until it is loose," and then "it must be pulled out by the fingers, if possible, or with the pincers."

DENTISTS—OLD AND NEW

III—TRUE AND FALSE TEETH

Many artists have tried to make fun about the pulling of teeth. Among their pictures is one which dates back about 200 years, and which shows a dentist pulling a tooth. The patient is seated on a platform in a public place, and the dentist is pulling so hard that both he and the patient seem on the point of falling when the tooth comes out.

A more modern picture shows a dentist holding a crying baby. The dentist—who is either sleepy or absent-minded, or both—looks into the wide-open mouth of the baby and exclaims, "Who has been pulling out your teeth?"

Very small babies have no teeth to display to the world, though there are teeth under the gums when a child is born. The first or "milk" teeth usually start coming through the gums after a baby is five or six months of age. When he is two and a half years old, a child should have 6 teeth.

One by one the milk teeth are pushed out by the second teeth, which are larger and stronger. The second teeth may start to appear at the age of five, but years pass before the milk teeth are all gone.

Human beings can count on only two sets of their own teeth. In this way we differ from certain animals. Sharks, for example, grow new teeth when the old ones are broken off or worn away.

Dentists may make false teeth for us when we lose one or more of our second set; but good, sound teeth of our own are far better than any a dentist can provide.

The making of false teeth went on in Europe after the Romans lost their empire power. A German who lived about two and a half centuries ago wrote down words with this meaning:

"When front teeth are missing, false teeth should be put in their place so the person can speak well. Other teeth are made of bone and ivory ... and are fixed in place, as neatly as possible, with a silver wire by the help of pincers."

Wires for that purpose were made of gold as well as silver. They were passed around the true teeth.

Complete sets of false teeth were made in olden Europe, but they did not become common until the past century.

Our engineers expressed a wise forethought for the dentist when they so designed the S. S. Consider for a moment, what this feature means to you; it permits you to commence your practice with a sparkling new, inviting, efficient, fully guaranteed, trouble-free unit and chair without over-taxing your financial resources, and without creating a burdensome overhead expense at the period in practice when thrift in purchasing is most important.

New equipment makes a more fitting impression upon the patient, too, and as the practice warrants, a junior unit can be built up to the summit of efficiency expressed in the S. S. White Equipment Unit 61 D.

If you plan to equip a new office or renovate an established office, you are cordially invited to take advantage of the services of our Office Planning Department. The service is free and does not entail any obligation on your part. Dental dealers who distribute S. S. White Equipment will explain the details of this service and those of the S. S. DENTISTS—OLD AND NEW

IV—BETTER DENTISTS

In olden days it was a custom for a young man who wanted to be a dentist to become an "apprentice." He served as helper to a dentist who filled teeth or pulled them out. From the older man, he also learned the art of making false teeth.

Truth to tell, there was not a great deal of "art" in the profession. Most dentists were rough and ready men, who would pull a tooth or half a dozen teeth from a patient's jaw without much worry.

Then came the day of dental colleges. Youths and young men went to school to learn how to be dentists.

In this century, dental colleges have grown up on our continent and abroad. One in Philadelphia became famous after the American Civil War.

Modern dentists use X-ray machines to help them tell whether or not teeth should be pulled. If there is an abscess in or near the root, the usual course is to pull the tooth; but sometimes the abscess is drained, and the tooth is saved.

Early in the present century, tests were made in England and Germany to find out how much the health of school children could be improved by good care of the teeth.

Tests of much the same kind have been made in several cities of the United States. In Bridgeport, Conn., the teeth of children were watched and treated during a period of five years. As a result, their health came to be much better. Only half as many failed to pass from one grade to another as before the care was given.

In Atlanta, Ga., a dental clinic was placed in one large school, and Supt. Willis A. Sutton reported these results:

The pupils were less often absent. A smaller number failed to pass from one grade to another. There was more gain in weight than usual. The children seemed more happy, and their general health was better.

After the success in the first school, dental clinics were placed in other schools in Atlanta, Mr. Sutton declared that this brought a saving of at least $150,000 a year to the city, because not so many children had to be taught in the same grade for two years.

You may be sure there was a great deal of pain for the patients, but the dentists did the best they knew how. They filled or "stopped" the cavities with metal of one kind or another.

Lead was one of the metals used for filling or "stopping" the teeth in early days. Gold, silver and tin foil were also employed.

More than half a century ago, a drilling machine began to come into widespread use. By pressing his foot, the dentist could make a lever move and a wheel turn. The drill which he held in his hand went round and round, and kept cutting into the tooth of his patient.

Such drills were to be seen in dentists' offices all through what some persons call the "Gay Nineties"— that is, the period from 1890 to 1899. I am not sure that those years were any more gay than any other period of history, but they have that name.

Certainly the patients did not have a very "gay" time. The drilling caused much pain. Women wept, children cried, and men groaned.

Today there is not nearly so much pain in a visit to the office of a good dentist. The teeth are treated with great care. X-ray pictures are made before a tooth is pulled out. There is much less "guess work" than in days gone by.

When a tooth must be pulled, a dentist usually puts novocaine or something else in the gum. This deadens the pain. Now and then a patient takes "laughing gas," and when he awakens he may not realize that the tooth is gone.

Pulling a tooth may end toothache, or may be helpful in other ways, but we should do our best to keep all of our second set of teeth.

If young persons keep their teeth clean, eat the right kind of food, and let a good dentist look over their teeth once or twice each year, they are likely to go through life with strong, well-working teeth.

The old foot-driven drill has given way to one which is turned by electric power.

There is a bit of decay in a tooth (not too much), it can be taken out and the cavity filled with little or no pain.

There is reason to believe that drinking a good-size glass of orange juice each day does much to prevent the decay of teeth. Milk and play in the sunshine are other important helps for boys and girls.

OUR STUDENT COUNCIL

The Student Council has been very active this year. It has shown an interest in the welfare of the school and has expressed the desires of the student body.

The Assembly Hour conducted each Saturday morning by members of the Council has been a great help to the students. The excellent talks have helped to give the students a wider conception of life and its various endeavors.

This organization has sponsored "Skit Night," a tennis tournament, a "Plaster Bowl Football Classic," and many other school activities which, through the continued interest of the students, will become annual affairs.

We appreciate the work of this body and hope next year's Council will continue to carry on in a large way.

FRESHMAN PLEA

We, as scholars, and the undersigned,
Beg the faculty to bear in mind;
Our leisure is rare; our pleasures few,
And work was made for mules to do.
To strive, to seek, to find, and not to yield,
Is, as the faculty says, the way to feel.
Personally, we in our own little way,
Had rather take each so-short day,
And strive and seek and pleasure find
And not be burdened with work on the mind.
The tale is told, we freshmen hear
Of the boy who failed—didn't finish his year,
His father swore, his mother wept,
His brother stormed, but he just slept.

So they let the sleeping beauty lie,
And there he is as time goes by,
A snoring monument to indolence and waste,
Lack of study, application, and darn bad taste.
Now, that we dread, and with a horror so deep
It most interferes with our much needed sleep.
For sleep we need, for work we do
And that makes us say again to you:
Lighten up a bit—give us more time
Let us rest more—say sleep till nine—
And such dentists we'll make, and so proud you'll be
That you have graduated such as we.
