FOREWORD

The Students of Emory College take pleasure in presenting to all Emory men "The Emory Campus 1913." We trust that the portrayal of college activities in this volume will be of interest and value now and in future years, to both students and alumni.

History of Senior Class

N account of the insistent demand of the Business Manager of the Campus it has become necessary that a final history of the class of 1913 be written.

On the evening before we have watched the countless rays of light dispel the gloom of early dawn, we have seen a solid mass of glorious brilliance sink behind the western horizon. So must the history of the class of '13 sink behind the horizon in reality, 'ere morning breaks forth showing the light each individual beam shall cast. We would not portray a sunset as a Remington with a riot of brilliant colors. It is rather the subdued and intermingling effect of forty five combined that we would sketch in outline.

We shall pursue the usual resume of achievement before giving what we consider '13 most notable victory.

In athletics we started by winning the first pennant we tried for, a feat seldom accomplished. In this branch our class has the honor of winning more pennants than any of the eight classes we have opposed in our career. At least one has been awarded us in all the five departments of athletics. Perryman since joining our class, has led the Virginia league and will report to the New York giants after graduation. We have had the unprecedented honor of having our entire basketball team of Carlton, Lasseter, Blake, Perryman and Fraser chosen as the All-Emory team, and Shaver made the highest average in Gym. exam ever recorded at Emory.

In scholarship we have upheld our standard. We will graduate at least one magna cum laude and a coterie of cum laude men.

In literary work we have been well represented. When Sophomore we were represented on Champion Debate. When Junior three of six Champion Debaters were of '13, while as Senior five of our number will represent us in June. When Juniors we shared equal with the honors in Intercollegiate Debate, while this year both men against Emory and Henry are Seniors.

Our esthetic development has not been neglected. We will soon be represented in Grand Opera by Antonio Scotti and Dr. Tiny Brain Magath, while Foote and Cherry have produced masterpieces in the realm of art and poetry.

One of the most pleasant memories of our course at Emory will be that of the Senior Banquet on the night of February 8th, at the New Kimball, in Atlanta. The occasion was made a most pleasant one by the presence of Dr. James E. Dickey, and our coaches, Prof. James P. Hanner, Jr., and Dr. E. K. Turner.

The most brilliant diadem in our crown of achievement was set by the King with a halo of welcome, when in Senior Bible he praised the loyalty of the class of '13 to Emory.
Secluded the din of commerce and industry we have learned to love the shady haunts of Emory's campus, and under her benign influence we have formed ties of friendship which bind us together in our loyalty to her.

With every rose there is a thorn, so amid the joys of a glad commencement occasion is the sadness of bidding farewell to forty-five classmates who have borne each other's burdens and shared each other's joys.

Whether in the sunshine or prosperity or in the shadows of adversity we will always love and treasure the memories of our life at Emory.

BOND ALMAND, PH.B.
Lithonia, Ga.

Entered Fall '10.

Sigma Nu Fraternity, Phi Gamma Literary Society, Sec-Treas. Freshman Class, '10; Fresh-Soph. Debate, '11; Special Gym. '11; Mid Term Debate, '12; Baseball, '12, '13; President Phi Gamma; Relay Team, '12; Chrm. Publication Com. and Member Central Board; Orchestra, '12; Valedictorian Phi Gamma Senior dismissal, '13.

Of all the freaks of nature Bond is the freakiest one going. He is the originator of many a joke of the "Rube" variety, and in fact he has only one dangerous rival along this line, said rival being "Jack" Tilly. It is said that he is a prospective candidate for the presidency of the "Runts" Club, being opposed by such runts as "Cutter" Culver and "Buck." However, we predict for Bond a successful future, despite his miniature physique.

"I am a Jew, else an Ebrew Jew."
J. EDWIN BARNHILL, PH.B.
GLENWOOD, GA.
 Entered College Fall 1910.

Member Few Literary Society; Ministerial Association, and Secretary, '12-'13; Y. M. C. A.; S. G. C. Club; Spring Term Debate, '11; Special Gymnasium Class, '11; Welcome Address Few Anniversary, '11; Chairman Board of Directors Few Society, '12, '13; Class Chaplain, '11, '12, '13; Georgia Students Missionary Convention, '11; Spring Term Debate, '12; Impromptu Debate, '12; Editor-in-Chief of The Emory Campus, '13.

J. Edwin has led a checkered career at Emory. He is a consistent booster of South Georgia, and the S. C. G. Club. He is a very consistent debater, having upheld the standard of his literary society before the public on several occasions. His political ability landed him the plum of the Annual, and he has spent his Senior year reposing in the revolving chair which goes with this high office.

"Sometimes it is easiest to number your successes by counting the chances you did not take."
J. HAMBY BARTON, A.B.
PINE LOG, GA.
Entered College 1908.

Member of Few Literary Society; Member of the Ministerial Association; Y. M. C. A.; Chaplain of the class of 1908-'09; President of Class 1909-'10; 1910-'11; Mid-Term Debater, 1910; Honor Roll, 1909-'10; Secretary and Treasurer of the Ministerial Association, 1909-'10; Vice-President of the Woodrow Wilson Club, 1911-'12; Few Anniversary Orator, 1912; President of Few Literary Society, 1913.

J. Hamby emerged from some place in Bartow County in the fall of 1908, and entered Emory. He may be numbered among the very few who served time in Subdom and who now have the dignity of Senior.

For some unknown reason J. Hamby has a greater amount of affection than usual for his name—the one for which the "H" stands. Maybe his recent trip to Augusta would tell why.

"For strong limits can not hold love out."

JOHN RENNIE BLAKE, A.B.
MANSFIELD, GA.
Entered College Fall 1909.

Pi Kappa Phi Fraternity; Business Manager The Emory Weekly; N. O. W. Social Club; Relay Team, '11, '12; Football Team, '11, '12; Basketball Team, '11, '12, '13; Baseball Team, '11, '12, '13; All-Emory Baseball Team, '11, '12, '13; All-Emory Basketball Team, '11, '12, '13; Captain Basketball team, '12.

"Runey," an inhabitant of the nearby village of Mansfield, occupied his time this spring aside from shooting goals and chasing fouls, by going down home when he pleased. But one day Dr. Dickey happened to be going down at the same time as the gentleman in question and Runey's trips were not quite so frequent afterward—Why?

"The door of love his heart would unlock,
But his face; Oh, my! would stop a clock."
H. R. BOWLES, PH.B.

OAKLAND, GA.

Entered College Fall 1909.

Baseball Team, '11, '12, '13; Captain Baseball Team, 1912; Manager Baseball Team, 1913; Football Team, '11, '12; Manager Football Team, '12.

“Rube” came to College deeply in love with his little girl at home. And for three years and a half he remained true to her. But during the spring term Senior year he went to Decatur and on his return he got into Oxford society. For further particulars apply to “Punk” Munroe.

“Rube” once thought he could play baseball and thought he would easily win an “E.” But the boys ragged him so about his “E” until he has about decided that he can’t play baseball very well and that he will be unable to win an “E” during his College course. But anyway “Rube” is a clever chap.

“Let another man praise thee, not thine own mouth.”
TANDY E. BUSH, S.B.

LAWRENCEVILLE, GA.

Entered College Fall 1910.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon Fraternity; Few Literary Society; Pan-Hellenic Council, '11, '12; '12, '13; Associate Editor Emory Weekly; Relay Team, '11, '12; Basketball Team, '13.

Tandy comes to us from Gwinnett County and, patriotic son that he is, proclaims his to be the banner County of the State. Tandy says they make the finest kind of "sorghum molasses." Have you ever seen him? He is one of the most dignified fellows you ever saw, except when he's otherwise. Tandy is much of a lady-killer; one time he kept up correspondence with a certain young lady six months after she had married the other fellow, before he found it out.

"A good name is rather to be chosen than many honors."
Buxton is just an atom in size, but about the gamest atom that ever hit the iceburg. He unhesitatingly attacked the two hundred pound Mellin food man of the class in gym and won the property of volatile. We say he is an atom physically. He is just the size of Ferdy, who claims he belongs to the biological realm. Oedipus as earnestly believes Buck belongs to the chemical world and classes him as a Girard atom with the following properties, happy, popular, humorous and volatile.

"From a little spark may burst a mighty flame."
Aight after night he sat and cleared his eyes with chemistry.

WILBUR A. CARLTON, A.B.
Arcadia, Fla.
Entered College Fall 1910.

D.V.S.; Member and Director of Few Literary Society; Florida Club; President of Florida Club, '13; Member of Judicial Committee of Student Government, '12; Glee Club, '11, '12, '13; Spring Term Debater, '12; Commencement Speaker, '12; Relay Team, '10, '11, '12; Basketball Team, '11, '12, '13; Manager Basketball Team, '12, '13; All-Emory Basketball Team, '12, '13; Track Team, '11, '12; All-Emory Track Team, '12; Manager Track Team, '13; Special Gymnasium, '12; Football Team, '12; Chairman of Athletic Committee of Student Government Association, '13.

The big boy is the voice of the State of Florida. He has assisted in reminding us all that Florida was on the map. When it comes to athletics he can jump, run, play basketball and "bawls" with his exclamation of "Son of a Gun," on all occasions when something goes wrong. Brawn is not his only asset, for honor rolls come his way.

"Night after night he sat and cleared his eyes with chemistry."

SAMUEL D. CHERRY, A.B.
DANIA, FLORIDA
Entered College Fall 1908.

Few Literary Society; Florida Club; Relay Team, '10, '11, '12; Few Anniversary Poet, '10; Impromptu Debater, '10, '12; Class Poet, '11, '12; Member Y. M. C. A.; President Few Literary Society, '13; Ministerial Association.

All hail the class poet who gives Kentucky as his birthplace and Florida as his home. These things make him irresistible with the ladies. There was said to be a girl left behind when he entered five years ago, but his Midway visits seem to show this erroneous.

ZETELLA, GA.

Entered College Fall Term, 1910.

Member of Phi Gamma Literary Society; Relay Team, '11 and '12; Football Team, '11 and '12.

"Dick" is a man with a future. Whatever he does, he does all over; when he is playing football, his physiognomy rivals that of the clown in the big circus—however, his is more serious. Dick's is a reserved and unpretentious disposition; his emotional side is unexplored, but it may be safely assumed that he has a proper appreciation for the sentimental. He is one of "Madam's" pets, and it is thought that if he stayed here a few more years he would acquire a stiff "bootlick."

CULVERTON, GA.

Phi Delta Theta Fraternity; Phi Gamma Literary Society; Baseball, '11, '12, '13; Football, '11, '12; All-Emory Football, '12; Special Gym., '12.

Culver is the guy that put Culverton on the map. His fortune being told in his infancy, the name of Emory C. was bestowed upon him in honor of his future Alma Mater, and in due course of time "Cutter" made his appearance on the College campus, where he has made himself known in more ways than one during the past four years. Neither on the gridiron nor on the diamond does "Cutter" fail to live up to his appellation.

"This I call a tragedy, that a man should die ignorant who had a capacity for knowledge."
HENRY GRADY ELLINGTON, Ph.B.
OXFORD, GA.
Entered College Fall '09.
Honor Roll, '10; Relay Team, '10, '11, '12; Latin Medal, '12.

Grady got his "rep" running relay and "shooting 'Zeke.'" He has a brilliant mind and a keen appreciation for the emotional and the aesthetic. Although not widely known, he is well thought of among those who know him. However, he has one weakness—he has his feelings about the ladies. Grady is his older brother Till's chief adviser in his troubles with "Madam" and the other "Profs."

"He was a scholar and a ripe and good one."
JOSEPH TILDEN ELLINGTON,
Ph.B.
OXFORD, GA.
Entered College Fall '09.
Honor Roll '10.

This personage is an inhabitant of Newton County, residing somewhere in the outlying suburbs of Oxford. He did not enter Emory College for the purpose of making an athletic record, but has rather made a specialty of studying—this branch of College activities being less overcrowded than the profession of athletics, politics, et al., therefore affording more opportunity of distinction. He was observed once out on the baseball field this spring, however, on which occasion he is reputed to have caught a fly with considerable dexterity.

"Feets," as probably the best-liked man in the school is called, is an artist not only in his ability to delineate the strength and weakness of the faculty and students but he is also an artist in temperament. He is the College commedian and impersonator. He can talk so much like Nag that Billie will open the gym too early, and can sing like Shoal and laugh like Oedipus.

His artistic temperament caused him to have no opponent for Art Editorship of the CAMPUS, which position he has held during his entire College course.
WALTER B. FRASER, A.B.
ARABI, GA.

Entered College Fall 1909.

Basketball Team, '11, '12, '13; All-Emory Basketball Team, '13; Sophomore Speaker, '11; Relay Team, '10, '11, '12; Fall Term Debate, '11; Junior Respondent, '12; Chairman Judicial Committee and Member of Central Board; Member of Board of Directors of Few Society, '12; Senior Banquet Speaker; Impromptu Debate, '12; Delegate Georgia Student Association, '13; Member Y. M. C. A.

Honor to whom honor is due, for so sure as Wilson is president, Walter put Arabi on the map. While Walt, as he is sometimes called, became famous as the "protector" of the Constitution of the Student Government Association, he also became famous as the participant in a love affair which came to an end, as they very often do, by the girl marrying the other fellow. This had a very bad effect on Walt,—he became a gambler and won fifteen cents.

Luther is an ardent admirer of Harrell's ability, which ability he has demonstrated more than once. Early discerning the trend of affairs he hopped on the band wagon as Little Albert and served as a lieutenant, demanding at intervals recognition for his service. He secured it. He is much of a ladies man.

This versatile and ingenious Cordele product landed at Emory “ker plunk,” and he wasted no time in reciting his marvelous high school record. He consented through patriotism to enter athletics and served nobly various teams. He was dubbed by the president “the pale-face gladiator.” Dillard started off by shootin'-em-up in class, but Bessie Tift made demands upon his “social me” and other things were given up.

This elongated specimen of humanity hails from the classic little mountain town of Waleska. The solitude was too strenous for him, however, so three years ago he migrated to Oxford for his health. There is a rumor that J. Bradley once went to Sunday-school and church twice in one day, but the report was doubtless considerably exaggerated. In a moment of heedlessness he took the B.S. course. Nature stamped him in a mould several sizes longer than usual, which necessitated his getting a transit provided with stilts in order to accommodate his lofty vision.

Verily, a human encyclopaedia. If you want it, or if you don’t want it, “Puss” will furnish you with information on any subject imaginable. "Juicy Baby" is one of the many samples of Jackson, a town somewhere in Butts County. "Juicy," a clever, genial little boy and shoot-'em-up, does especially bring praise from the eloquent tongue of the "King" in Bible. But don't accuse "Juicy" of trying to "boothlick" the "King," for he said he did not "boothlick" the Profs., and "Juicy" is a truthful man.

He was the first man to say let there be electric light, and there was electric light in Oxford. Missing some of the earlier advantages in education Marshall has come from Subdom to Senior with credit and honor and respect and best wishes of faculty and students.

"Red," as he is known to all, is regarded the successor of "Boss" Pittman. Outside of the political world at Emory, "Red" has won many honors, but the latest one he has pulled was to travel one hundred and fifty miles to tell a certain lady friend that he had made a place on the Intercollegiate Debate team, and on his arrival found that the lady was not in town. You can’t tell what a red-headed man will do when he is in love.

Just why Cecil selected Taylor's Creek as his birthplace and home we do not know, as we have not seen the ads sent out by the Chamber of Commerce, but we judge the fishing and bathing facilities are an important factor as well as the fact that the surrounding pine forest contained a gold mine in its turpentine. When Madame read the name Olmstead he at once saw visions of another great mathematician. Cecil saw his chance, closed his book and sailed through on his name. Ever since Professor Peed has exclaimed, "What's in a name?"

The Giant Perryman is the property of the New York National team. After leading the Virginia League McGraw decided he needed a minister on his pitching staff. While the baseball world declare him the property of the National League Champs, there are others who say there is a girl who has some few strings tied to him and that she is the real owner. Perry is a big, broad-minded and conservative fellow which makes him the Class's most popular member.

Garland, like many other Robesons, came to Emory. He is another type of the conservative and even-tenored students who attend the "main tent." Few know him well, but there are fewer that he does not know. He keeps informed on every move made in College, but none have ever discovered his system. He does things but the outside world never knows. There is a lady at Wesleyan. There is one at Brenau. We predict he will be the first to plank down $2.25 à la the Ordinary.

Several years ago another Rumble had a call to Emory. It was Urban this time, for not that Rumbles before and since his time have responded to that call—a family weakness we might say. He had the task of upholding the standard set by others of that name. This was no easy task. He has done this "trailing clouds of glory" as our friend R. L. S. would say. As a man, athlete, debater and student he has ranked with the best.

When the fair-complexed, auburn-haired lad from Jackson arrived with his over two hundred pounds of avoirdupois and his Sunday-school record it was with a fixed determination to make history at Emory and have it distinctly understood that he was an except to the rule that nobody loves a fat man. It took Dr. Peppier a term to prove to Shaver which knew the most Greek. He is famous as the man that sent in his waist measurement for his height, as once Ed-in-Chief of the Emory Weekly, for his Hungarian appetite and as being from Butts County.

What? Don't know "Neb" Walton? Why he's that handsome guy from Washington, Georgia—not D. Some few may have the nerve to say that "Neb" is not lazy, but, generally, it takes only one peep at his countenance while he is posing on Bill Burt's bench to tell that he is not such a one as would overexert himself.

There's a sadness in the gladness of the gayest things of earth.
   There's a gladness in the sadness of the sea;
But, with all its raging madness,
Its benevolence and badness,
   This old world is plenty good enough for me.

Now they teach it in astronomy about the planet Mars,
   That its people are more civilized than we;
In that land so bright and mystic
Everybody's altruistic,
   But, the neighbors here are kind enough for me.

And they tell us with a promise there's a better world to come,
   Some eternal joy beyond the bluest sky,
And I reckon we'll be given
Every pleasure up in heaven,
   But no moving van for me until I die!

Composed by Tom Burnside, '14.
History of the Junior Class

BOUT four years ago, (or as some one has said "Four Royal haircuts ago"), during the reign of our good King James, a little band of boys, scouting along the borders of this Royal Majesty, in quest of knowledge, were discovered and seized by the "out-posts" of the "Greater Emory Club."

They were immediately conveyed into the presence of his Royal Majesty's "Prime Minister." He "observed" that they were "green" and unripe for the Freshman Class, so they were assigned to the good and tender mercies of the "head of the nursery department, with the characteristic remark, "Aha! You will observe" (later on, in their quest for knowledge).

With this little band as a nucleus we have builded a Class that at present numbers thirty-one members.

And while not a Class celebrated for it's brilliancy, neither famed for athletic feats performed, nor for its forensic abilities, yet, the Class of Nineteen Hundred and Fourteen is an all-round representative Class.

The fact has been demonstrated that the Class, although numerically small, is true in spirit, and "game" to the core.

In the debates we are well represented on all occasions, and the Class of '14 may yet produce those that might readily prove their metal with a Clay or a Grady.

In literary attainment we also stand well. We have a few "brilliant lights," noted for achievements in class-room work, such as Wright, Strozier, Barney, and Rivers, who just won't allow their luminosity "to be placed under a bushel."

Taken as a whole the Class is a representative Class.

In athletics we stand well, but the "Fates have decreed that our brows should not be adorned with the wreath of oak leaves." The never-say-die spirit, when fighting against countless odds has elicited admiration of the different classes, for the Class of 1914. This spirit of fighting to a finish a losing battle, always demands the respect and admiration of a sportsman anywhere.

On the football team, Saxon, Burnside, Penick, and Pierce, are in themselves bulwarks of strength. In baseball we made a good showing. Outler, Crittenden, and Rogers are wearers of the "E."

Above all let us not forget our "politicians," who have shown themselves to be artists of no mean ability.

We have striven to attain the high ideals of the representative College Class, knowing that the more we attain, the more clearly we see the boundless unattained, unless we strive for the infinite good—the power to think and appreciate the thoughts of others.

History of the Sophomore Class

In the fall of 1911 the Rubicon was crossed; the die cast. A bunch of seventy-five fellows entered Emory with that determination to do, or to die in the attempt. Now after the passing of almost two years, although many have dropped out and their places filled with others, yet the same old "bull-dog" spirit remains. And as we look back, we see that the Class of '15 does not lack for history; we've been doing things, and to-day stand second to none at Emory.

In athletics we began making our "Rep" when, as green little Freshies, we ran away with the relay pennant and learned how to scrap. Since that fateful day we have placed as many as eighteen men on the All-Emory teams, and hung up in our halls of fame three pennants. Last year, under the sole coaching of Prof. J. G. Stipe, we developed a grand aggregation of ball tossers and with them a desire for the pennant, which was our's for the taking. On the "Varsity, seven out of the fourteen men chosen were ours.

During the football season just past, under the superb coaching of Prof. G. P. Shingler, we developed one of the best gridiron machines that has ever worked on Weber field. Team work was the secret of our success, only twice during the season did we stand under the shadow of our own goal posts. The mighty Seniors accepted two big goose eggs for their contests with us, and realized the fact that they were not in our class when it came to playing football. At the close of the basketball season we came out second, giving the pennant winners a slight attack of heart failure in the last game by our jam-up playing. Next year, this pennant, we hope to hang alongside the others, and we may wisely say that our hopes are not unfounded.

But the Class of '15 is not one merely of athletes, as it might seem to some. We have our shoot-'em-ups, those who are disappointed when they get a nine-five, and there are those among us who happily go their ways with little sixes tacked on their papers. Of orators and debaters we do not lack. There are many of our number to whom it is a delight to stand in the debating halls and fight out knotty problems there presented. On the Champion Debate this year one of our men will do honor to his Class. And so it is in every phase of college life, we are seen in the lead.

And thus may the years which are to come
Be to us as those which have gone.
With victories that have come fast
We reach the Hall of Fame at last. Excelsior!

History of Class of '16

HE skilled fingers of the upper classmen have fashioned the unoffending Freshmen in caricatures that resemble most any creature from a rabbering hippopotamus to a cavern-mouth giraffe. But this matters little to us, as everyone knows that no other but prominent people are given so much thought and attention as to have funny pictures drawn of them. Just a glance at the newspaper likenesses of our great modern heroes, William H. Taft and Theodore Roosevelt, will convince any skeptic of the truth of this statement. This being the case, the Class of '16 is expecting more than their portion of ridiculous pictures and embarrassing jokes, as already it has won several victories in the various College contests.

Our first great success was the winning of the relay race, in which we, like the marathon runners of old, plunged forward to the goal, leaving far to the rear our dear friends the Sophs and the upper-classmen. We wonder if the Sophs have forgotten the scrap which followed, how their pretty little faces and well-kept locks were sadly bedraggled with the colored inks and paints slung by the valiant forces of the Freshmen?

But the half is not yet told. Must the bloody scene of the gridiron and its great decisive battle be mentioned here? The upper-classmen and the Sophs have nothing to answer. Nevertheless, here are the facts: The Sophomores played both the Juniors and Seniors and succeeded in winning from them by a good score. Their hearts were jubilant then with what they called a "cinched" victory. They forgot however, that they had not yet met the Freshmen. But what could a Freshman team do against one that had achieved so much? With much due the careful training of Coach Peebles, it tied the score with the confident Sophs.

Good work has also been done in basketball and none there be who could convince the baseball team that it will not take the pennant. Already we have beaten the Sophs, Merrit, our great heaver, hurling us to victory, and now on tanks and houses you may see huge red "'16's."

Judging from our athletic achievements one would think that we were physical giants. It is a fact that the strength of our muscles is only surpassed by the greatness of our intellects. Though many of our number were "hanged by the necks 'till dead," upon Madam's Trig., they died like martyrs on the gibbet—fought a good fight, then gave up the ghost. The surviving mourners have buried their dead and now hopefully await resurrection sometime in Senior year.

Bringing to a close the annals of a great year so well begun, we can not refrain from quoting that little verse, taken somewhere from Mark Twain, I think, that

"Lives of Freshmen all remind us,
We can make our lives sublime,
And departing, leave behind us,
Foot-prints in the sands of Time."

Extract from the Autobiography of a Sophomore

MONDAY. Got up in time to attend Few Gamma, as it was not my roll to speak. Went out to ball game this afternoon. Freshmen and Sophs had a little scrap about the game, in which I got plenty of dirt, and lost my cap and all of my shirt but the collar. Went to the movies in Cov. to-night.

TUESDAY. Forgot to get up any lessons yesterday, so I turned out at 4 a.m. and boned till breakfast. Foxy got facetious again to-day in Physics; told us his little jokes about the effects of moonlight. Great applause. Pitched dollars all afternoon, so I had to retire early to recuperate.

WEDNESDAY. Got up to breakfast. Got shot in 2nd sub Greek. Zeke pulled off his little joke this morning about drinking beer in Germany. Made me thirsty. Exam in Greek in the morning, so I have been exercising my little mule for six hours since supper. Bravely I rode, and well, if he carries me across to-morrow. Hope I shall make 9.

THURSDAY. Think I got about 6.5 on Greek Exam. this morning. Mutts gave us the benefit of his favorite pun to-day; the only time he's got it off since Christmas. Took Physics Lab. after dinner, and found by experiment what is the difference between an Ampere and an Oxometer. Played checkers after supper.

FRIDAY. Learned to-day that I got 5.3 or that Greek Exam., third highest mark made in the Class. Got a letter from home with good news therein, in other words, a check. Played mumble peg (?) till midnight, with most atrocious bad luck; went set every other time I bid.

SATURDAY. Arose at five minutes to eight and went to class. Pug cracked eleven separate and distinct jokes in Bible Class. Sub shot me in Economics, but luckily forgot to put it down against me; Madam gave us a comparatively fresh piece of witticism, thereby winning enthusiastic applause as usual. Went to Cov. after dinner. Played tiddle-de-winks (?) to-night till eleven, but refused to continue over into Sunday morning. Had good luck to-night. Drew a royal straight flush on the last deal and raked in 47 matches on two of a kind once. I hear the 2 o'clock train whistle, so presume it is bedtime. Have got my clock set to wake me 25 minutes before dinner.
O WRITE a history of the Sub-Freshman Class is a task somewhat like recording the events of day-after-to-morrow. We hope some day to have a history, a most glorious history at that, but at present most of our history is not history, merely expectation or embryonic history. Since we have no past, the office of historian is somewhat superfluous. The prophecy of the Class could more easily be written, but we content ourselves with a modest statement of our present position and attainments. We are no doubt green and a bit "fresh," but not so fresh as our Brother Freshmen, who boast a knowledge of things never taught in College.

From time immemorial the Sub-Freshman Class has been abused, but, while the word "Sub" applied to members of other classes has come to be an opprobrious epithet, to members of the Class of '17 it is merely a title of distinction.

Owing to the unusual ability displayed by a member of our Class, our Brother Freshmen have succeeded in winning the relay pennant for two successive years, and of the three men who are entitled to wear an "E" now in track, one is a member of our Class. After covering ourselves with glory in the afternoon of the relay race, we were covered with paint, ink and grease in the scrap that followed that night.

Not being allowed a football team, we furnished valuable material to the Freshmen and hope to do honor to our Class during the approaching baseball season.

We deeply deplore the loss of a worthy classmate, William Stewart, who "vowed" that he would learn to "skin the cat" if it took him until Commencement. We possess elements of genius, although we have in our midst one who is of the opinion that Hawthorne wrote Franklin's autobiography.

Nevertheless we are striving mightily and should we be successful against the fearful onslaughts of "Madam's" Trig and Analyt., we hope some day to don the cap and gown and occupy the rear seats in chapel.

The Student Government Association

Good governments must come about through time and change, the errors of the past are lessons for us of the present. All governments have to go through early stages of evolution and advancement before those governments can obtain the essentials of good government, that is, equilibrium, efficiency and responsibility.

It was through the inadequate and inefficient qualities and lack of unity in the Emory student body that opened the eyes of those men in the 1911 Class, those who fathered the idea of a new management for the student affairs, and after untiring efforts presented the constitution of a body to be known as the Student Government Association. This was presented with the main thought as expressed in the preamble: "An organization to unite the Emory College student body, develop a College spirit at Emory and to place the students as a whole in a position to work for a greater Emory."

It was simply bringing together the students into an organized body, that they might accomplish greater things and be as mutual aid to each other. Instead of the athletics at Emory being fostered by a few, and instead of the publications being in the hands of the Literary societies and the other interests of the students being separate and distinct, these were all brought together into one association.

The whole theme of the student government is quite unique in its make-up of component parts of student government requisites. There is a president who presides at the meetings, a vice-president, secretary, a treasurer, who is from the faculty, and four committees, namely, Athletic, Judicial, Greater Emory and Publication, each having three members. The above officers, with the chairman of each committee and with exception of the treasurer, compose the governing board or cabinet, known as the Central Board. All legislation and amendments have to go through this body; it might be called a check on the student body.

The Athletic Committee has control of all athletics, keeps the athletic field, tennis courts and track in condition, it makes the various schedules, and makes necessary expenditures for its general maintenance. The present Committee is as follows: W. A. Charlton, Chairman; J. H. Saxon and Charles Bickley.

The Greater Emory Committee works for the upbuilding of Emory as a whole. It endeavors to show the prospective college man what Emory offers. This year's Committee is L. A. Harrell, Chairman; John Nelson and J. D. McCord.

The Judicial Committee is one of dignity and its sole duty is to enforce the constitution and deal with those who violate said precepts. The 1913 Committee is W. B. Fraser, Chairman; P. E. Brown, L. Rumble.

The Committee on Student Publications have supervision over the student publications and reports are made to this Committee and auditing of the business manager's books are some of the committee's powers. Under the present scheme the Phoenix has surpassed all other years, and next year the Emory Weekly will be revived. This Committee is composed of: Bond Almand, Chairman; G. W. Munroe and O. R. Thompson.

The other officers of the Association are: J. E. Mathews, President; E. W. Strozier, vice-president; J. W. Richardson, Secretary; Prof. N. A. Goodyear, Treasurer.

Benefits of the new government have already been felt. The student realizes he is a member of an organization that demands his own aid and support. The nominal sum entitles him to read the two publications and witness all athletic events and lastly to be a member of an Association which is working for a greater and better Emory.

F. A. Wilson ............. Treasurer
J. W. Nelson ............. Secretary

While the other departments of the Student Government Association are concerned with the students during their College career, the Greater Emory Department is even more concerned in them. We hope through the activities of this department to proclaim the advantages which Emory has to offer to those young men who are going away to College and to attract them to Emory.

This Department stands for a greater and better College publication, greater literary societies, and for an increased enrollment at Emory.
Niagara

O streaming, madd'ning onward rush
Of water's roll,
Amid the voiceless, soothing hush
Of nature's soul,
A mighty wonder God hath wrought,
So weird and vast,
Astounding man's dependent thought
Such fears to cast
Upon his weak, inferior mind.

Divinity
Doth tell of Him from out behind
The matchless sea
Of pouring waters. Everything
Created there
Shows man His power. Under His wing
We know His care.

History of Phi Gamma Literary Society

The history of our Society runs hand in hand with that of Emory College. Emory was founded in the year 1836 and such was the necessity for exercise of the oratorical powers of College men of that time that not a year had passed before a Society was organized to meet this much-felt need. This was the day of Webster and Clay, and of Calhoun from a neighboring State, and the influence of these giants of the rostrum as they swayed the national Congress, called to every ambitious youth to practice that power of speech which could carry conviction to every hearer. Thus it was that one of the first acts of the student body was the founding of a debating society.

March 8, 1837, the students met for the purpose of organization at a residence where the Florida Hall now stands. They elected George W. W. Stone the first president. A Greek name, signifying the purpose of the Society was given to it, and for convenience and a touch of mystery it was to be known to the general public only by the initial letters Phi Gamma. A small room was soon built in the northern part of the campus and this was used for all meetings of the Society until 1879, when the present hall was erected.

The membership of Phi Gamma grew to such an extent that at the end of its second year it was deemed advisable to organize another society. For this purpose the members were divided into two parties, two members "choosing up," and half went over to form the new society, which was called Few, in honor of the first president of Emory.

From the first, intense interest was manifest among the members of each Society. Rivalry waxed strong between them, and often there were great public demonstrations of oratory which were accompanied by parades, with their display of colors and of banners. These occasions necessitated the selection of a color, and for this Phi Gamma selected blue, as opposed to the red of Few Society.

During the Civil War, the operation of the Society was, of course, suspended, but as soon as this was over and Emory College again opened its doors to students, Phi Gamma was back at its work with all its former energy.

In 1873 the Champion Debate was instituted and C. E. Dowman, W. N. Sheats, and O. L. Smith were elected to enter the contest with Few at Commencement. With such champions Phi Gamma won the first debate and continued the stride she had begun by winning the three succeeding. Since then the palm of victory has gone first to one and again to the other, until to-day Phi Gamma can claim but a slight advantage in the number of successful contests.

For many years a library was kept by the Society, first on shelves up stairs and later in a room on the lower floor, which furnished to its members that opportunity for reading which was not provided by the College. This, however, was open for only two periods in each week, so that when Candler Hall was completed in 1902 the two Societies merged their collections and made a gift of them to the College library.

In the later '80's Phi Gamma and Few joined in the publication of a monthly magazine, the Emory Phoenix, the editorial staff each year to be elected from their members. This regime continued for more than twenty years, but the Phoenix, like the libraries, has recently passed from control of the Societies, being taken over by the new Student Government Association on its organization in 1911. With the birth of this magazine and the fostering of the literary spirit at Emory, a monument was erected which will ever stand to the honor of those bodies which founded it.

The character of our Society has changed with the passing of the years. Its constitution and by-laws have been amended or modified in many respects, frequently for the better, but the great underlying purpose has remained the same from the beginning, namely, "To help men to help themselves and be of service to their fellow-men."

F. P. Rivers.

History of Few Literary Society

T IS a well-founded fact that the work of a strong and progressive literary society is a powerful agency conducive to development along educational lines. This fact is exemplified in the history of the literary societies at Emory; for they have trained and sent men from their halls, who by their achievements in the different phases of life have heaped honor and glory upon their alma mater. In this work Few Society has done her full share.

During the spring of 1839 eight men withdrew from Phi Gamma Society and began to make arrangements for the foundation of a sister society. On August 10, 1839, the new society met for the first time. In honor of Emory's first President, the illustrious patriot and educator, it was named Few Society. There were only fourteen present at this meeting; there are now over two thousand names on the matriculation roll.

The first question debated by the Society was: "Resolved, That the petition to the Legislature for the restricted sale of spirits should become a party question," and the decision was rendered in favor of the negative. From the very first the meetings were full of life, being entirely devoid of dryness.

During the war the students at Emory were dispersed and many of them served their country with distinction on the battlefield. Few Hall was converted into a hospital for the brave boys in gray who were wounded. This is the only interruption that has ever occurred in the work of Few Society.

Since then the Society has continued without cessation. On her matriculation roll may be found the names of many who have attained to positions of high order in every walk of life. Among these names are Young J. Allen, Judge John S. Candler, Morgan Callaway, W. P. Lovejoy, J. W. Roberts, L. Z. Rosser, Lawton B. Evans. These are only a small remnant of the scores that might be named who have made themselves worthy of mention.

The past record of Few's history not only confirms the importance of literary society work in College, but it is a story of glorious achievements, as fascinating as the myths of old, which will be an inspiration to its members for generations to come. And surely this brilliant record is an unmistakable indication of an even more glorious future.

Resolved, That as a general policy it would be to the best interest of the country to preserve the rights and powers of the individual States.

A Commencement Episode

PLACE, Oxford. Time, June, 1913.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ

MRS. LEGRARDE, a resident devoted to the students.
MISS MARJORIE HAYS, her niece from Tennessee.
“BIG” CARUTHERS or “BIG ONE,” a flirt.
“LAZY” DAVISON, who likes his pipe and takes his ease.
“PRETTY” TINDALE, handsome but quite selfish.
“FATTY” GRIMES, a jolly good fellow.
HENRY DRANGER, handsome but considered timid.

About two weeks before commencement Mrs. LeGarde made an announcement to the boys boarding at her home. Her niece from Tennessee was coming down to visit classic old Oxford and see it at its best. Mrs. LeGarde hoped the boys would try to make Miss Hay’s visit a pleasant one. Several years before Mrs. LeGarde had visited the Tennessee home and Marjorie was a timid little creature and hardly pretty, but of course the boys would overlook that.

The news spread and the boys gathering in Big Caruthers’ sunny room proceeded to discuss the outlook. Fatty Grimes elected himself chairman, taking the best rocker and lighting his French briar.

Well, gentlemen, you have heard the news. Do I hear a motion so we may discuss the question?”

Pretty Tindale cleared his throat and trying to look very wise rose to his feet.
“By way of preamble let me say I am not fond of the timid, quiet kind. Then I prefer some good looks. I feel like expressing my sympathy for the demure little maid, but please don’t ask me to sacrifice my time.”

“I agree with Pretty,” put in Lazy Davison. “Don’t expect me to do charity during commencement week. It’s no church bazaar. What do you think, Big One?”

“Nothing doing here. All my dates are taken. One sister and two best girls have complicated my slate. Don’t count on me. But let us hear from Henry. Perhaps his fund of wisdom can elucidate matters. Talk out. It’s a free meeting. Hand me a match, Pretty.”

Henry Dranger smiled slightly as he looked out the window. “I am going to do my part, and I told Mrs. LeGarde she could count on me. You fellows do as you like.”

“Mr. Chairman,” addressed Pretty. “Let me make a motion that we hereby surrender all claims, now and forever, to our noble, patriotic and chivalric friend and honorable classmate, Mr. Henry Dranger, and wish him all success and happiness!”
“Second the motion,” puffed Lazy.
“Second the motion,” echoed Big One.
“That’s a majority. No need to vote it,” decided Fatty. It’s up to Henry, and here are our congratulations. Would love to stay longer, but I have some Lab to finish. See you later.

“Good boy, Henry,” grinned one.
“He’s our steady,” patronized another.
“So nice and gallant,” teased the third.
“See you later.”

“So long,” and the executive session was over.

Some days later Miss Marjorie Hays was stepping from the afternoon train, while about fifty Emory boys stood waiting to welcome friends and guests. More than one caught his breath and turned for a second look as Miss Hays passed through the opening quickly made for her. Such a complexion, such blue eyes, and what a wealth of hair just touched with a gleam of gold! Her dress was a white something,—but no one can rightly describe Miss Marjorie or her taste in dress.

Mrs. LeGarde showed her to the car and they were soon waiting only for the train to leave. “I am so glad to see you, dear, and I do hope you shall have a pleasant time. The speakers are excellent and we have some fine students. They are really a splendid set.”

Miss Marjorie examined her trunk check and smiled demurely.

That evening at supper everything was in a flutter of excitement throughout the village. You could hear nothing but engagements and girls, unless it was engagements and Seniors.

After the meal a hurried session was held in Big Caruthers’ room. Some wished to reconsider their hasty action concerning the little visitor, but Dranger said he thought it entirely unnecessary. A bright idea struck Pretty.

“Say fellows, let’s tell Miss Hays that Henry is only a sub. That will kill him and give the rest of us a chance.”

“Give you a chance you mean,” corrected Lazy. “But I favor it. I would approve anything short of murder under the circumstances. What do you say?”

“Tell her Henry is a sub and all stick to it, that’s the dope,” puffed Henry, who was also smitten at first sight.

Just before going to the exercises the visitor, Pretty and Henry were talking on the veranda.

“Yes, Miss Hays, Henry is one of our finest young men and it’s a down right pity he is only a sub. It’s a shame!”
"I hope Miss Hays will forget that I am a sub and that we can be good friends anyway," added Henry in a low gentle voice, as he looked rather appealingly at the vision.

"Indeed we shall," and her voice was like music. "True friendship admits of few barriers."

* * * * *

Days passed. Somehow Miss Marjorie always had an engagement and inevitably Henry was the fortunate one.

One day Pretty found Miss Marjorie alone at the swing. Of course he tried to advance his own interests. After an earnest appeal his companion smiled very sweetly, but in a way to disconcert and not to encourage. When he paused these words greeted him:

"By way of preamble, let me say I am not fond of the timid, quiet kind. Then I prefer some good looks. I feel like expressing my sympathy for the demure little maid, but please don't ask me to sacrifice my time."

"How can you be so cruel," moaned Pretty. "And how did you learn? Did Henry tell you?"

"No, Mr. Dranger has told me nothing," and she smiled radiantly. Pretty was reverently thankful to Lazy, who came up at that moment.

* * * * *

The week was almost spent. Miss Marjorie and Henry were swinging. All the rest, Mrs. LeGarde included, were away. Somehow the friendship had grown and very rapidly, nor did Miss Marjorie seem ashamed of her sub. To Henry it was indeed good to have such a friend and to admire such a girl. Somehow her presence was wonderfully restful to him, though he was afraid to allow himself much hope. The breeze fanned the vines and wafted the perfume past them. The soft air, the setting sun, cast a spell over them.

"Miss Hays, if I were not a poor sub I would try to tell you something. I would tell you how much I prize your friendship and that I would love to come to Tennessee, to your home. It must be beautiful, I know it can't be otherwise, and then too, I should see you. But I can't tell you. Only a sub! Four years!"

Miss Marjorie Hays sat silent, very still, though her heart was not still and in a better light her cheeks might have betrayed her.

"Did you not say that true friendship admits few barriers? Tell me you have enjoyed the week, that you shall not soon forget it," continued Henry. "Please say you do care, just a little. It would mean so much to me. I won't forget these days and hours. I can't forget you. It would be impossible. Forget who or what I am in College classes, could you care for me, the man you have seen these days, not that might be, but is? I know of no other grounds of appeal. Could you?" His voice was low and steady, and her eyes fell from his to her folded hands.
"I think I could care for you and do care for you now. Is that enough?" And again their eyes met.

"You have made me too happy to think or speak of aught else, but to-morrow I shall be graduated. Still I felt I had to win you as you met me, a sub. I wanted you to care for me and only for me."

"I knew all the time you could not be a sub-Freshman, but I couldn't tell you. But I would love you no less even if you were."

The sun, setting beyond the campus, beyond the far away fringed tree tops, threw back his mellowest rays from a glorious West, and the little breeze stirred the vine, again wafting perfume and filling the air with sweetness.

Observations of a Dilettante on the Science of Politics Emoriensis

HIS Scientia Praeclara has been in vogue in saecula saeculorum within the broad empire of Emory. It has never been ascertained with certainty at just what epoch it was added to Emory's already extensive and diversified curriculum, but must be accepted per se, without inquiry into the Why and How thereof, like the existence of Madam on the faculty. According to that brilliant Epigram which Mutts has promulgated for the edification of his Junior English Class, otherwise known as the Law of Immutability,—"What Has pleased, and continues to please, is likely to please again,"—Politics Emoriensis will still be the leading pastime (if we may indeed "Read the future by the past of Man"), for the students of our Alma Mater when the Millenium arrives, and Emory has Intercollegiate Athletics. Like unto the grain of Mustard Seed, which increased so phenomenally until it became the Salt of the Earth and Leaveneth the Whole Lump, flourishing like the Green Bay-tree, yea, like the Cedars of Lebanon, which Toil not, neither do they Spin, Politics has become preternaturally prevalent, until it has now infected all classes, from the Senior, who knows, and knows he knows, even to the Sub, who knows not, and knows not that he knows not.

Whether Politics is in toto beneficial or otherwise to Asa G.'s college, might be made a calorific subject of debate. Undoubtedly, Politics has an Innate Tendency to prove Deleterious to the victim's Scholastic Labors, in that it will lead him away from the Paths of Righteousness and the Lamp of Learning and seduce the political aspirant to fritter away the Golden Hours of Youth by Bill Burt's stove and Henderson's soda fount, in fond hope to inveigle unsophisticated Boobs by a specious display of camaraderie. Truly the science of Politics is from the pursuit of Latin "As far removed as the East is from the West," in the immortal language of the Psalmist and of Zeke. It is, moreover, extremely detrimental to one's pecuniary resources. (For verification of this apothegm, refer to J. E. Red.) The act of furnishing the interior apartments of voters with dopes, does, ipso facto, by inverse ratio, strangely deplete the contents of one's porte-monnaie.

Politics in its nascent and embryonic stages is usually essayed by underclassmen with the touching innocence bred of ignorance of the devious ways thereof. We have often wondered why some second Jim Reeve does not promulgate a motion that the College endow a Chair of Politics Emoriensis, to be filled by some post-graduate of the art. The course should be open as an elective to Juniors, Sophs, Freshmen, Subs, and any Seniors who might desire an extra course. Students who elect such a course, should be required next to run a successful race for some office under the Student Government, before becoming eligible for a Dip.
We ourselves intend some day in the future (when King gets a Hair-cut and Bill Burt sells dopes two for a nickle) to write a monograph on this branch of learning, to be entitled "Elements of Politics a la Emorie," with separate chapters devoted to such points as follows, videlicet, "How to Bring up the Subject of Politics While Discussing the Weather"; "The Gentle Art of Lying"; "How to Fool Freshmen"; and "Complete Lessons in How to Carry on a Game of Checkers, Eat a Sack of Peanuts, and Talk Politics to a Sub and a Senior Simultaneously." This volume will be for sale at the Arcade at the extremely nominal price of $3.50 per,—cash.

As a final word, disappointed candidates would do well to apply to King James, President of the Also-Ran Club, and adopt the classic motto—"Beaten, but not Defeated."
Why We Should Have Intercollegiate Athletics

OR many years the students of Emory College have talked of intercollegiate athletics. There has been a hope, a desire, that some day Emory might be permitted to engage in athletics with other colleges, but until this year no organized effort had ever been made to make this dream a living reality.

At times some students have given vent to their feelings by breaking up college property and painting the college buildings. This is nothing more nor less than vandalism, and it has received from the student body a condemnation that it so justly deserved.

The students of Emory are almost unanimous in their desire for intercollegiate athletics, and believe it is Emory's greatest need to-day. Some of the facts which make the students so much in favor of these sports are:

FIRST. Emory is practically the only college of any importance in the South that does not permit its students to engage in this great phase of college life.

SECOND. It is working well in other colleges, and the students of Emory know of it.

THIRD. There is a spirit of unrest in the student body, a longing desire for participation in this sport. Such a spirit can never be curbed except by granting intercollegiate athletics, that is, as long as high schools and preparatory schools are permitting such. All the men who come to Emory come from these schools which permit them to engage in this sport, therefore, the desire for it is instilled in them before they come to Emory.

FOURTH. It would create among the students and alumni a college spirit.

FIFTH. It is confidently believed that it will do more than any one thing to bring Emory to the forefront of Southern colleges.

SIXTH. Something is wrong somewhere. The enrollment of other colleges are rapidly on the increase, while that of Emory is actually on the decline.

Believing these things, the student body will present a petition to the Board of Trustees in June asking for a trial under proper faculty supervision. Believing that the opinion of the alumni should have some weight in determining the policy of the college, a letter has been written to every graduate briefly stating the conditions and asking if he is in favor of intercollegiate athletics, under proper faculty supervision, and why. The petition of the student body, all the replies to these letters and other facts bearing directly on the question will be presented to the Board.

The students believe that a trial will do no harm, but on the other hand, will be the tonic that will give Emory new life. They are going to make one strong, determined, organized effort to realize their fondest hope. Their movement is in no spirit of antagonism to the administration or the Trustees, but rather in a spirit of Greater Emory, a constructive, up-building spirit. The students believe their efforts will be crowned with success.

The committee from the students which has this campaign in charge is J. E. Mathews, Chairman; Cranston Williams, Secretary; H. J. Pearce, Jr., Secretary; W. W. Irvine, I. E. McKellar, T. B. Magath and J. H. Saxon.

The Story of a Holiday

HERE is a kingdom in the land of Georgia's foothills, where, as of old, a monarch still walks among the sons of men. Truly, a man great and wonderful, is this monarch of the foothills. He, like Curius and Sampson of old, wears flowing locks.

But the story is not altogether about the monarch,—the "King" of the foothills. So let it suffice to say, that were the sculptors of prehistoric Egypt to rise to-day and carve from Stone Mountain a bust of this man, then the Sphinx that guards the desert sands of Sahara would be like unto the statue that would watch over the kingdom of the foothills.

It chanced one beautiful morning, while Spring was in her infancy, that this king—this unerring man, did make a mistake.

As usual the monarch had gathered his eleven score subjects in a little temple, known as "Chapel," for only this particular word was applicable to this little vine-clustered building dear to yesterdays of the great king. It was here that he was expounding the laws of the kingdom, and, truly, on this spring morning, the king was smiling as he spoke.

But, ah, as this great man smiled and talked, he was wholly unaware that the gods were conspiring against him; he did not know, then, that Iris, the goddess of discord, had sent a messenger within the walls of that temple—that sacred chapel. Indeed, little did he suspect that this messenger, a shaggy quadruped, was then nestled beneath the seat of the royal knights, the Seniors.

There this messenger of Iris waited patiently and silently as if listening for some great announcement from the smiling king. But, alas! the king rushes toward the end of his oration and yet the messenger hears not the appeasing word. Suddenly the messenger raps beneath the seat of the Seniors—one, twice, three times, yet the king realizes not the significance of these sounds. For even the great unerring man mistakes the divine message of Iris for an impromptu rhapsody from a nervous Senior's heel.

Although it was some moments before the king realized that it was February the twenty-first, nevertheless, having been informed of the origin of the tapping, he soon reflected that it was with such sounds, perhaps, that young George's hatchet first made known the boy's dislike for cherries. Then the monarch of that kingdom announced, "Holiday to-morrow."

We wish to thank all who have helped make the CAMPUS 1913 a success.

Chief among these are the advertisers who make the book possible. Patronize them and help yourself as well as next year's CAMPUS.

Thanks are also due for the co-operation given us by the printer and engraver.

We are not selling everybody spectacles and eye glasses in Georgia who need them, but there is a class who want good glasses at reasonable prices; this is the class we are catering to, and if you will visit our store and see who are patronizing us, you will need no further guarantee as to the kind of work we are doing, or send us the pieces of broken glasses and see how quickly we will return them.

Some of the striking points of excellence in the oldest College for women:

1. Wesleyan has an exceptionally strong Faculty of the best training, most eminent ability and successful experience.

2. Wesleyan has the best courses of study, well taught, with ample, modern equipment.

3. Wesleyan's Conservatory of music is unexcelled in the South, and the Schools of Art and Oratory are equally as good.

4. Wesleyan has the greatest body of distinguished Alumnae in the South, if not in the world.

5. Wesleyan has five large buildings in the heart of a most beautiful and healthful city.

6. Wesleyan has a splendid system of Student Government, securing ideal discipline and making the home life of the young ladies very delightful.

7. Wesleyan has an atmosphere of religious refinement and strength of character that is simply marvelous.

8. Wesleyan's charges for board, tuition, etc., are exceedingly reasonable.

Georgia's Leading Bankers
Endorse Business College

They Advise Many Students to Attend Bagwell College and Employ Many Bagwell Graduates.

It is a significant fact that the leading Bankers of the South endorse and patronize Bagwell Business College.

Ten of these financial institutions are now represented by students in this college.

This unusual endorsement and patronage is the result of the large number of Bagwell graduates now holding high salaried positions in hundreds of banks throughout the South. In fact the success of Bagwell graduates in all lines of office work is remarkable. Hundreds of business firms of all kinds are continually calling on the college for office assistants.

Positions Secured for all Graduates

There is a great demand for well trained office help, the college being called on during the last ten days to fill more than a score of positions, paying from $50 to $75 a month. We placed Misses Higgins, Hill, Mauney, Hines, Alman and Williams. Also Messrs. Wyatt, Chapman, Booz, Smith, Wimbish, Wisdom and Bradford. Yet a number of good openings were unfilled from a lack of graduates.

Time and Expense One-Half

You will save one-half the usual time and expense by attending Bagwell Business College. The Great Chartier Shorthand and Bliss Bookkeeping Systems enable students to complete the course in either department in from eight to twelve weeks. Do you wish to earn more? If you are ambitious, write for new Catalogue and special 10 DAY offer. Address,

The Institution depicted above is, in our opinion, no small factor in making this publication a credit to the Alma Mater of those to whom its issue is a work of love. Relatively, as much careful thought has been devoted here to the material development of the literary and artistic ideals of its editors and contributors as she has lovingly bestowed upon their mental and moral training. We believe we have done our work well, but the printed page has a tongue of its own, and speaks no uncertain language to the seeing eye. What does it say to you?

Blickensderfer Typewriters have been known for more than fifteen years, and their great merits testified to by over 150,000 satisfied users.

The New Models are equipped with all the high-grade typewriter improvements, possess the least number of parts of any of the standard machines, are stronger, do better work, and will give greater satisfaction than any other typewriter made.

In the manufacture of these machines the closest possible attention is paid to every minute detail. Each part has to pass a searching inspection. All the important wearing parts are made of the finest material obtainable. The machinery employed is the very highest grade; the workmen are all skilled mechanics, thoroughly trained in the construction of these typewriters and are in every way capable of producing the most finished and durable work.
