PRESIDENT OF

EMORY UNIVERSITY,

DR. GOODRICH COOK WHITE
Glenn Memorial
It is not necessary to present this book to you for it is already yours; it is you.

It is not necessary to make apologies or excuses for its shortcomings. They are all foreseen difficulties.

It is sufficient to say that we have tried to put into print some of the spirit that is Emory's. To define this spirit is to tell the...

Story of Emory

A dignified gate...

Two marble columns against which the snow piles, the wind and rain beat, around which the sun dances.

Iron grilling and a lantern sending forth its steadfast light through all the seasons of the year.

A winding walk bordered with dogwood ablaze with the purest white to herald the spring of each year.

A spire rising like a finger. Extricating itself from all below, reaching for all that is above.

These are the symbols as the body is only a symbol. Beyond and deep inside are the heart, the pulse, the rhythms of life.
There are many patterns living side by side as there are many beliefs and many goals.

The Georgia farm, the buzzing, bustling city, the plains, and the mountains. The Kelly lads and the Cohens. The doctor to be, and the preacher, educator, nurse, lawyer, librarian, or artist.

This is more than Emory, more than America ... it is life dedicated to a purpose. This is life being molded with care and guidance.

Deep inside, there is happiness and sorrow. There is success and failure. There is work and play.

Graduating seniors nod to those they leave behind as they look forward to their visions and back upon their days of joy which will never return.

Student nurses work so that they may give some touch of compassion to a world that has known much pain, while theologians seek the Truth in service to the Kingdom of God, and young doctors carry on a crusade of humanity in the name of science. Librarians work with the keys to learning, the friends of the lonely hours, graduates continue to search for all they believe so that they too may say with sincerity, “I know.” Dentists spend hours in service to the poor, giving while they learn, and those who aspire to the Law provide the sinews of our land and our liberty.

Deep inside are those who lead and create, those who speak for their own future. There are those who unite in the bonds of brotherhood and understanding. Above all, there are those who look to the future, and as they do, so does Emory, for ahead is the realization of many a dream.

Some of us may now be ready to leave this world we have known here and venture into the larger one outside. In time we will all take our places in life and that steadfast light will always be before us. Emory has taught us to be free. It has given us complete freedom and beauty of the soul. And though we shall some day die, our souls will live.

They will look back upon this life and see a youth who fought evils, who fought itself, a youth who finally emerged from the flotsam to build a monument to Truth and Justice in its heart. Though our story may never have a tribute, though it may remain short and unsung, we shall always cherish it. It will ever be the book of our youth, our triumphs and struggles. This is our sea of life. The calm peaceful waters that meant happiness, the waves that brought sorrow, the currents of evil, the surfs of joy . . . and the final low tide of death.

This is the spirit of Emory . . . Yes, it is more than the story of a school in an American city. It is the story of life. The story of a heart, a soul, and the story of those who make this life something fine and noble.

Morton-Sanford Reichart
At a meeting of the Georgia Methodist Conference held in Washington, Georgia, in 1834, Dr. Steppin Olin, then President of Randolph-Macon College, addressed the members of the Conference in behalf of the Virginia institution. At the conclusion of this speech the members were convinced that the Conference should contribute to the support of Randolph-Macon.

At this time, however, one of the number, "Uncle Allen" Turner, rose to the floor and in a fiery speech took the position that the Methodists of Georgia should not send their money up to Virginia, but should found a college of their own. A committee, composed of Ignatius A. Few, Thomas Mabrey, and John Howard, was appointed, and they decided to open a school adopting the manual labor plan.

In March of the year 1835, a small group of students trudged through the newly-opened doors of an institution called the Georgia Conference Manual Labor School, just outside the little town of Covington in Newton County. There, in ten crude school buildings, the Methodist Church was beginning an experiment in education. That experiment did not work, but it was the start of an endeavor that has culminated today in the great, modern campus and far-reaching scholastic attainments of Emory University.

Dr. Ignatius A. Few became the first president of the institution and seeing that the manual school was failing, appealed for an enlargement of the operations. The Georgia Conference authorized Dr. Few to apply to the Georgia Assembly for an extension of the charter to allow the founding of a college. Before the granting of the charter, he proposed school was named Emory College, in honor of Bishop John Emory.

It was in December of 1836 that the pen of Georgia Governor William Schley scratched into history the first chapter of the story of Emory with the signing of the charter of Emory College. The college opened its doors to students on the seventeenth of September, 1838, with fifteen students entering as members of the freshman and sophomore classes. In 1840 the trustees of the College took over the “affairs (mostly liabilities) of the Manual Labor School.” Meanwhile the town of Oxford had been incorporated by the legislature with Dr. Few as its first citizen. The name “Oxford” was selected at the suggestion of Dr. Few.

The year preceding the War Between the States were ones of unceasing struggle for the staff and faculty of little Emory College and of the manual labor system, under which the students, by their work in the fields, would contribute to the financial support of the school. The decision, therefore, in 1841, was to sell the farm lands and to concentrate on teaching.

In those early days, Emory’s curriculum was largely classical. The emphasis was solidly placed on the study of Greek, Latin, and mathematics. Most popular of all extra-curricular activities was forensics—debating and the art of public speaking. The two principal groups, the Phi Gamma Society, and the Few Society, became centers of social and intellectual life on the campus.

During the bitter years of the War Between the States, the buildings of the campus at Oxford were used to house wounded soldiers. Weeds grew across the lawns and there was considerable doubt at the close of the War as to whether the college would ever reopen. The wounds of conflict had struck deep into the life of the South, and it looked as though such things as education would simply have to suffer. However, in January, 1866, the bell rang which summoned the new students from their homes and the old students from the battlefield.

On a Sunday in November, 1880, Dr. Atticus G. Haygood, then President of Emory, preached an extraordinary sermon at the Oxford Methodist Church. Dr. Haygood declared that the South should be grateful for the resumption of relations with the national government and for the abolition of slavery.

A New York lawyer, George Leney, read this speech and donated $10,000 to Emory. This was the first of many gifts for this educational institution. The years of greatest growth and expansion may be dated from the time that Warren Akin Candler became president of Emory College in 1888 until its formation as a university in Atlanta. As early as 1891 Emory College officially went on the record with regard to its attitude toward athletics— an attitude which it has followed with consistency ever since, and one which was far ahead of its times. President Candler wrote in 1892 that Emory encourages “all wholesome sports among its students” but looks with no allowance on what we call “intercollegiate sports.” “The match games tend to give excitement to a few— while they make mere spectators of the majority of the student body, thus defeating the ends of sports.” There is little participation in intercollegiate athletics, but the intramural system is so set up that every student who desires may take part in all forms of athletics.

Asa Griggs Candler is the donor who really laid the foundation for the college to become a university. In a letter to a Methodist Commission he wrote, “I offer to the Educational Commission of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, charged by the General Conference with the duty of establishing an institution of university grade east of the Mississippi River, the sum of one million dollars ($1,000,000) for the endowment of such an institution . . .”

It was decided that Emory College would prove the nucleus for its development and that the University would be located in Atlanta. As the site for the campus a beautiful, wooded plot, in the Druid Hills section was deeded to the University.

An agreement was reached whereby the Atlanta Medical College became a part of Emory. The School of Law began operations in 1916 and shortly thereafter the School of Theology transferred operations to the campus.

The second World War saw Army and Navy training programs invade every portion of the campus. There were Navy and Marines with a few Army students in the Medical School. The non-service student body declined in numbers and the ratio of uniforms increased in every department. The end of the war has seen a rapid reconversion and readjustment to the problems of peacetime and the returning veteran. New degrees are being offered in such subjects as nursing and theology, making requirements more practical in nature so as to help the practicing nurse and minister.
A leader in the world of education, Emory is still striving for the highest and best rather than for the largest and best known. The long trail which has led from the Georgia Conference Manual Labor School to Emory University of today is still beckoning Emory onward into...

Functions
This year's social season saw the coming of a new type of function — Stunt Night, sponsored by the E. C. A., I. F. C., and S. A. C. Highlights of the evening were the presentations of fraternity skits, square dances, and a spirited conga.
Emory will dance either to a juke box or a big-name band. During the past year the so-called “two-bit” dances, sponsored by the I. F. C. and S. A. C., have become quite popular. But April will see the return of one of its historic functions in honor of one of its most famous citizens—the Honorable Mr. Dooley.

Freshman Day Dance

A Juke Box Dance
Exclusive of their participation in the over-all University extra-curricular program, the nurses have activities of their own. Most of these functions take place in Harris Hall. They include fireside chats, Glee Club programs, student meetings, and dances.
Emory's interest in campus politics was once again aroused by the December election of the Student Activities Council. Several political rallies were held during the course of the campaign. This showed that student government was to remain alive and to create interest in the students as it had partly failed to do during the war years. Such meetings as that pictured above demonstrated the real spirit of Emory. The interest in the election showed that the new Council was to prosper, whereas the former Council had been forced into dissolution by a lack of interest on the part of the students and the members.

EMORY'S CREED

EMORY STANDS FOR SOMETHING. A University ought to stand for something besides learning. Emory has a policy and it has a purpose. It has a mission and it intends to be true to itself and to its mission. It stands for the plain and simple things of human life. It stands for the plain and simple things of human character. It stands for the plain and simple things of the Christian religion. It stands for life and that more abundantly; for truth and that freely; for scholarship and that deeply; for work and that hard; for play and that gladly; for faith and that simply; for the best in life, and it believes the best is yet to be.

It believes in preparation for life and that thoroughly. It believes in thrift and property, and that it is as necessary for the University to live within its income as it is for the individual or the state, and equally a matter of common honesty as well as good business. It believes in the things of the body, in health, exercise and recreation. It believes in athletics for all rather than the prowess of the few and the applause of the extra-mural multitudes. It believes in the things of the spirit, in mercy, justice and humility, and in the tendency toward the eternal. It believes in the whole man strong and manly. It is laboring for such a man as its chief aim.

Its vision is neither inward or downward nor backward, but upward, outward and forward. It believes that the fundamentals are always the same, but it knows that the old order continually changeth, yielding place to new, and that it must ever adapt itself to its day and generation. It believes that nature and life are not nearly so schematic as we are, and that we are very far from the end of every problem. It believes that "life is a gift of nature and that beautiful living is a gift of wisdom."

It believes in its own youth, and in the flaming, plastic, yearning youth who come within its gates. It believes in the truth of science, in the glory of the Republic, and in the God of the Fathers.

—STEWART R. ROBERTS, M.D., '00; A.B., '02.
PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS

This edition of the Campus appears at the end of the first year of adjustment to post-war conditions. The year is also the last of the first decade of Emory's second century.

More than half of this decade has been overshadowed by war... the threat, the actuality, and the aftermath. It is deeply gratifying that, despite the repeated readjustments necessitated by changing conditions, significant progress has been made in the carrying forward of projected plans for the continuing development of the University. These plans have been based upon careful appraisal of the University's responsibilities and opportunities in the new era into which we have entered.

The limits of expansion anticipated for a five to ten year period have been about reached in a few months. It is our earnest hope that the years just ahead will be marked by substantial and steady improvement of the physical facilities of the University and of its work and service.

The University's record of service during the war is one of which we can be proud. The great need now, as always, in a troubled and uncertain time, is for men and women of character, courage, intelligence, and unselfish devotion. Such men and women Emory seeks to prepare.

I have confidence in Emory's future. I have confidence, too, in Emory men and women, students and alumni. I am sure that they will be ready to make their contribution, in their vocations, as citizens, and as fine human beings, with firm faith in the enduring values and with unwavering loyalty to the idealism embodied in our Christian heritage.

GOODRICH C. WHITE, President.

April, 1946.

The faculty of Emory University School of Nursing in planning the program for its students must keep in mind the total program necessary to prepare a good community nurse.

In the preparation of the nurse the most important agencies to consider are the university, the hospital and other clinical experience areas. Nursing education is rapidly evolving out of a system of "modified apprenticeship" into a system of direct professional education. To continue this trend it is necessary to strengthen the scientific content, deepen the social understanding and emphasize more the general cultural aspects of the nurse's preparation. Universities are in a position to give substantial help in this process. Preparation in this area also serves as a maturing process for those who wish to undertake experience in a serious, demanding and exacting profession.

A good practice field (the hospital) is required for a good school of nursing. Students of nursing learn the nursing art by studying patients and nursing situations and by meeting the problems involved in such situations, under competent guidance and instruction.

The present Dean of the School of Nursing was appointed as Director of Nurses September 20, 1943, following her survey for the United States Health Service in the winter of 1942. Emory was selected largely by nurse educators as a highly desirable university for the establishment of a University School of Nursing and the survey was made to determine the availability of clinical and health facilities in Atlanta and vicinity for a collegiate school of nursing in connection with Emory University.
Emory University School of Nursing began as the Training School for Nurses of Wesley Memorial Hospital in 1900. After Emory College was moved from Oxford to Atlanta, Emory University Hospital was erected on the campus to replace Wesley Memorial Hospital. Eventually the School became Emory University Hospital School of Nursing. In August, 1944, the Executive Committee of the University gave the final approval for the establishment of a University School of Nursing (retroactive to June 1, 1944), to be established as an autonomous part of the University.

The first degree students, as such, to enter the new University School of Nursing were enrolled in the winter semester, November, 1944. (Later several students in the class enrolled in June, 1944, transferred to the degree program.) A year later there were approximately 50 students enrolled in the degree program, and another 190 students enrolled in the University diploma program. It will be remembered that this growth took place during war years.

Since that time two additional programs have been added—one for college graduates who wish to enter the School of Nursing and another for graduate registered nurses (civilian and veteran) who wish to earn a baccalaureate degree.

The four programs in operation in the School are as follows:

Program I
Basic Course – Degree – four calendar years (combined Academic and Professional) leading to a diploma in nursing and the degree of Bachelor of Science in Nursing.

Program II
Basic Course – Diploma – three calendar years leading to a diploma in nursing.

Program III
Basic Course – Diploma – two to two and one-half years, for women who are college graduates, leading to a diploma in nursing. Those desiring a degree of Bachelor of Science in Nursing must in addition meet the academic requirements established for students in Program I.

Program IV
Basic Course. For registered nurses only, leading to the degree of Bachelor of Science in Nursing.

Students (high school graduates, college students or college graduates) entering Emory University School of Nursing may enter one of three programs. Graduate registered only may register in the fourth program.

From July, 1943, to November, 1945, federal aid grants were received as scholarships for students enrolling in the School of Nursing.
The following is humbly dedicated to an honorable family, a good family—namely, the Chase family.

Jonathan and Isabella Chase were placed in their respective crates of excelsior and shipped to Emory University Hospital back in 1928 by the Squibbs Surgical Supply House. They made their home within the mysterious portal of the eight bed ward in the educational department of Harris Hall, the historical nurses home. Though Jonathan and Isabella were only made of plaster of Paris, they were patient souls and paid for their lodging in the educational department by letting the new bands of student nurses, which rolled in year after year, practice and learn their profession on them. It was best that way. Many times Jonathan grew dissatisfied with having his ears scrubbed so often and so thoroughly, but Isabella was a comfort to him even though she too sometimes shuddered at the thoughts of another mustard foot-bath. But one day the Squibbs Surgical Supply House was good to them and sent them, C. O. D., a baby daughter who was immediately christened Roseola, with a hot olive scalp treatment. They were overjoyed with the new addition to their family; and as the years go by, though their eyes dim with constant eye irrigations and the hinges to their joints grow rusty from constant scrubbing, they remain content here to render their small service to humanity.

The Chases are a tradition and could tell a lot; yet they are silent, and it is best that way.

Under the leadership of Dean H. B. Trimble the Candler School of Theology continues to be a leading contributor to the religious life and thought of the Eastern and Southern portion of the United States. This past year has seen the inaugural of an annual School for Town and Country Ministers and the continuation of the annual Minister's Week at which Dr. Ernest C. Colwell, President of the University of Chicago, and Dr. Harold Cooke Phillips, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Cleveland, Ohio, were the principal lecturers. Dr. G. Ray Jordan, nationally known preacher, pastor, and writer, was added to the faculty as professor of homiletics.

The Candler School of Theology, as a graduate professional school of the Methodist Church, educates men in all of the different phases of the Christian ministry. In the past quarter century, more than a thousand men have taken advantage of its facilities until today its graduates are carrying out the work of the Kingdom of God as preachers, missionaries, teachers, and social workers throughout the entire earth.

The School was founded in September of 1914 as the official school for the training of ministers east of the Mississippi River for the Southern Methodist Church. It was named after the late Bishop Warren Aiken Candler, one of its chief founders and guiding lights. Of the original faculty assembled in 1914, only Dr. W. A. Smart, professor of Systematic Theology and Associate Dean, still remains.

Besides their academic work, students serve as pastors of churches in nearby communities, assistants to pastors, directors of youth activities in several of the larger churches, choir directors, and do other miscellaneous work that is part of the Christian ministry.

The School of Medicine dates back to the founding of the Atlanta Medical College in 1854. The land at the corner of Butler and Armstrong Streets upon which the present group of college buildings stands was secured and the erection of buildings started thereafter.

The Southern Medical College was organized and chartered in 1878 and in 1898 the faculties of the Atlanta Medical College and the Southern Medical College consolidated the two schools as the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons. The College was materially aided by contributions from citizens of Atlanta and from the faculty.

The Atlanta School of Medicine was established in 1905. The merger of the Atlanta School of Medicine and the College of Physicians and Surgeons was completed in 1913 under the historic name, "Atlanta Medical College." The faculty of the newly organized Atlanta Medical College soon realized that the aims of the merger could be accomplished only by securing an endowment, a university connection, and hospital facilities adapted for teaching purposes. Their aims were accomplished when the Atlanta Medical College was legally made the School of Medicine of Emory University in 1915.

At a meeting of the alumni of Emory University in 1919, all alumni of any school which played a part in the formation of the present institution, whether the Atlanta Medical College, the Southern Medical College, the Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons, or the Atlanta School of Medicine, were instructed thereafter to sign themselves as graduates of Emory University.

During the years the school grew to become one of the greatest in the South. With the outbreak of the war the Emory medical graduates and associates of the school united to form the Emory Medical Unit. The unit was soon sent overseas and during the course of the war won great distinction.

In June, 1944, the Emory Medical Unit was temporarily divided for its members to participate in various phases of the invasion of southern France. Shortly after D-Day it was brought back together and given the task of converting a small prisoner-of-war hospital in southern France (a former French tuberculosis sanatorium) into a 2,500 bed general hospital. In this undertaking it achieved notable success, as did the school itself in the training programs carried on in conjunction with the Army and Navy.

Library School
The Library School is one of the nine major divisions of the University. While its association with Emory University began in 1925, the date of its founding antedated this by twenty years, when the Southern Library School was established at the Carnegie Library of Atlanta, April 5, 1905. In November, 1925, the School became affiliated with Emory University, and raised its entrance requirements to admit only students who have a bachelor's degree from an approved college or university.

Beginning with the session of 1930-1931, the administration and control were transferred to Emory University. The School was moved to the Emory campus and established in new quarters in the Asa Griggs Candler library building.

The Library School meets the requirements of the American Library Association for a professional library school on a graduate basis. The school offers to both men and women a broad field of work and is considered one of the foremost schools of its type in the South.

The Southern Dental College was founded in 1887.
The Atlanta Dental College was founded in 1892.
The Atlanta-Southern Dental College was founded in 1917 by the consolidation of the Atlanta and the Southern Dental Colleges. Dr. Sheppard Foster, the present President Emeritus, was elected as its first President and Dr. Thomas Hinman was its first Dean.

At the start of the 1917 session the Atlanta Dental College vacated its building on Edgewood Avenue and moved in with Southern Dental College in its building across from the Grady Hospital. The merger of the two schools gave to Atlanta one of the largest and most completely equipped dental colleges of the day.

In 1918 in cooperation with the government, an S. A. T. C. training unit was placed at the new school. Again in World War II Atlanta-Southern Dental College was chosen by the Army and Navy for the training of naval and dental officers.

In 1926 Atlanta-Southern College moved to its present location at the corner of Forrest and Courtland, and in the same year as a result of this new equipment was awarded an "A" rating by the Dental Education Council of America.

Upon the death of Dr. Hinman in 1931, Dr. R. R. Byrnes became Dean of the College and holds that office today. On September 25, 1931, Mrs. De Los Hill gave to the school a $50,000 endowment for the purpose of establishing a clinic for children. The clinic is now known as De Los L. Hill, Jr., Memorial Clinic for Children.

In September of 1944 Emory University and Atlanta-Southern Dental College merged to become Emory University School of Dentistry.

The main clinic at the Dental College is one of the largest of its kind in the nation. This modern clinic includes not only operative dentistry sections but also sections for surgery, crown and bridge prosthesis, full and partial denture prosthesis, X-ray room and a section for orthodontia work.

All work in the clinic is done under the supervision of capable instructors under the direction of Dr. Roger E. Sturdevant, Superintendent of the Clinic.

In addition to the main clinic the school has a clinic for Negroes and a clinic for children under the age of twelve. The Negro clinic is under the direction of Dr. W. D. Stone and the clinic for children is under the direction of Dr. V. Johnson.

The Lamar School of Law, with the largest enrollment in its history, is entering the postwar period with greatly expanded facilities. Named for Justice L. C. Q. Lamar, a former Associate Justice in the Supreme Court and one of Emory's most distinguished alumnus, the School of Law was founded when the campus was moved from Oxford to Atlanta in 1916. In 1941, the Evening Division of the School of Law was established as a permanent part of the school. During the war, day classes were entirely suspended, and only the Evening School functioned; however, both day and night classes will be carried on in September, 1946, and the school will begin its first complete postwar year.

The story of the Student Activities Council has been a sad one during the past year. The Council under the Navy administrations was never very active, and student interest in it was practically negligible. But the Council somehow or other continued. Finally the Council under Emory Via was forced to dissolution because of the lack of interest on the part of both students and Council members.

The first sign of interest in the Student Activities Council was evidenced in the election held in December. This election showed the first real interest in campus politics during the past year. The Council now has become an integral part of the organizations on the campus. It has planned several dances and taken a real interest in the campus activities.

The Emory Christian Association seeks to regulate religious life on the campus. With its director, Sam Laird, it stimulates religious activity through its many outlets. The Freshman E. C. A., a very active part of the organization, holds its meetings every Monday night in the form of a supper, followed by a devotional service. The Council, the governing body of the Association, holds its meetings every two weeks in order to direct and advise the many activities of the Association. The Lounge and the recreational hall are open every day to students of the University.

DR. HENRY HILT CRANE, D.D., LL.D.
of Detroit, Michigan, principal speaker for Emory's eleventh annual Religious Emphasis Week
The Honor Council has as its duty the fostering of a spirit of honor among the students, and the administration of the Honor Code. From year to year the Council has placed increasingly great emphasis on its objective, the prevention of dishonesty, by the elevation of Emory's standards of honor.

The Honor Council has become recognized as an integral factor in the growing ideal of a greater Emory. The Council is composed of five students and a faculty adviser. The outgoing members each year appoint the succeeding members to serve for the following scholastic year.

Emory's chapter of the International Relations Club has had the longest continuous existence of any of the non-social clubs on the campus. Under the direction of Dr. Ross H. McLean, Professor of History, the Club meets every month for discussions in the field of international affairs.

The purpose of the International Relations Club is to instruct and enlighten public opinion. It is to fix the attention of the students upon the principles of human conduct, international law, and international organization, and upon the ultimate problem of world peace.

The Emory Glee Club, under the direction of Dr. Malcolm H. Dewey, has won distinction through recordings, appearances on the major radio networks, and tours in foreign countries. In the club students are able to acquire training in voice development and experience in singing before large audiences.

During the war the Glee Club was able to remain active. Concerts were given to overflow audiences. Even with seemingly insurmountable obstacles the club remained as one of the outstanding activities on the campus.

During this last year, the Glee Club presented a summer and spring concert and its annual Christmas Carol Service, all of which met with huge success. A concert tour of the Southern States has been planned for the spring.

THE EMORY PLAYERS

The Emory Players, under the direction of Edith Russell, seeks to develop theatrical interest and ability on the campus. In August, 1945, the Players presented Romeo and Juliet. In February, they presented Family Portrait, and in April they will present The Hasty Heart. A large-scale production in the amphitheatre is planned for the summer quarter.

The Interfraternity Council is composed of two members from each of the eleven fraternities and meets on alternate Tuesday night throughout the year. The Council has authority in all matters pertaining to the fraternities of the University. The drawing up and enforcing of rushing rules is under the jurisdiction of the Council. The regulation of finances and the planning of social functions concerning all of the various fraternities are also a part of the duties of this organization.

During this past year, the Council under the presidency of Tom Galt and then of Robert Burns, has sponsored many small dances for the fraternity men. The climax of the Council's social functions came in January with the Interfraternity Council Formal.

With the return of many fraternity men to the campus and the arrival of the veterans, the Interfraternity Council hopes for the growing strength of the fraternity system.

Emory’s exclusive social organization among non-fraternity men is the twenty-four-year-old Campus Club, whose aim is to give the independent man an organized, definite social life and to aid him in his campus activities. Membership into the club is by invitation only, and its ritual stresses friendship and brotherhood.

Founded in 1938

The Emory Non-fraternity Organization functions in order to create interest in and to maintain high standards of accomplishment, to develop individual abilities in activities relating to the non-fraternity men of this student body, and to develop a spirit of cooperation, brotherhood, loyalty, and enthusiasm among the students, all working together for the welfare of Emory.

Any non-fraternity man who attends two successive business meetings and states his desire to join the E. N. O. is eligible for active membership. E. N. O. offers an opportunity to participate in social, athletic, and service activities.

The 1946 Campus has had one of the hardest jobs of any organization on the campus. The staff appointments were made only in January, while previous staffs had from five to eight months to complete the task of publishing the yearbook. The compilation of this annual was accomplished in two months.

There was also another problem — there were no trained staff assistants on the Campus and no established precedent to follow. The small staff that there was had to fight for an office, for use of photographic files, and for approval of the budget.

In this book the editors have tried to depict the story of the whole year and give the complete story of Emory's past, present, and future. The Campus is intended to be a portrait of Emory. If it is beautiful and strong, it is because Emory is beautiful and strong. The editors sincerely hope with conviction that the Campus reveals the overall picture of Emory.

The Emory Wheel has long been one of the outstanding activities on the campus. Many times it has won national distinction through several journalistic awards. The Wheel was founded in 1919 by Ernest Rogers and since then it has become one of the outstanding college newspapers in the country.

Even during the war The Wheel maintained its high standards of journalism. This was indeed remarkable because there was practically no staff. But because of good editorship The Wheel remained as a standard of journalistic achievement.

DVS, Senior Honor Society, is one of the highest honors for which Emory men strive. The tapping of seven Juniors in the spring of each year has become a tradition which the student body eagerly awaits. The DVS pin is intended to serve as a mark of distinction which indicates that the wearer is an all-round man, a leader who has won election on his merits and his conspicuous loyalty to the interests of Emory.

Omicron Delta Kappa is the national honorary leadership fraternity on the campus. Election to membership is based on character, leadership, and outstanding participation in extra-curricular activities. The maintenance of a scholastic record well above the average is a prerequisite to membership. Recognition by ODK embraces five fields: scholarship, athletics, social and religious activities, publications and forensics, dramatics, and music. Emory’s Mu Circle was founded in 1925.

Tapping ceremonies are held in chapel in the fall and spring quarters of each year. This year ODK resumed its sponsorship of Freshman Day, which included a convocation in the morning, the annual Push-Ball game in the afternoon, and the Push-Ball Dance in the evening. The whole day is one to be remembered by freshmen throughout their college careers.

Phi Beta Kappa, organized in 1776, is the oldest college “Greek Letter” society. Election to membership means recognition of outstanding mental capacity well employed.

The Emory chapter is known as the Gamma Chapter of the Phi Beta Society in the State of Georgia. There are three classes of members: (1) Members in Course; (2) Alumni Members; (3) Honorary Members. Election of students to membership is based upon scholarship, breadth of culture, and general promise.

Eta Sigma Psi, sophomore honor society, was organized on the Atlanta campus in the spring of 1928 by several members of the sophomore class. The society, first known as the Toreadors, adopted its present name in 1930; and in that year established chapters on the campus at Oxford and Valdosta.

The founders expressed the purpose of the organization as follows: "To create within the members of the freshman class an interest in extra-curricular activities which are of value to the University; to recognize character and leadership among members of the freshman class; an interest in extra-curricular activities which are of value to the University; to recognize character and leadership among members of the freshman class; to be of service to the College or University by promoting, encouraging, and recognizing service, character, and leadership."

Sigma Delta Chi is the national professional journalism fraternity on the campus. Emory's chapter, now in its third year, is made up of the most promising student journalists on the campus and a large number of outstanding Atlanta journalists. Sigma Delta Chi strives to make for closer contacts among the students, the journalism faculty, and Atlanta newspaper and radio journalists. One of the many services of the fraternity is the publication of the University Directory.

Alpha Omega Alpha is the highest honorary medical society of Emory University. Membership is based purely upon scholarship, provided that the candidates moral qualifications are satisfactory. Its aims, as stated by the constitution of the society, are “the promotion of scholarship and research in medical schools, the encouragement of a high standard of character and conduct among medical students and graduates, and the recognition of high attainment in medical science in practice and related fields.” Chapter meetings are devoted to the presentation and discussion of clinical cases and scientific papers.

Athletics
ATHLETICS FOR ALL
STATEMENT OF POLICY ON ATHLETICS AND PHYSICAL EDUCATION AT EMORY UNIVERSITY

Emory University regards athletics as an integral part of a well-ordered program of physical education. In conformity with this view, the widest possible participation in athletics on the part of individual students is encouraged; expert training and coaching are made available, equipment and supplies are furnished, and games and contests on the campus are promoted under careful supervision.

The University will continue to sponsor and encourage intercollegiate competition in those sports which contribute to the development of health and physical.
fitness and which have a definite and proven "carry over" value in the sense that they can be continued in adult life. Such intercollegiate sports will not be allowed to interfere with the academic program of the University, and participants will be required to conform to prescribed physical and academic standards. Responsibility for the initiation, approval and supervision of arrangements for intercollegiate contests is delegated to the Director of Physical Education under such regulations as may be recommended by the University Committee on Athletics and approved by the President.

Participation in those competitive sports which require elaborate and expensive facilities for public entertainment is not in accord with the educational purposes of the University. Competition in football, baseball, and basketball will, therefore, be limited to intramural contests.
Traditional Freshman Pushball Game...
The 1945 touch football season ended with a powerful A E Pi team breezing through all Blue League competition, winning the campus championship by defeating Chi Phi, Gold League champs, in the playoff series two straight games by the score of 13 to 7 each time.

Action was hottest in the Gold loop with the regular season ending in a three-way tie between Chi Phi, A T O and Sigma Chi. An exciting round-robin playoff failed to prove anything, again ending in a three-way knot, but Chi Phi was given the loop crown on a points scored basis.
FOOTBALL

Sparked by big Stan Weinkle, one of the finest all-round athletes ever to attend Emory, A E Pi rolled up high scores in easily defeating all its Blue League opposition, but had to come from behind in true Frank Merriwell fashion both times to defeat versatile Chi Phi for the campus title.

All-Emory honors went to Stan Weinkle of A E Pi; Emory Rylander and Ed Ward of Chi Phi; Stan Landord and Newt Turk at A T O; Gordon Brantley of Phi Delta Theta; and Chris Hamff and Bob Kendrick of Sigma Chi.
Emory's interclass basketball league of 1945 proved to be one of the most interesting in years. Six hard-fighting fives, representing Freshmen, Sophomores, Junior-Seniors, Meds, Lawyers, and Theologs finished a red-hot season in a three-way deadlock of the Frosh, the Upper Division men, and the Medics.

Chief features of the season was a sensational Freshman squad that racked up the highest score in Emory's hardwood history by defeating the Theologs 106 to 23. The Meds displayed a flashy offensive, sparked by dynamic Bruce Newsome and gangling Bob Soloman, while the Junior-Seniors, led by Chris Hamff and Bob Cleere, were strong all the way round, particularly adept at fancy ball-handling and floorwork.

Theologs played off and on ball, sometimes brilliant, sometimes poor, with the game but outclassed Lawyers and Sophs rounding out the league.

In the fraternity leagues, S A E defeated Sigma Chi 25 to 23 in a thrilling overtime battle to annex the Gold Loop crown. A E Pi took the Blue League title, being extended only by a stubborn E N O quintet over whom it managed to eke out a 30 to 28 decision. As in football, big Stan Weinkle was again the big gun, getting able assistance, however, from Sidney Stein and "Pickles" Finkle.

Season's scoring honors went to Norbert Suber of E N O, Soloman of S A E, Hammer and Kendrick of Sigma Chi, Weinkle of A E Pi and Green of E N O.
Soon after the announcement by the University administration that the Board of Trustees had approved a policy permitting intercollegiate competition in certain sports, the swimming team was formed under the direction of Coach Ed Shea.

However, because of the uncertain draft status of various members, the team functioned on an informal basis until it became certain it would remain intact for any meets that might be scheduled. Team members allied themselves with the Atlanta Swimming Association meanwhile and competed against such formidable opposition as the University of North Carolina and Duke University. They finished third in the Carolina A. A. U. championships, and swam in the South-eastern A. A. U. Championships.
After this valuable experience, the team officially established itself as the Emory University intercollegiate swimming team, the first such athletic group under the new policy. Because of the scarcity of organized intercollegiate teams in the South at this time, the group participated only in various A. A. U. meets.

Jim Ridley, freshman from Atlanta’s Boys’ High, was elected captain of the squad, which consisted of Harold Rice, Jack Coker, Bobby Forbes, George Dunbar, Garland Head, Dan Plunket, Taft Edenfield, Francis Biascoechea, Stuart Haw, Julian Whately and Walter Rutland.

Noteworthy performances during the season were registered by Captain Jim Ridley, who finished third in the National A. A. U. 220 yard breaststroke; Stu Haw, who finished third in the Southeastern Senior A. A. U. 220 yard and 440 yard freestyle and turned in the best performance of the season; George Dunbar, who was a consistent point scorer in the fancy diving events; Bobby Forbes, sprinter; Julian Whately and Walter Rutland in the backstroke and sprints respectively.

The Future
With the end of the war, Emory finds itself at the beginning of a new period in its life and service. Emory faces an era of new development and growth. This does not mean merely physical expansion. It means the improvement in the quality of work and service done, the building upward rather than outward, on foundations already laid, a university structure in which the search for truth and the spirit of creative scholarship are fostered and flourish; it means the promotion of the spiritual and intellectual as well as the economic and social welfare and progress of the Southland and thus of mankind.

Emory will continue to strive toward the ideal that all its graduates shall be men who have been introduced to the cultural and spiritual heritage of the race, who know how to use their minds, who have developed standards of taste and judgment, and who have had nurtured in them ideals of responsibility and service.

During the next five to ten years, the campus will see the beginning and the completion of many new buildings: a gymnasium, an administration building, a student activities building, the Rich Memorial Building of the School of Business Administration, a new library wing, and added dormitory accommodations.

As Emory looks ahead, it places its faith in human possibilities. This faith rests upon faith in God and His purposes for man and His world.

As we look ahead we not only see an alma mater grown and enlarged, but we see our own purposes to which we have dedicated ourselves. We see a path we have chosen to follow. We see its limitations and its possibilities. This path we intend to follow with Christian endeavor, with Love and Truth.

Behind us we shall see our heritage, and we shall realize the place that Emory had and will always have in our lives. For it we shall ever be grateful, as we shall be for the friendships we made, for the words we learned, and for the memory of great men we came to know and to love.

In the preceding I have used freely from Dr. Goodrich C. White's report to the Board of Trustees of December 1, 1944. I have done so with his permission. I feel that it is appropriate because whatever Emory's future is to be, no one will be responsible to so great an extent as he through his tireless efforts and persistent labors.

The Editor
The growing interest in the future of Emory can be evidenced by the plans and projects for the post-war school. Of these plans there are many visible aspects on the campus now. The enrollment in the College of Arts and Sciences is now the largest that the University has known in its history. Of this enrollment a very large percentage is composed of veterans. The returning veterans are a part of the plans for the greater Emory. They have returned with the intention of getting the most out of their college life.

With such an increased enrollment the housing facilities are too few on the campus. The dormitories and fraternity houses have been filled beyond their normal capacities. But this problem of housing has been partially relieved by the placing of trailers on the campus for use by married students and their wives. There are approximately one hundred and twenty-five such trailers on the campus. There are plans now for more dormitories to be built on the campus as soon as conditions will permit.

All of these plans and improvements are part of the ideal for the greater Emory of spirit and culture.
"... for all that is above."
The Church School Building
The editors are sorry that the School of Business Administration was not able to be included in the 1946 Campus. At the time we went to press, it was still being organized. Along with the entire school, we do, however, welcome its dean, George S. Craft.

President Goodrich C. White, '08, said recently in a report to the Board of Trustees:

"Emory University has now reached the beginning of a new period in its life and service. The past two decades or more have been years of foundation laying. The time is now here for us to move forward aggressively in the development of a university in the true sense of the term . . .

"There is nothing, I believe, which can stop us from building here at Emory one of the truly great universities of the nation.

"All of our planning for the University's development grows out of a deep sense of obligation and an opportunity for service. The conviction that our Southern region needs and is entitled to the best in education is fundamental in our thinking."
