T HE purpose of the Kinema is to give a true representation of student life in all phases of activity both in the School of Theology and on the Emory Campus. Kinema, therefore, is significantly appropriate as a title of this publication. It portrays the interests both of the Freshman today and the Senior tomorrow. We predict that the successive volumes of the Kinema, as film following film, will make it a true "moving picture" of the University days of Emory men.

Editorial

While the beginning of any undertaking is attended with difficulties, we have endeavored to let no such obstacles which attend the combination of the Annuals of the College and the Theological Departments cause a deterioration in the usual excellence of our book. On the contrary, we have tried to utilize all the opportunities which the conditions afford for betterment and to give to our subscribers the best Emory Annual that has ever been published. We trust that this joint production will serve as a representation of an indissoluble synthesis of interest in the two Departments and that the union is only a beginning of the greater University center.

Sic Transit

How few the years that we have spent
Together in this little town,
Yet, ah the "bones" that we have lent
To men all suddenly struck down.

How many times we've paid for drinks
To slake the other fellow's thirst!
Five thousand times, alas, methinks,
Because we happened to be "first".

How many of the smoking bunch
Have dunned us for our final grams?
A million is my certain "hunch".
(Jove bless the precious little lambs!)

So thus the sweet tobacco goes,
And likewise drinks, cigars and gum,
But Zues! the painful after glows,
When Stone expects the "dough" to come!

Yet this is but the school man's game,
And has a certain pleasing tone.
'Tis now we ponder whence it came,
But soon we'll wonder where it's gone.

HAVING COMPASSED ALL KNOWLEDGE
History of the Senior Class

T is with a feeling of gladness that the historian begins to write the last history of this, the class of 1916. Gladness, because with it comes the knowledge that that for which we have been striving for four long years is almost within our grasp. It is but a few short months before, in the fulfillment of our long cherished hopes, we will stand forth and receive those longed-for "sheepskins." We will grasp these emblems of intellectual attainments and go forth to meet the hostile world with all the confidence of the immortal Heracles. We will not realize how much these four years, spent in Oxford under such healthful influences, mean, and will mean to us, until we have left the scenes of their passing.

The members of this class have toiled together; we have had our fun and our sober work. If life-long friendships have not been formed, if close association has not brought out the good in each member of the class, and above all, if each does not carry from Oxford an undying love for the old college, and a strong and zealous fidelity to its great successor, then the course has fallen far short of what it should have accomplished.

For the past two years, '16 has furnished fifty per cent of the intercollegiate debaters, and now exceeds even that in this the crowning year in the success of "Sweet Sixteen." It contains some of the best literary talent in college; in fact we have a real poet whose fame extends beyond the walls of his Alma Mater. 1916 cannot boast of any great athletic fame, but it has three pennants, attesting to the fact that it is not unknown in that sphere of college activities. But where '16 really excels is in scholarship. There are men in this class with averages above the Honor Roll mark who will not get speakers places due to the fact that there are eight other "shoot-'em-ups" who did even better. Four members of old '16 have attained that high degree of scholarship recognized by admission to the Alpha Epsilon Upsilon society, that select circle so hard to gain.

The men of the class will enter various avenues of life, and they will go to demonstrate to the world the practical value of a college education. Every line of activity is calling us to come and join its ranks. As we go to our work, wherever it may be, in whatever field, let us be as true and faithful to our Alma Mater as she has been to us.

"Dear Em'ry, farewell to you, Alma Mater so dear and true. From beyond thy bounds there comes To us, life's sternest calls. Me must soon now leave thy classic halls; Farewell to our dear friends too, When we shall part, With a true loyal heart, We'll cherish the Gold and Blue."

This is the only one in captivity. Step right up, gentlemen. He won't bite, even if he does look voracious. It's just his habit to eat everything in his immediate vicinity. He is the original of the man it made "poor to tote it." He says he has to eat all he does in order to keep up that mighty frame of his. Few there are in the student body that know that Tank is a poet, but just ask him and find out.

When Hoochie came to Emory from Georgia the fair sex immediately fell upon him because of his beautiful complexion, and sized him up as one susceptible to their blandishments. Despite the association of his name with numerous "Bad Man Eggs," he has survived, and is today one of the most popular members of his class. His achievements on the athletic field have won him an envied reputation which will long outlast his stay here.

Hailing from Ringgold has proved no impediment to Grits during his career at Emory. He has succeeded in garnering unto himself a hoard of shekels, in the shape of well-earned honors, both in the classroom and elsewhere. Behind an ever-smiling but imperturbable countenance an ambitious and energetic mind is hidden. Whenever the political season opens Grits has been among those running, and when the marks are read out, Grits' name is found near the top, both alphabetically speaking and otherwise.

Dick is a poet. His hair, his eyes, his very manner of gentle speech betray him. And he is a good one, even if his "soul is heavy" at times. But he is more than that. Blessed of a smooth tongue, with a most affable disposition, we know Dick has won himself a place in the hearts of every man who knows him and since he has been somewhat of a politician during his sojourn at Emory, there are few who do not know him. It is not often we find a man like Dick who can write real poetry and still be human.

See thou the man immaculately groomed, and every strand of his blond locks in place? That is Burke. Many of Burke's most ardently pursued courses have not been included in the catalogue. As a patron of the Georgia railroad, both up and down, he is unsurpassed in his line. A friend to many and a friend to all, there are many who stay who hate to see him leave. It is rumored that the Brenau Glee Club has refused to put Emory on her schedule for next year, since it was learned that Burke will not be here.

When Willie first boarded the rapid transit, Motorman Bird subjected him to close and minute scrutiny lest he should be transporting the sacred ashes of "Dooly." Willie soon proved himself to be more than an animated skeleton. Although somewhat ashamed of it, Pittsburg is his home. Despite his shapely figure, Willie is a lion among the Fair Sex, and is as well liked as any man in school.

Laboring under the awful handicap of having been born in Oxford, Chilley invaded the sacred precincts of his native village with some deep yearning to be dubbed A. B. harbored in his bosom. However, those who know him best have dubbed him "My Son Charles" instead. For some time past his motto has been, "Keep away from Athens!" His fondness for onions has won him great fame as a habitue of Heine Stone's Emporium. But despite the above handicap, "Bish" has maintained a rep. among the pros. for being a Shoot-Em-Up.

Pierce is a man of ideas. He has stood for what is right since his entrance in college, and no one dares dispute with so learned a one. He is a holy terror of all the Profs., for when he makes less than 9.8 on an exam., he takes it over. His prowess in debate has often been exhibited to the dismay of his opponents. Though his efforts have stood him in such good stead in Oxford they have not been confined entirely to this locality as the land somewhere east of Conyers holds a not uncertain attraction for him.

Duckie claims Chamblee as his home balliwhack, and no doubt Chamblee claims Duckie as one of her favorite sons. He is a man of splendid qualities, and was never guilty of anything worse than smoking a pipe in Foxy's lab. We prophesy great things for Duckie in his calling.

MELVIN R. ELLINGTON, Ph.B.

Honor Roll, 18-'14-'15; Freshman Latin Medal, '13; Alpha Epsilon Upsilon Honorary Society; Member Educational Journal Club; Y. M. C. A.; Junior Commencement Speaker, '15; Senior Commencement Speaker, '16.

A native son of Newton county, M. R. soon found himself in his native element at Emory; shooting promiscuously any and every prof. who comes his way. Of a naturally retiring and timid disposition, he is thought most of by those who know him best, although it is rumored that he is far from timid in his accustomed haunts, secluded in some sylvan shade, north of Oxford, in the neighborhood of Gum creek.

Lamar is a sweet little fellow from Plains. He is an ideal candidate for the ministry in his amiable qualities and in his high ideals. His favorite occupation is teasing "Miss” Cobb. He is a true friend and an all-round good fellow.

Like Demosthenes, Brooks is said to have acquired his brogue by toting marbles in the capacious cavity which occupies and completely fills the lower portion of his cranium. Though Shingler says that Brooks would swipe anything from graduate flasks to filter paper, nevertheless he has succeeded in elevating himself by the votes of the populace to a position among the seats of the mighty, known as the Central Board. With misgivings as to the longevity of his tonsorial appendage, Brooks has adopted the hatless demeanor of Medusa and entertains high hopes of some day winning a fair lady’s heart.

Somehow or other, we have always connected the name of "Dutch" with Cordele, Ga. Where we got our information or how we came by it has escaped our memory, but nevertheless such is the fact. With a "Boothick" on Zeke and Ickey, he has contrived to build himself a reputation as a man who does things. Quiet and almost unseen, "Dutch" burns the midnight oil and worries where the next Y. M. C. A. funds are coming from while he is resting. One of the five best things he does is running around the track while Nag is calling the roll in Gym.

Even from his home town there preceded the appearance of J. "Byrd" at Emory the report that he was born speaking, writing and otherwise enunciating the heroic lines of Cicero and Virgil. Since his arrival Bill Burt has reported an enormous decrease in the sale of Jakes. But physiology under Ph.D. Gee proved too much for the classic mould of his mediaeval brain, and he has kept his vow to forever more seclude himself within the classical walls and think no more of sordid things.

This man, towering more upward than outward, hails from Buena Vista. Notwithstanding the fact that he spends most of his time concocting vari-colored chemical compounds Hart is noted as a "Shoot-Em-Up" in all his classes. Memory of man is unable to recall the sight of "J. D." after sun has set. Whether of innate fear of darkness or not we know not. Only the care of politics has been known to lure him from his lair.

Bob hails from Marietta, a town made great by Leon McKenzie Blair and other Lee's. This fact has proven a stumbling block to Bob, which, if you wish to prove for your own satisfaction, simply turning your hands wrong side out with a Yiddish gesture and quote: "All alder smoke go up de chim." Whether information is wanted concerning the increase in death rates due to the employment of child labor in factories or the number of processes involved in the manufacture of a pin, Statistical Jay is right there with the government reports. But one pigeon hole of Jay's card indexed mind is labeled with the name of a certain lady of North Covington, to whom he allot's a portion of his time as regularly as to his lessons. Whatever problem Jay attacks he goes at with a system, and we predict the success which has crowned his efforts here for him in future years.

SAMUEL HERBERT HINTON, Ph.B.
Dacula, Ga.

Like his worthy contemporary, Hart, Hinton, who claims Dacula as his home, is partial to the enticing fumes of H2S and may be seen at almost any hour of the day wending his way toward the Chemistry building in his tireless effort to follow in the footsteps of Dr. Ward. In addition to this, Hinton has made for himself quite a distinction in the realm of art in tracing the outlines of the misshapened figures of the men of this student body for this annual.

When Mother passed from out of our midst and from under the guardianship of Emory's wing to take his abode in the garish city, he began immediately to degenerate. He even started to writing to Wesleyan. What will become of Preacher, we cannot say. He may have the fortune to be eaten by the cannibals as he is going to be a missionary, but we have a hunch he'd talk them out of it.

FURNEY C. IVEY, JR., A.B.

Boston, Ga.

Phi Gamma Literary Society; Assistant Treasurer, Phi Gamma; President, Phi Gamma; Chairman Athletic Committee, '15-'16; Member Central Board; Basketball Team, '15-'16; Captain Basketball Team, '16; Baseball Team, '14-'15-'16; Manager Baseball Team, '16; Relay Team, '15-'16; Emory Track Team, '15; Manager Emory Track Team, '16; Calculus Club; Tennis Club, '14-'15.

From the crab-grass fields of Boston, that locality unknown to us, but made notorious as the abiding place of "Dada" Whaley, came in the fall of 1913 this terror of the Profs, to set a record at Emory with an all around average of 10 in Calculus. His glove, aided materially by his left arm, and an efficacious prayer, in the Spring of 1915, enabled many underestudies of Cobb and Baker to perceptibly fatten (?) their batting averages. Bereft of his reputation and prayer his trusty glove is now left to him as a relic of things as they might have been.
A man in all the world's new fashion planted,

A man with a brain so enormous as to preclude the wearing of any hat Lewis is recognized as an all-round man of 42 centimeter calibre. He it was for two years, who won the distinction of being an intercollegiate debater. He is a politician of the first water, with a failing for Covington society. His brain is forever discovering some new idea, and he possesses the innate energy to put them into execution.

This dream of Doctors of Divinity entered college in the Fall of 1912, and endeavored to follow in the footsteps of those who have attained fame in the department of Theology. He has patterned after a notable Biblical character, having had as his duties the collection of all fees and assessments due to the Student Body, for this year. Co-operating with "Dutch" Forster and other worthy men, Rainey has been instrumental in placing the Y. M. C. A. on a firmer basis and in bringing success generally to this institution.

Shoukl'st thou see a moving light proceeding in and out of the hallowed college buildings, think not that some heavenly constellation hath strayed from its orbit. 'Tis but the gleaming brilliance reflected from the shining locks of one H. O. Reed. Good in disposition and quiet in manner, Henry is a splendid student and holds the high esteem of his fellows.

J. Orson is the only man in college who can claim three places as his home at one spasm. If you want to write to J. O., simply address the epistle to Atapalugas, Laince, or Bingen, or any other place in the neighborhood, and he will get it. His main achievement has been selling Weekly ads. and breaking Chemistry apparatus, and he is one more good one at that.

That walking mountain of physical strength is far from just that. He is the biggest-hearted, most whole-souled man in college as well as the athletic mainstay of the Senior Class. President of the Student Body is the only job big enough to fit his personality, and he has certainly held down the chair of office. Clean and straight as a die; enemy simply fails to exist. His one sore spot is "Griffin with the bases full, and Rumble at the bat."

With a mouth like a white sucker, there have been few to string this man. He fails to bite on any bait except a peculiar kind afforded by a locality somewhere between here and Covington. He is noted for unusual ability to make his mouth elucidate truthful answers to the proofs, which ability has netted him all sorts of honors in the classroom.

Someone has suggested that Dit's initials stand for nothing else but "A Perennial Senior." But Dit says he intends to graduate. Anyhow, Dit has been written up in so many books like this that it is hard to say anything that has not been said at least twice before. He has made himself so well-liked by the Oxford people as well as the students that a number of them are secretly hoping he'll miss his dip.

This future Bishop, after trying all the schools in his catalogue, decided on Emory.
He has been with us only a short time but we have had sufficient time to learn his splendid qualities. He is a man who is not easy to change from his convictions. We are indeed sorry that we have not had him with us longer for we have learned to love him.

A body like a marble faun and a gentle disposition like nobody's but Neal's, this man is a model for posterity to imitate. We have to say all this because he is the "Chief" of this book. Otherwise, we would only say that some day we expect to see Neal the physical director of some Y. M. C. A., and that he is a man whom we are proud to number among our friends. He is another satellite of Covington society on Sundays at least.

That man who seems to be forever pondering on some dark mystery into which the prying eyes of the common people may not look is the E. M. of this organ. We are supposed to tell the truth and if we were to we could only say good things of Lawt. He is a man with a business of his own to which he devotes his entire attention. He has met with marked success in the class room as well as on the baseball diamond.

"Suds" is not a star in any line except making and holding friends and in that he is a past master. He is too retiring to thrust himself before brutally, but prefers to merit their regard by the truest variety of real worth, that of being a friend. Dada Whaley tried to lead his fellow townsman in his flaming path, but "Suds" chose rather the primrose path of pleasant ease. The mere mention of logic has been known to make him quake.

RALPH EUGENE WHITE, Ph.B.

From Dixie a little village in the Wiregrass section of Georgia, there came a man in the year 1912, who was destined to shoot profs, and make friends by his retiring modesty. His motto here has been ten in every class and he has averaged high along the leaders of his class. Though he never kills the ladies to any great extent, we understand that it is not modesty that causes it, but on the other hand the lady back home.

"Bish" ought to have been the model for a statue entitled "The man with his head in his hand." Your education is incomplete if "Bish" does not take your hand in his at least once a day. He had to deliberate a long time before he was certain he would be able to put himself down among the class of which he is Dux. Finally Zeke, quit crying over him and since then "Bish's" only dream has been of diplomas. Sometimes blue, sometimes pink, but always with E. K. Turner signed to them.

JUNIOR
History of Junior Class

In the third year of our march toward "Dip-dom" we pause for a retrospective glance at our achievements, our failures, and all the other forces which unite to make us what we are, or are not, today. Yet we believe that when our account is balanced we will be found with a preponderance of honor to our credit.

Since the first day when the Class of '17 besieged the "King's Court," sixty strong, our history has been marked by progressiveness and a distinct individuality. Many of our men have transferred their energies from the scenes of college life into other fields of action, and tho our ranks have suffered from this depletion, some of these places have been ably filled by recruits.

In scholarship our banner has not trailed in the dust. Then, too, were we not the first to discover the remarkable capabilities of that famous "Jack" to ancient languages?

In athletics we have excelled, for even as Freshmen we won the Relay pennant and vanquished the mighty team of '15 in just enough games to enable the present Senior class to win the Baseball pennant. As Sophomores we were among the leaders in all branches of sport, and this year we have a football and basketball pennant to our credit, with a bright outlook for the baseball season. Our class has also been represented every year on the track team and our aid has contributed substantially to Emory's work in that line.

We have not been found wanting in our supply of "shoot-'em-ups," good debaters, athletes, and men in the other various college activities, although we have a proportionally small class.

And when the last demand is made on us, and we too have passed on to that greater body known as alumni, we shall be remembered, and have the faculty refer to us as a "blue-ribbon" class.

My Envy

For every joy that stirs her heart,
For all the songs that tune her soul,
And every breeze that tells it's tale
Soft and light-burthened from the vale,
I hold a love-sworn rivalry.

The richness of each Autumn night;
The wealth of day's last coloring;
The fragrance of the wind-blown rose
That in her path a blessing strews,
Pay court, as I, in rivalry.

Yet these soft arts of nature tell
A fuller meaning to my soul.
They whisper counsel in their sigh,
And teach their ways to me, that I
May conquer in this rivalry.

"MUTTS AND HIS PET

SOPHOMORE"
History of the Sophomore Class

Those who know us best as a class need no record of our past achievements by which to judge us. But for the benefit of our gentle readers of this page, who know us only by what we have to say of ourselves, we will endeavor to write an autobiography of our first two years in college. We promise not to bestow honors too freely upon our own heads.

In the fall of 1914, we entered college and ever since that time we've been making history of which we are today proud.

We won our first victory last year, when we bluffed the Sophomores out of having the usual event. handed down to us by our predecessors, known as the "relay scrap." And thus being made to feel that we were feared and were really somebody, we started off on the jump with a spirit and enthusiasm that has lasted to this good day, and will last until June, 1918.

The primary reason a man comes to college is to study and learn something.

In this phase of college life, classroom work, we have always stood at the top, having as few or less "flunk outs" and as many or more "shoot-em-ups" as usual. The majority of our men, however, have reached a happy medium of getting up their work in good form—not exactly sharks—and doing some other things such as taking part in athletics, debating, and writing for the school publications, all of which go to make up a college man.

In athletics, although we haven't won on all occasions, we have always stood at the top, and our teams have been feared by our opponents. In the basketball season just finished we came out second, giving the Juniors no little scare in the last game when they took the pennant away from us, we being defeated by the gigantic and overwhelming score of fifteen to thirteen—two points, one whole goal. Next year we predict that the tables will turn in our favor. Among our ranks we have seven "E" men who have not only worked hard and faithfully for their classes but some of whom scored, last year at the track meet held against the University of Georgia, Tech and Mercer. Also last year a Freshman was awarded the Athletic Medal as the best athlete in school.

It remains to be seen what we will do in baseball, but it now looks and not without ground or reason that we will take the "rag."

Our men this year and last have furnished no small amount of the material used by our college publications, and in the literary societies Sophomores are always seen to play a leading role.

We hate to brag, but we honestly believe that the Sophomore class is the very best in school, and that the old "Class of 1918" spirit is bound to win.

On the Shore

O, rage, ye wild, destroying storms,
And make the waves roll high,
I long to see their mighty forms
Arise against the sky:
Yea, let the merry sea-gulls play
Upon each crested height,
And, dancing in the foaming spray,
Be filled with great delight.

O woeful, weird, and wayward wind,
Across your broad expanse
Stir up the elements that lend
The storm hue to enhance,
And I, observing nature's power
To thrill this breathing clod,
Shall feel in this intensive hour
The potency of God.

PRE-MEDS
History of the Pre-Medical Class

To write the history of the Pre-Medical Class of Emory University is no small task, for our history is more of a prophetic than of a historical nature.

When the idea of a new Emory was instilled in the hearts and brains of the great men of our church, there were visions of a great University, a great college of Liberal Arts, a great Law school and last but not least, a vision of the South's greatest medical college.

These men, with a far-seeing vision, incorporated the Atlanta Medical College. This school has for a long time been noted, throughout Georgia and the Southern States. Thus we have as good clinical advantages as any school in the South.

To make this college even greater, a higher curriculum was adopted and the Pre-Medical department was moved to Oxford.

We have made a good beginning, although our number is not very large, but what we lack in numbers is more than offset by our class spirit.

We were not allowed to get out independent teams in athletics but some of our men wrought well on the gridiron and basketball court for the Freshmen. From the past records of some of our members, we believe that Old Emory will find some stars both in basketball and track, during the coming spring.

Our existence has not been altogether a dream during this year for we have been delving 'mongst the wonders of life in Zoo.; learning to distinguish between H2O and H2SO4; striving to get the right French accent; discovering that two men named Boyle and Charles once lived and thrived; and also learning the law of falling bodies.

We, the first Pre-Medical class believe with Voltaire that "Nothing is more estimable than a physician who, having studied nature from his youth, knows the properties of the human body, the diseases which assail it, the remedies which will benefit it, exercises his art with caution, and pays equal attention to the rich and poor."

The Mocking Bird's Song to the Rising Sun

MIGHTY, resplendent orb, with the warmth of the God-benevolence in thy radiance, and the observation of countless centuries in thy experience, to thee I lift my song of varied melodies.

Lo, thou hast awakened the hills from their slumber, and decked them with their day dress of verdue, and over the distant up-lands thou hast thrown a mantle of delicate gray. O, quickener of the green life, O, beloved restorer of the inexpressible glory of day, my heart is attuned to thy exultant optimism, and in the bursting of silent buds I am aware of thy rejoicing. O, divine magnificence, O, inestimable revelation of the supreme life, O, skillful artist and sublime flourisher of untold beauty; to thee I sing, I sing.
History of Freshman Class

ND so it is with the class of 1919. We have made a History for ourselves, not a Prophecy as is true in many cases.

Since we have attained the rank of college men, the place does not look so great as it did when we used to look forward to it in our younger days. But we must realize that now is the time to make good, to bring forth the fruits of work done in bygone days, and to exert every effort to carry with us the unselfish spirit which we have created.

As Freshmen, of course we took a modest, but full interest in all of the various school activities, making a record for ourselves in the class room. Two out of the five who, when their reports went home the first time, made an entire average of A, were Freshmen.

Our record on the gridiron shows that we were not lacking in this phase of college life, and will long be remembered and talked of with awe as men come and go before us. Though we did not win the pennant, our team, and especially our five men who wear "E's" are worthy of being commended.

We well remember that sumptuous banquet which was spread for us in the Fall; and the result—of the much class spirit which it created amongst us. And this feeling of class spirit has increased since and been carried by members of the class into every activity into which they entered.

Our basketball season was not crowned with any special success, but we developed a team well worth while, as one of our men was picked for "All Emory Forward."

From the present outlook our baseball team and track men are going to shine forth and do us honor.

As our record has been—as a unit—so may it continue, and those who follow after us will look with admiration on the achievements of the Class of 1919.

A Freshman's Prayer

YE who occupy the seats of authority at Emory, have mercy on me for I am a Freshman and far from home. My condition seems tightly corked up in this the first syllable of my classification.

Accustomed to the high places at home, I considered myself worthy of distinction here, but Lo, Trig and Latin beset we with woes innumerable. I know not whither to turn for aid. I am shorn of the glories of my past achievements. I am told that my "certificate" is not my own but the "property of the college."

Oft times the gloom gathers 'round me. I would that I had an excuse to go home, but fear that it would lower my standing with "HER" should I fail. To this end let me screw my courage to the "sticking" point and resolve to be brave and independent.

So then, ye men of the faculty, "doctored" be your names, yea let the hallowed head of "Zeke" be crowned with olive, let zeros come if your work is not done. Give us this day our daily lecture but deliver us from taking notes thereon for hard it is to write, think and listen together.

Forgive us our absence even as we forgive you for cutting a class. Lead us not into Calculus and Chemistry and deliver us from Latin, for ours is the burden, the toil and the struggle. Keep back thy students also from accumulating back work and lead us gently along the path of a rise and we shall cross safely over the dead-line of flunking and rest under the shade of a dip. Amen.
BEGINNINGS are necessarily modest. Reputation in any line is only to be attained by the price of diligence, patience, and time. So this is but the preface, the introduction, to a record, the length and importance of which we dare not now estimate.

From a student body numbering less than three score, the Academy put forth a relay team against the college teams; carried them a successful basketball league composed of four teams; placed a varsity basketball team in the college league; put out two strong basketball squads, the varsity entering college competition; has a tennis club of a third of the student body with an official tournament; and is carrying on practice for a Special Gym exhibition and an inter-prep track meet. Not so bad, is it?

Student government; the athletic association; the Jas. E. Dickey and Warren A. Candler Literary Societies with the keen zest of their intersociety debates, these must not be forgotten.

Then, above all, the comradeship spirit which is so easily felt, but so hard to point out. The something which makes E. U. A. stand for something far greater than three initials.

In this our first chapter we have given the Academy a personality. There was no precedent, no rules, no stories of former prestige to be whispered in awed tones by old men. But we have formed precedent and tradition. In a short space of time the machine has become well oiled and put into first speed.

Our successors will not find the inertia of newness to be overcome; the Academy student-body of 1915-16 has laid the corner stone and succeeded in the difficulties of self adjustment.

We have finished the first chapter of the history of E. U. A.

Why?

I fumbled 'mid old volumes, dusty-dim,
Which long upon the shelf untouched had lain,
And as I blew away the unkind dust
My heart grew heavy with a stringent pain.

Why does the world neglect such jewels rare,
Gift-sprung, full-formed, from out God's poet-mines,
Or shame the sense of beauty, God-bestowed,
And feed it husks which righteousness declines?

DAVID STEWART WALKER

LYNCHBURG, VA.

A. B., Virginia Christian College, Vanderbilt University, University of Chicago, Summer, 1915.

Vice-President Y. M. C. A., '14-'15; Sigma Pi Epsilon Theological Club; Degree, Fall Term, 1915.

"Dave" is graceful in manners, fascinating in conversation and of a sunny temperament. He is peculiarly gifted in adapting himself to his environment, whether it be in homes of luxury or in the mountains of his native state. We predict for him the greatest success in his chosen field of mission work in the mountains of Virginia.

CLINTON OTTO BAY

ALBIA, IOWA.

Cornell College; A. B., Pen College; Drew Theological Seminary, Y. M. C. A. Cabinet, '14-'15; Synagogue; Degree, Fall Term 1915.

For his rare disposition, affectionate nature, and intense loyalty to his friends, Bay will always be remembered. His specialty is work among children. Although his calls were usually short, he possesses a large amount of information concerning Cox College.
ROSCOE SAMUEL DAVID

DANIELSVILLE, GA.

A.B., Young Harris College; A.B., Vanderbilt University.
Tau Kappa Alpha, Vanderbilt University; Editor-in-Chief, Panorama, Candler School of Theology; Square and Compass Club; President Sigma Pi Epsilon Theological Club; Y. M. C. A. Cabinet; Member of North Georgia Conference; Pastor Capitol View Methodist Church, Atlanta, Ga. Degree Course.

"Jesse's" sesquipedalian propensities are surpassed only by his grandiloquent flights of oratory; he makes frequent use of his dactylic member in promulgating his esoteric cogitations. At the various institutions attended he has achieved honors in debate and scholarship. His recent courses in courtology have metamorphosed him into quite a philanderer.

OSCAR M. HAWKINS

CHARLESTON, MO.

A.B., Washington University, Vanderbilt University.
President Student Body; President Student Council; Senior Representative, Student Council; Athletic Council; Secretary-Treasurer Middle Class; Literary Editor Panorama, '15; Basketball Manager, '15-'16; Tennis Club; Synagogue; Sigma Pi Epsilon Theological Club. Degree Course.

"Snake" delights to instigate diabolical jokes; to start midnight disturbances in the dormitory, to “spout” heresy to the Freshmen, and to send petitions to the Faculty. He has a fondness for exchatological themes. "Hawk" is a star at basketball and an expert at "shooting" the "Profs." His study does not interfere with "rook" and the "movies."
JOHN WRIGHT CHISHOLM

New Augusta, Miss.

B.A., Millsaps College.

First Student to Register in Emory University; Y. M. C. A.; Sigma Pi Epsilon Theological Club; Member Mississippi Annual Conference. Degree Course.

"Dady" is a man settled in purpose, philosophical in thinking, and candid in expression. His friends who know him best appreciate him most.

JESSE MARK GUINN

Houston, Miss.

B.A., Millsaps College.

Kappa Alpha, Millsaps College; Chairman Devotional Committee, Y. M. C. A.; Glee Club. Degree Course.

Mark has a peculiar fondness for music and flowers. He is always employed in attending to his own business; he never tries to make his opinions authoritative. Practical Sociology is his favorite study.
OTIS LEVI GILLIAM

Carrollton, Va.

A.B., Randolph-Macon College.
Sigma Pi Epsilon Theological Club. Degree Course.

He is destined to become great, because he is from Virginia. His chief claim to distinction lies in the field of scholarship, for he is never seen apart from his books.

ROBERT THOMAS HARRISON

Alpharetta, Ga.

Young Harris College; Vanderbilt University.
Member North Georgia Conference. Diploma Course.

"Bob" is orthodox in that he believes that "it is not good for man to live alone." He never lets his studies interfere with his pastoral duties. Speaking generally "Bob" is generally speaking: for if he is in the building every one knows it.
J. N. RUSSELL SCORE

AUBREY, ARK.

A.B., Scarritt-Morrisville College.
Secretary and Treasurer Senior Class; President Athletic Association; Chairman Athletic Council; Treasurer Y. M. C. A.; Chairman Y. P. Service Committee, Y. M. C. A.; Tennis Club; Glee Club; Assistant Librarian; Emory University Quartet; Synagogue; Sigma Pi Epsilon Theological Club. Degree Course.

"Bill," when questioned closely, admits that he is not from Missouri. Although he has not yet put away childish things, he is the Quartet reliable, a good athlete, an excellent student, and a proficient bull artist. He takes good (?) care of the library. His ambition is to be a "Prof."

WILLIAM MORRISON HAYWOOD

DUBLIN, GA.

A.B., Meridian College.
Sigma Pi Epsilon Theological Club; Member South Georgia Conference. Degree Course.

"Bishop" is conscientious in his studies, commanding in appearance, and ambitious in his calling. He agrees with him who said, "If a man desire the office of a bishop, he desireth a good work."
BENJAMIN FRANKLIN PIM, Jr.

Atlanta, Ga.

A.B., A. M., Davidson College.

President Local and Georgia State Intercollegiate Prohibition Association; Secretary and Treasurer Tennis Club; Tennis Champion, '15; President University Glee Club, '15; University Pianist; Vice-President Sigma Pi Epsilon Theological Club. Degree Course.

Frank is a gentleman, a scholar, a champion tennis player, and the Paderewski of the University. He possesses all the qualifications for a successful city pastor.

SAMUEL McPHERSON MIMS

Oxford, Ala.

Alabama Polytechnic Institute; A.B., Birmingham College; Vanderbilt University.

President Senior Class; Vice President Middle Class; Vice President Y. M. C. A.; Chairman Missionary Committee, Y. M. C. A. and University; Student Volunteer Band; President Atlanta Student Volunteer Union; Vice President Athletic Council; President Tennis Club; Basketball Team; Sigma Pi Epsilon Theological Club. Degree Course.

"Sam" has made a record compatible with his under-graduate honors. He is a "shark" at tennis, not given to loquacity, an enthusiast for missions, and a Tragelles in Hebrew. Although one would not suspect it, he is often seen with the ladies.
WALTER EUGENE BROWN

Madras, Ga.

B.S., Young Harris College; Vanderbilt University.
Member North Georgia Conference. Diploma Course.

"He never said a foolish thing, nor did a wise one." During his stay in the seminary, Walter has evinced considerable interest in Biblical Theology and Church Dogma, and has done the major part of his work in these subjects.

CHARLES LEVIN MIDDLEBROOKS

Elamville, Ala.

Emory College.

Phi Delta Theta, Emory College; Member North Georgia Conference. Diploma Course.

The word "worry" is not in his vocabulary. Sometimes he preaches Middlebrooks, but more often Brooks. His social duties are so numerous that he has very little time for study.

Great Expectation

You see the Freshman is quite green and it cannot yet be seen.
What will come of all the whirl his brains are in.
But this story I will tell, of a young guy, yet quite swell,
Who did seek to come within old Emory's door.
He sought to come with all the knowledge, that he gained while off at college
All of this but nothing more.

To the Dean he dropped a line, telling him the very time,
Yes, the train, the hour, the minute; and with all due haste had sent it,
When he'd land his portly personage here upon Atlanta's shore.
In the letter, he implied, that the Dean could but decide
Him to meet, with flags galore and band in great uproar.
All of this if nothing more.

At the very time appointed, he arrived, his hair anointed,
With such ointment as we'd never smelled before.
He left the platform in great glee and strained his eyes the flags to see;
He listened hard the band to hear; then, to his heart, there came a fear;
The Dean, the band, the flags galore were neither waiting at the door.
Waiting for him, Nevermore.

Just imagine his chagrin, since he'd off to college been!
And now, no honor to him paid, he promptly sought the Ladies' Aid.
He cried, "O lady, have you seen, have you seen a man named Dean?
Tell me straight, I do implore, if he's come and gone before
My train arrived? I wrote him, true, that I'd be here at half-past two.
Quothed the aid girl, Nevermore."

Then, seizing up his grip, he cried, "I will not this way be denied."
He came; his pride was hurt; he wore a striped green-blue shirt.
And thus unto the Dean he went, to let him know that he'd resent
Such treatment as did make him "sore," and he told him, furthermore,
That he had been away to school and, therefore, claimed to be no fool.
He told him this and maybe more.

The Dean reached up and scratched his head, and smiling pleasantly, he said,
"If you now wish, as you implore, to come within old Emory's door,
Put down your grip and pay the "kale", for the ship's about to sail.
She sails tomorrow, nine o'clock, and all who go must be on dock.
A registration card will be your passport to the great high sea."
Quothed the Freshman, "All aboard."

A Vision of Life

In looking o'er the transient earth,
To find the thing of greatest worth;
I sought the Source of strength and light,
To help my short, imperfect sight.

I begged, I prayed for greater light,
That I might see the world aright.
I know not how; I know not why,
But that the light came to my eye.

I stood upon a towering height
With heaven and earth in perfect sight.
'Twould fill your mind with grief and awe,
If I should tell you all I saw.

I heard the secrets of the world,
I saw the starry sky unfurled,
For fear I should be doing wrong,
I speak not of the heavenly throng.

The greatest truth revealed to me,
Is one that many men can see;
Yet seeing it a living fact,
Their poor, weak wills refuse to act.

There is a fault that's grave and stern,
Its full import is hard to learn.
It is that God's humanity
Is spending life in vanity.

The hungry heart can ne'er be filled,
The pulsing brain can ne'er be stilled,
The groping soul no light can see,
Though steeped in wealth and luxury.

The poor man's hut, the widow's grief,
The dying child without relief,
And all the pain and woe we find,
Has no true place amongst mankind.

The upright, pure, believing soul
Has greater wealth than earth can hold.
The heart of faith, and hope and love
Has joy on earth, a home above.

Expression

No language could so well convey
The meaning of thy queenly face,
As when in silence soft I feel
The meaning of thy look's embrace.

In it is told sweet destiny:
Of blissful life too bright for tears,
And hopes that join as one glad song
In triumphs of the coming years.

This sentry of thy truest self
Speaks but the essence of thy soul,
And tells me what thou art in tones
No other voice could well control.

History of the Student Government Association

OME people claim that, when God has a great work to be done, he prepares a man to do it. Others hold that the crisis produces the man, or calls forth his genius. Of this we are sure, the man and the task are always found together.

It was thus in the course of events at Emory, when the students were no longer content for the student activities, namely: Athletics, publications, extension, etc., to be controlled by a few, that there arose a man for the situation. The former chroniclers of the history of the Emory Student Government Association failed to record the name of the man who conceived the idea of a united student body in an Association. This Association was organized in 1911, having as its purpose a greater Emory, by putting out better publications, having better athletics, and a system of activities in which the student body as a whole might participate. Prior to this time the publications were controlled by that portion of the students who belonged to the two Literary Societies. Athletics were under the direction of the Athletic Association, embracing about fifty per cent of the students. The work of extension, advertising outside of the College circles was under the supervision of the Greater Emory Club, composed of such men as wished to join. They had no Judicial Department, in this respect they were like the Colonies under the Articles of Confederation, they could declare everything and do only those things which a few conscientious students were willing to do themselves.

Under the present regime all student activities are carried out according to the constitution, administered by the Central Board. This Central Board is composed of President, Vice-President, Secretary of the Association and the Chairmen of the various committees: Judicial, Greater Emory, Athletic and Publication.

These, with other minor officers, Editors, etc., are elected annually by the popular vote of the student body. Every student in college is a member of this Association and pays into the Treasury $3.00 each year. In return for this, each student receives the Weekly and the Phoenix and is privileged to participate in, and be a spectator to all the college athletics. All have the right of franchise and the privilege of holding office. Under this system responsibilities and privileges are shared alike, each man feels, therefore, that he is a part of a unit which is working for a greater, a better and more useful Emory.

THE RINEMA 1916
History of the Y. M. C. A.

ANY years ago the Y. M. C. A. was organized as an aid in the promotion of the principles and purposes on which our Christian institution was founded. Although we have had no Y. M. C. A. building, the association has always found an attractive and inviting home in Few and Phi Gamma Halls. Since Emory College has only represented the Department of Liberal Arts, the size of our student body has not justified the employment of a Y. M. C. A. secretary. But from the student body there have been such men selected as Presidents and Cabinet members who have not allowed the "C" in "Y. M. C. A." to lose its significance and they have initiated movements and fostered ideals which have done much toward creating a moral and religious atmosphere among the students. Among those who have been actively engaged in the work was Mr. Arthur Brown who afterwards became very prominent in the Y. M. C. A. work.

The weekly meetings which are held on Saturday evening are usually led by members of the faculty, the local minister and out-of-town speakers. Subjects which pertain vitally to character building and the life work of the students are discussed. In addition to this, Bible and Missionary Study Classes are held on Sunday afternoon in the various Fraternity chapter houses, boarding houses and dormitories.

Great progress has been made this year along financial lines. No membership fee is being charged but a financial campaign was inaugurated in which the students were asked to contribute according to their means. The result of the campaign was that more than twice the amount formerly secured by membership fees was subscribed. The Y. M. C. A. is planning to edit a handbook, the purpose of which is to boost the institution and furnish valuable information to new students. It also proposes to give financial support to five delegates to the Students' Conference at Black Mountain, N. C.

With the expansion of Emory College into a University, we trust that it will also mean a broadening of the sphere of the Y. M. C. A. May it not be a false prophecy that some day on the campus of Emory University there will be erected a commodious Y. M. C. A. building and that the work will merit and command the service of an efficient secretary.

Toothache

Now, quit yo' teasin', 'Tilda,
'Case can't you see Ah's sick?
A nigger wid de toothache
I'll boff you wid a brick.

Ah tell you Ah's had measles
An' smallpox, too, las' May,
But nothin's bad ez toothache
Fer gittin' in yo' way.

Now hush up, 'Tilda, hear me?
Ah's rough ez rocks tonight.
Ah'll kill you dead, an' cuss you,
A rat 'ud make me fight.

So quit yo' foolish laughin',
An see'f dat towel's hot * * * *
You say you's gwine to quit me? * * *
Ah's fittin' to be shot!

History of Phi Gamma

In 1837, Emory College was opened for the reception of students, under the presidency of Dr. I. A. Few, with Dr. Alexander Means and Rev. Chas. W. Lane as professors. The first class, of three members, was graduated in 1841.

Today, we have the great Emory University, consisting of three main departments, namely: the Theological, The Medical, and the Academic or School of Liberal Arts. Nearly two thousand men have graduated from the institution which had so humble a beginning.

A significant fact is found in the knowledge that through all these years, the college has never lost a series of debates. Surely some great factor has played a most important part in these great victories for our college; nor is it hard to determine this most important factor. We find that in the year of the founding of this institution, a literary society was formed. On March 8, 1837, the students met for the organization of such a society and gave to it the name "Phi Gamma." They chose for a motto to be placed upon the standard: "Scientio et Religio Libertatis Custodes." Webster, Clay, Calhoun and others were shaking the country with their matchless oratory, and this society was formed for the purpose of helping men in their efforts to help themselves, to improve their powers of speaking and reasoning. The founders of the society were young men of earnest purpose whose desire was to obtain not only the advantages to be derived from parliamentary discussions, but also to secure the benefits arising from the association of young men of high character and like aspirations.

The society formed under such conditions, by such influences, and with such aims could not but succeed. Within two years the membership had so increased that it was necessary to divide the society. The members were divided into two parties, two members "choosing up," and the other half formed a new society called "Few" in honor of Emory's first president. These two societies have ever worked together with a common aim and high resolve. Several debates are held between the two every year, the greatest of which is the Champion Debate held at commencement. In these debates much rivalry and interest is manifested but always has it been of a most friendly and helpful nature.

History of Few Literary Society

In the earliest days of the Republic, the man who could present his views in such shape as to carry conviction was the man who gained honor and popularity in the minds of the American citizens. For this reason oratory and debate was greatly magnified by our fathers and especially by the educated men and at the educational institutions.

One year after the founding of Emory College, when sharp intellect and effectual speech were requisite to good citizenship, Phi Gamma Literary Society was established. The increase in the number of students and the immense popularity of such a feature in college work soon made it evident that another institution of the same nature was essential. So on August 10, 1839, fourteen spirited debaters and loyal members of Phi Gamma withdrew and organized themselves into a society, the purpose of which was "The promotion of virtue and patriotism, the cultivation of forensic powers, and for the sake of general improvement in science and literature."

The Society thus organized was named Few, "In deference to the illustrious name and eminent virtues of the first President of Emory College, Ignatius A. Few."

The minutes of the early days show an intense loyalty to the Society on the part of its members. The discussions were long and heated and the minutes indicated that the debate continued the entire day, sometimes without a decision. On September 26, 1840, a resolution was introduced to provide the Society with a permanent home, as a result the present building was erected.

Throughout three quarters of a century, Few has enjoyed remarkable success. Her sons have won success and renown in every phase of college life and have become prominent men in the busy scenes of life, in the activities of both church and state.

Only one time has there been an interruption in the literary work of the Society. This occurred during the bloody civil strife which called for all of Emory's sons to lay down the pursuits of art and literature and take up the sword and fight for principle and conviction. During these four years the two society halls were converted into hospitals for the wounded Confederate soldiers.

When the war was ended, college and society work was resumed. Two of Few's members survived, Mr. Roberts and Rev. Charles Lane. They elected themselves president and secretary respectively and began at once to elect and initiate new members. Since then the membership has been increasing yearly until the matriculation book, presented by Dr. J. F. Bonnell, shows a list of over twenty-one hundred names.

Among those who received their training in Few, and have gone forth to reflect upon Few and Emory College are such men as Judge John S. Candler, Dr. I. S. Hopkins, Dr. James E. Dickey and Rev. C. C. Jarrell.

Few Society has been one of the most potent influences of Emory College since its foundation.

Relying upon her record in the past, her power in the present, and her prospect for the future, and under her motto, "Pro virtute et patria," we can expect only unbounded success and prosperity.

A. W. Murray, Historian.

Mixture

The rose is a dream in the beam of dawn,
But thorns everywhere are all there on the stem.
The birds are rejoicing in voicing their love,
While snakes in their hate lie in wait in the grass.
The sky is all bright in the light of God's day:
The world is aflame with the shame of her sin.
So this is the strife in the life of a man—
The bad is entwined and combined with the good.

The Unity of Emory University

By Elam Franklin Dempsey, D.D.

I.

As in nature marvelous simplicity underlies seeming complexity, just so in Emory University unity underlies apparent variety.
In what does this unity consist?
It does not consist in geographical unity.
It does not consist in administrative unity, though happily there is unity in administration among the rapidly increasing departments.
It does not consist in unity of curricula, although in this respect there is a most excellent inter-departmental harmony.

II.

Since, then, this unity exists, and yet is found to consist in none of the above principles, where shall we go to find it?
In answering this question, let us take an analogy. In what does the unity of the human body consist? Removing what principle will cause the body to fall into its separate parts? What is it without which the human body is an unorganized heap of dust?

The Spirit!
With equal swiftness this would be the answer of untutored savage, cultured savant, or unlessoned child.

III.

Emory University!
Pronouncing these words, we bring before the mind a picture that is indeed splendid. Among institutions of learning a form appears, towering head and shoulders above all the noble and stately forms which surround it. It is a form that combines large and growing endowments, spacious buildings, the unmatched charms of two separate landscapes, the resources of a group of able faculties, and the vim and aspiration of hosts of students.
But buildings, broad acres and multitudes of men cannot make that organized entity, which constitutes the stately figure—so definitely individual—of Emory University. What is it then without which this vital entity dissolves into chaos?

The Emory Spirit!
With equal swiftness this would be the answer of casual observer, interested professor, or patriotic student.

IV.

Who shall catch in sharp-edged words of definition that intangible thing spirit? Perhaps, however, we may indicate something of what is meant by our glorious Emory Spirit. We are as clearly aware of it as we are of the sun whose golden beams we may untwist by our prisms. But we have as little art to reproduce it by analysis as we have to reweave from its spectrum the radiance of sunlight.

It is discerned, like the Spirit of Spirits, by its manifestation.

Ardent love for God—not conventional religion—is at once its primordial source and highest expression. Its religious speech has the accent of reality and it no more considers it cant to speak in Biblical terms of religious things than it does to speak in Classical terms of classical matters. It calls God “Father” and “Savior”, not “Moral Ruler of the Universe”. This is the heart, “beating with one full stroke, life”. This heart is kept with all diligence, not that there may be rapture at the center while death is at the extremities as in mere introspective piety, but because out of it is the issue of life.

This heart abides not alone. It builds a body around itself of both creed and custom.

To such a spirit, man is no time-creature. He is immortal. It lifts his horizon to eternity. It expands his aspiration to infinity. Hence, it is extremely individualistic. For such a being to be lost is an infinite woe. Personal salvation, therefore, is paramount, as conditioning all else. “What shall it profit a man if he build church-houses, hospitals, schools and sanitary cities all over the world and lose his own soul?” it asks of the unregenerate social worker. But it well knows that a “new creature” will work for a “new creation”. It was a son of Emory, aflame with the “social passion”, who said, “Nothing praises or pleases God like service”. This is the spirit which honors the past and secures the future by serving the present.

The Emory Spirit flows from that love for God which inspires a disinterested love for man that expresses itself in joyous service.

V.

The Unity of Emory University?

It is found in “The Emory Spirit”.

May it be like that river that went out of Eden to water the whole earth.
The Fragrance of the Saffron

E LAY quite still—and, when I thought no longer could it be a ruse, but what a Great Sleep must have come to him, I felt my way through that blackest of all nights toward where I had heard him fall. The Red Mist of Anger was still before my eyes, and, when my foot struck against his soft body, I spurned it as I would a Parish cur—him, the pillager of my Garden of Happiness, the thief of my Flower of Delight. "Choor!" I spat upon him.

Then, the Moon, Pale Mistress of the Night—curious as woman is—must see this deed of justice, and tore aside her veil of clouds. Through the foliage of the deodar trees, her glances, keen like the gleams of my stiletto, fell upon his face. His turban was of the finest silk, and fancy, and his face was young. On his snow-white kurta were stains, red like the poison lotus buds upon the moonlit lake. Like the graceful cobra winding among the purple water-weeds, he was beautiful. Like a snake he had stolen my Flower of Delight with his smooth face and woman's ways.

Out of the darkness came a sobbing. It sounds as the wailing of the west wind, as the moaning of oppressed waters. From the shadow of a giant pepul tree, like twin emeralds, glowed the eye of my Flower. Those eyes were wet with tears—for him; and again the Red Mist swam before her eyes. My hand closed over my stiletto until my finger nails were wet with blood—my blood, for I could not find it in my heart to strike a weeping woman.

As a lily, shaken by the winds, spreads its dew, so her tears fell upon my feet, and her words were as a rustle of silk. She fawned upon me as would a dog—for her soul was broken with fear, and I knew that, while her mouth was full of words for me, her heart was for him lying dead.

Yet, a pity seized me. She was so much like a fragile flower, and does the fragrance of the saffron flower go where the wind blows?

Ah! But now the buds of her soul were crushed. Her pleadings were piteous as those of the beggar at the door of the Mosque, and her babbleings were like a slave's. Was he who had only inhaled their fragrance, wafted upon the wind of passion, viler than I who had crushed the buds? There in the grasses of the jungle I pondered these things.

E. LEWIS KING.
Dooley's Diary

UNCLE DOOLEY, despite fears and tremors of misgivings because the Pre-Meds were to be the guardians of his sacred ashes, has survived another year of watchful waiting, and hereunto affixes his journal of events, exciting and otherwise, with which the year has been replete.

September 15.—From out the wilds of Ballground and the marshes of Attapulgus great gaubs of new men come to worship at the shrine of Medusa. We thought the woods had been cleared up, but women and great men change their minds. Sambo toots the bell and Cop Dial rings the whistle, and we're off.

September 16.—Broadnax says single beds are lonesome. Piles in with his roommate.

September 17.—Strickland signs up for gym and rents a locker. Madam tells him: “Aha, sir. I perceive that someone has played a practical joke on you, sir.”

September 18.—Academites invade Cov. en masse. All check in to Bob at ten twenty-nine.

September 19.—Zeke has thirty-four in his Sunday School class. All but two are A.B. and Ph.B. underclassmen.

September 20.—Hughie Walker comments on the number of handkerchiefs in the Academy washing.

September 21.—Plastering falls in on “M. T.”, alias Snake. He quaffs deeply of Griffith’s stock of catchup and is found in the cold grey dawn sleeping peacefully in the Confederate Cemetery.

September 22.—King politics the new men by speaking disapprovingly of the moral value of the belt in its relation to verdant Freshmen.

September 23.—Seniors report for football practice. Sealey, Tank, Bishop and Bert make some team.

September 24.—Rogers playing barefoot bests McNatt in a hot match of tennis.

September 26.—King takes up another collection. Service called at one fifteen for dinner.

September 27.—Snake is shot with a Roman candle and Candler moves because Snake refuses to sleep with the windows up thereafter.

September 29.—Chappell of Tennessee reports for first gym. Banks attends gym to see the vaudeville.

October 1.—Tomas Torres applies at the hardware store for powdered shoe tacks.
October 4.—Candler sleeps through Sociology and History II. without knowing the class had changed.

October 8.—Fish Club inaugurated with the following charter members: Lane, President; Knight, Vice-President; Stewart, Secretary, and Husbands, Treasurer.

October 9.—Sub loses his eraser. Much excitement until he finds it in his hand.

October 12.—Sub tells History II class about Adam and his dollar at compound interest.

October 15.—Fritz Lane calls a meeting of Tambourine Club.

October 17.—Froggie Kelly preaches only twenty minutes. Zeke in tears over the departure from the ways of the fathers.

October 18.—Freshmen enlist the services of the Shakerag Band and lose to the Sophomores 7-0.

October 19.—Barber buys a new gourd and starts his water wagon.

October 23.—Fish Club holds its weekly meeting in the peanut of the Colonial in Athens.

October 26.—Dick is elated over the first issue of the Phoenix. Says it has “a masculine flavor,” that “it is wholesome.”

October 28.—W. C. T. U. in town. Reporter Flanders accused of smoking raid the picture show.

October 29.—W. C. T. U. in town. Reporter Flanders accused of smoking by one of the fair ladies. Nuts Eckford learns a new yell and signs the pledge.

November 2.—Dit Stewart shoots Zeke in Latin, who is afraid that he will graduate. Dit entertains no fears.

November 6.—Warlick gets Nick to send forget-me-nots to Wesleyan. Receives many thanks for the paper floral offering.

November 9.—King leaves for conference with a new hat, suit, and tie. Says he is going after a job but is accused of celebrating the end of his reign.

November 13.—Twenty-eight men present at chapel. Large number out of town on fishing trip.

November 15.—Rotundity Club has annual meeting. Shingler elected president, Cop Dial, vice president, Chastain fails to qualify.

November 17.—Bill Burt brings forth the old stove. Fish Club rejoices.

November 21.—Madam misses connection and spills collection basket. Mad scramble for change ensues.

November 23.—Class in German I prepares lesson. Doctor Davenport called in to aid in resuscitating Bo.
November 29.—Sulphur and lard again return to prominence on Fritz Lane's dresser.

December 1.—The King is dead. Long live King Sub.

December 3.—Nuts tries to borrow a pair of shoes to go to Cov. Plink refused to accommodate him.

December 4.—Pup Rogers, Willie Eckford, and Barham Blue elected delegates to reunion of veterans in Jefferson. They refuse to go unless chaperoned by George Pinckney.

December 5.—Zeke receives excuses dated November 31, 32, 33 and 31.

December 7.—Zeke begins learning new song. Nag rehearses it in gym.

December 13.—Batchelors' Hall Instituted. Miss Sallie grief-stricken.

December 14.—Pan-Hellenic Banquet at the DeLaney. Candler and Banks threatened with gout.

December 23.—Tank hears the call of back to the woods and others follow his wandering footsteps.

January 4.—Carnival and Emory hit Cov. at the same time. Sub imparts advice too late for some.

January 6.—Madam gets off his spring term oration. Subject, The Rhodes Scholarship, sah.

January 12.—Fish Club dissolves. Sweet Sixteen takes its place. Miss Emmie qualifies for the Pinkerton Agency.

January 15.—Sub ties his shoes and presses his clothes.

January 17.—English Blossoms out in the original campaign hat and Garland buys some dopes.

January 21.—Arcade deserted for a week. Carnival gives up and leaves town. Cause, finals.

February 1.—Madam calls a meeting of all those who are contemplating attending Harvard.

February 5.—Prominent members of the Senior class run off with the Winecoff hat girls. Jay Hays is confused. Can't find his celery spoon.

February 7.—Seniors invest in photographic plates. Brooks Fite, Bishop Wilson and Sealey endeavor to disguise themselves as Apollo. Hays exhorted to refrain from "Jay Walking."

February 9.—Shingler has new picture made for the Annual. Also orders Annual with a gilt-lettered name on cover.

February 16.—Floy Holt begins getting excited about the Brenau girls.

February 18.—V. P. Stevens asks Miss Brown if she was the one that played "that Percolator" last night.
February 21.—Big increase in gate receipts at Post Office—Destination Gainesville. McNatt reports to the Excuse Committee that he has been to see his "best girl" and has his department cut.

February 26.—"Tammany Hall" destroyed by fire. Rumored that Richard set it on fire. "MUTTS" enrolls heroes in the Constitution.

February 27.—"George Pinckney" spends another week-end at Wesleyan.

March 3.—Much sentiment flows from Tommie Morgan's able pen. Dick's soul is filled with delight over the accomplishments of his under-study.

March 6.—Candidates arraign themselves for the opening of the political season. Clouds gather in the sky and foul odors are detected, indicative of crooked deals. English discards the "campaign hat"—selects a derby instead.

March 10.—Flanders and McNatt become bright lights in Chemistry 1. Flanders on his Pharmaceutical record, McNatt on his achievements in the realm of Society. Shingler becomes eloquent.

March 25.—Whompus appears. Flanders complains of disabilities and remains in his room.

April 1.—"Madam" puts extra lock on the door of the "Peedmont" Driving Club. Becomes so excited at Chapel that he forgets to whistle.

April 8.—"Election Day"—Never Again Club organized.

April 15.—"Dit" Stewart prepares for final mad rush. "Zeke" quakes and Madam dreams dreams.

April 20.—"Pup" Rogers gets off the 7:20 at Almon. "Nuts" Eckford jerks him back by the collar and together they ride in to Cov. on the steps.

May 1.—"Sub" prepares for the meeting of the Trustees. Throws his hat in the ring.

May 10.—Excuse Committee goes on another "tear" and seeks to instill fear in the hearts of the students. No use.

May 15.—Dude who has been reposing contentedly on his victory over Doug when he turned him out of the Room of Inquisition, turns up late to the Excuse Committee. Gee threatens him with dismissal.

May 25.—Diploma in sight. Some have to use a telescope but are able to discern its deepening outlines.

June 9.—She comes.

June 14.—After Shorty has said his little (?) speech, Froggy rises to announce that there has been offered for the ensuing year a medal to anyone who will offer an entirely satisfactory plan for excusing absences. Bish Wilson finds it hard to realize that he has no Latin behind.

Sea Memories

No, comrade mine, I will not go down to
The seashore for a while * * * I am not strong Enough to face the sea until the tide
Can bring me more than echoes of a grim
And awful day of loss * * * No, comrade, I
Cannot forgive the sea until I am
Grown older, and the wounds of one dark hour
Lye sealed with memory in the tomb of long
Forgotten years . . . Fresh are they now—ah, fresh
As when I first received them in that hour
Of deepest gloom, one year tomorrow—yes
One year ago, and yet the picture is
As clear as though it were but yesterday * * *
So long has been the stretch between the Then
And Now . . . I'll tell you all about it. Draw
Your chair a little nearer. Now, right there . . .
My Alice was the fairest thing God ever made—
That is, the fairest thing these eyes have seen.
Her hair was soft and wavy like a dream
Of melted gold—alluring, grand, ag'eam . . .
Have you not seen such hair somewhere—like that
With which the Masters framed Madonna's eyes?
Your eyes remind me of my Love's tonight . . .
All eyes remind me of her own which have
A tinge of brown, and when my thoughts are full
Of all hers meant to me. . . . There was within
The depths of those sweet orbs a music—yes
To me a music like the melody
Of love, which lured my being into full,
Responsive harmony. . . . And in those eyes
I oft imagined I saw beaming—God . . .
We had been married but a few short months.
The seashore was to us a paradise . . .
And radiant with the beauty of our love.
Our cottage home was but a stone's throw from
The sea, and it was our delight to go
Down to the shore to watch the waves crawl up
The beach, and dash themselves against the rocks.
Then would the white birds dive, and kiss the spray.
The wind would play among my Love's great strands
Of hair, making her laugh as though they were O'erflowing with delicious ecstacy.
And, stopping suddenly, at times, she'd stand
With head thrown back, her eyes upon the far Expanse, and murmur sweetly this: "My sea,
My beautiful, my lovely sea." Have you
Not heard me murmur that? You say you have?...
Now you can understand.

One balmy day
Of April, when I had gone out upon
The sea, a storm awoke. The clouds grew black.
The waves began to roar and leap. The wind
Was strong, and swept my boat across the waves
As light as it might an autumn leaf.
Thus I was helpless, left to destiny.
Then Providence was kind, and threw the frail Shape of my boat upon the sands. I rushed Up to my little home that I might tell
My Alice of the great escape. As I Drew near I called, but there was no reply.
The house stood silent, strange, serene, alone.
My frame was shaken by foreboding fears...
It was a disappointment, comrade mine,
Much like I think a mother knows when one
She loves, to her surprise, has gone astray.
It chilled my heart, and dimmed my soul; it made
The edge of all these earthly things grow sharp,
And filled my spirit with a loneliness...
The storm was now more calm. The waves were less Severe. Instinctively I moved across
The wet, cold sands down to the shore again.
Then in my soul I knew my Alice was
No more.... The sea had stolen her as she,
In anxious waiting, stood and watched for me.
No,—this year will not find me by the sea....

Cutting Cutters

In the little emporium allotted to the "Council of Health and Religious Advisement," better known as the Excuse Committee, "Universitatis Emorensis," that Sanctum Sanctorum dear to the hearts of Profes. Gee, White and Boyd, the following "Seance" was held one glad and glorious Wednesday morning.

The hands of the clock point to the hour of fifteen minutes to eight and a mad rush ensues participated in by some ten or twelve men who are endeavoring to possess themselves of the "prescription blanks" and inscribe theron their names, each the date of his birth, the day, the week, the month, the year; the name of the presiding "inquisitor"; the name of the instructor from whose class he was absent; the class and what time it met; the reason for absence; the weather conditions; if sick, the type of illness and method of treatment; if out of town, where he went and what kind of time he had; the name of his parents or guardian; whom to notify in case of expulsion and a short essay of apology and expression of sorrow over his misdoing. When he has completed this, if he has time before the clock strikes, he staggers with his load of literature up before the "Chief Justice" and subjects himself to questions, exhortations, and threats, a type of which is as follows:

Prof.—Allright, sir, what is it?
(Student hands in his "manuscript" for inspection. He reports that he has been sick.)

Prof.—I see you were absent on Saturday. You say you were sick.
Student—Yes, sir.
Prof.—Well were you sick? (Is answered in the affirmative).
The victim happens to be Mr. Shields.
Prof.—Mr. Shields, were you confined to your room?
Shields—Yes, sir.
Prof.—Were you in bed all day?
Shields—No, sir, but I was unable to go out.
Prof.—Why couldn't you go out?
Shields—The weather was too bad.
Prof.—Could you have gone out if the weather had been better?
Shields, reluctantly—I suppose so, Professor.
Prof.—Well, Mr. Shields, you know we are not responsible for the condition of the weather, so I find it my unpleasant duty to cut your deportment. (Offers prayer for departure from the truth.)
Another unfortunate come before the "High Administrator of Gee's Delight," reports an absence from church.

Prof.—I see that you report an absence from church, what was the matter, Mr. Rogers?

"Pup" has been out of town for the week end.

Pup.—I was out of town, Professor, and there were no services at our church.

Prof.—Where do you live, Mr. Rogers.

Pup.—I live in Gibson.

Prof.—So there were no services.

Pup, already late for an eight o'clock.—No, sir.

Prof. Aren't there other churches in your town where there were services?

Pup.—No, sir; Professor.

Prof.—Isn't there a town close by where you might have gone? How far are you from your nearest town?

Pup.—About ten miles, Professor.

Prof.—Were there church services there, Mr. Rogers?

Pup.—I don't know, Professor.

Prof.—Did you try to find out?

Pup.—No, sir.

Prof.—Well if you had been in Warrenton and there were services and you weren't sick, could you have gone?

Pup (confused)—Why I suppose so Professor.

Prof.—Well then I see no reason why we should excuse you. Hereafter you will find your deportment at 9.

Just here Ellington comes before the chief "Dispenser." He attended classes in the morning but was unable to attend them in the afternoon.

Prof.—Mr. Ellington, I see you were absent Friday afternoon. Had you no classes in the morning?

Ellington.—Yes, sir; I had two.

Prof.—Did you attend them.

Ellington.—Yes, sir.

Prof.—Why did not you attend in the afternoon?

Ellington (who has never misrepresented anything)—I was sick, Professor.

Prof.—When you were taken, Mr. Ellington?

Ellington.—Just after dinner.

Prof.—Were you seriously ill, and did you summons a skilled physician?
Ellington.— No, sir; but I was too sick to go to classes.
Prof.— Did you think you were going to die?
Ellington.— No, sir; I didn’t think I was going to die.
Prof.— Did you go to supper?
Ellington.— No, sir.
Prof.— Did you go to breakfast Saturday morning?
Ellington.— Yes, sir.
Prof.— What did you eat?
Ellington gives him a list of the articles of food that comprised his morning’s meal.
Prof.— Did what you ate make you sick?
Ellington.— No, sir.
Prof.— Well, Mr. Ellington, I think my knowledge of Physiology and Hygiene will bear me out in the statement that if you had been really critically ill on Friday afternoon you could not have eaten such a hearty breakfast without suffering some ill result. I am sorry, but your deportment will have to suffer.
Ellington, disgusted, walks out.

Ten-thirty, the second daily reception given under the auspices of the “Committee on Excuses” (O the sweet sentiment inspired by the name) finds Dr. Boyd acting as High Lector, having successfully disguised himself in the guise of “Doug.”

Mr. J. Donald Banks appears before his majestic Grecian presence and attempts to excuse a day’s absence. “Donnie’s iron constitution has been subjected to an over-abundance of ‘bad man eggs’ and he has been ill.

Dr. Boyd.— Mr. Banks I see from the blanks that you were absent from classes yesterday, is that right?
Donnie.— Yes sir, that’s right Doctor.
Dr. Boyd.— Well now, Mr. Banks, you were sick weren’t you?
Donnie.— Yes, sir, Doctor; I was sick yesterday.
Dr. Boyd in an attempt to live up to the teachings of “Doug” and others. That’s allright, Mr. Banks, now, that would ordinarily satisfy me, but the other members of the Committee suggest that I ask a number of questions. Of course you understand how it is, Mr. Banks. Well now, were you sick Mr. Banks?
Donnie.— Yes sir, Doctor, I was sick.
Dr. Boyd.— What seemed to be the trouble Mr. Banks?
Donnie.— Indigestion, Doctor.
Dr. Boyd.—I'm glad to note that you accent the second syllable of that word, Mr. Banks, it shows me that you have paid attention in your Grecian Literature. The main factor in present day education is to be able to pronounce correctly. Now, Mr. Banks, just exactly what type of illness were you suffering yesterday. There are three types—First where you are just sick, we might say feeling badly. Second, where you are confined to your bed. Third, where death comes as a result. You will remember the Ancient Greeks' view of death, they looked forward to it. Now I'd rather excuse you on this third ground, but I'm willing to excuse you on either of the other two.

Donnie.—Well, Doctor, I wasn't able to attend classes.

Doctor.—All right now, Mr. Banks, I'll just keep these blanks and see Dr. Gee and Prof. White about your excuse. I can let you know about them—Let's see—let us say any time you are up here. No, that appears to have a little idea of indefiniteness about it, let's be a little more specific and say tomorrow morning. That suit you?

Donnie.—Yes, sir; Doctor, that's all right.

Donnie walks out elated over the fact that Dr. Boyd has taken up fifteen minutes of the Greek Lit. Period.

And thus shall it always be. Fret not, my men, consider it not a hardship to be subjected to this unjust and troublesome pest that is a bane to every sober thinking student, for by this Excuse Committee are we enabled to take, free of any charge whatever, a course in Penmanship, Essay and Short Story. In no other institution of learning anywhere is such an opportunity offered for enjoying Cheap Vaudeville as cheaply as on the second floor of Candler Hall any day of the week, except Sundays and Mondays at the hours of seven forty-five and ten-thirty. Here also are given the finishing touches to men who become artisans in polishing and making to shine as the noon-day sun deeds that would otherwise remain darkened, thereby bringing joy unspeakable to Profs. "Dude." Gee and "Froggie."

Drop in fellows—it's great.
Strands of Air

Scene.—The Confederate Burying ground, situated on Lover's Lane, at the environs of the Campus of Emory College.

Time.—Commencement, 1916. Twilight. The sun hangs ox-red, wreathed in a glory of golden clouds. The fragrance of summer foliage hangs on the air. An occasional couple can be seen at the end of the wooded lane which leads to the Campus.

An old crooked Pine leans over the small silent city of the dead, sighing. The spirit of a Sergeant is seated upon the Headstone of an "Unknown" grave. His face is covered with his hands. The spirit of a Private is stooping near, pulling idly at blades of grass.

The crickets have begun their concert and an occasional bat darts across darkling dusk.

Sergeant (raising his head from his hands): Sam, I'm glad it's summertime! When the college fellers an' their gals come strolling down this way . . . it ain't so lonesome, then. I guess I set and think too much of Nell.

A pause.

Private (reminiscently): These clothes o' now a days are built so queer and short. These flaring kind o' skirts recalls the one Matilda wore at the last Christmas ball . . . I often wonder where Matilda is.

The Pine (sharply): Disgusting! Look at that young Senior coming down here with that girl in pink. He's been doing the same thing ever since he's been here.

A smartly dressed youth and a young lady in pink with a white parasol come strolling down Lover's Lane. They are conversing in low tones.

Youth: Really, Kate, I can't tell you just how I feel. But you have always reminded me of Queen Guinevere. I can conjure up your face when the night breeze sighs softly through the branches of the pines. I've been so busy I haven't written to you much, but—

The Pine (indignantly): Liar. He's used the same speech for three years. You're the fourth girl.

The Girl: Bennett, listen. What a queer noise the wind makes in the tops of the trees. That's funny, isn't it? Everything is so still down here.

Sergeant: Why the grouch, today, Pine?

The Pine (hotly): I'm weary of hearing the same disgusting thing over and over again. If you had heard this thing as long as I have,—why every generation is alike. Silly things!

Sergeant (philosophically): Of course he will forget it all in a month, but he has to pass through his baby loves.

The Pine: I don’t see how the Girl can swallow what he is saying.

Sergeant (slowly): You’re right, no doubt. But some day he’ll say just what he is saying now, and go off for months and months, and keep dreamin’ about the gal, and writin’ little love poems, and correspondin’ with her, and sending her little things. Other gals won’t look so attractive as they did. Then he’ll get a place as a school teacher and they’ll decide they just naturally belong to each other. All he’s doin’ now is trying out his feelings to see which gal can match ‘em.

The Pine (unconvinced): But if you had seen as much as I—

Sergeant (walking discreetly away from the couple. He leans against the Pine): I guess you aint such a Mathusala or a Solomon. I’ve been here fifty years. . . Many a man’s found that the gal he brought along down here was his Nell, since then. Some of ‘em has come back since, and put flowers along here, and talked about the old times.

The Girl: You really care that much for me, Bennett! Are you sure?

The Pine (hotly): Liar! Liar! Liar! He’s said that before, before.

The Girl: If you are real, real sure, you may, then.

The Pine (raging): Shame! Shame on you!

Sergeant (sighing): I’m afraid he won’t dream long about her. Somehow you can’t when they let you kiss them like that. Nell never did.

Private (stretching wearily): If the kid had spunk he’d have taken it hisself.

Sergeant (wistfully): I wish I could tell ’em about Nell. Why before we was married her Ma wouldn’t have let us wander about like this.

(The Youth presses the hands of the Girl fervently, and they depart slowly.)

Sergeant: Somehow I can’t construct my ideas to this way o’ courtin’. Maybe I’ve lost touch with the World, but it seems to me that it cheapens affection. Nell and I was happy, and we never frolicked like this.

Private: You’re sentimental this afternoon. What’s the trouble?

Sergeant (softly): I dunno. Maybe the Gal looked just a bit like Nell about the eyes and mouth. I wish I could talk to that chap about Nell.

A few martins pass overhead. A rabbit hops timidly from the shadows, and in the distance an owl cries quaveringly. Night slowly enfolds the Lane; the evening star appears; and the new moon rides low through the branches of the western wood.

Junior (pennant winners) .......................... 750
Freshmen ........................................... 500
Sophomores ........................................ 250

CHARLES BIVINGS, '19, JAKIN, GA., Backfield. Age, 18. Height, 5 ft. 8 in. Weight, 160 pounds. Number years on All-Emory, one. A first year man who received his training in the wilds of South Georgia.

DOWNING BROWN, '18, ATLANTA, GA. Line. Age, 20. Height, 5 ft. 10 in. Weight, 155. Number years on All-Emory, one. A man whom Webb School trained to be a football star as well as a shoot 'em up.

PRESSLEY CHRISTIAN, '17, NEWSAN, GA. Line. Age, 20. Height, 5 ft. 10 in. Weight, 158. Number years on All-Emory, three. The surest tackler in school—except on the Monday following the Ga.-Tech games.
COLIN ENGLISH, '17. Fort Worth, Fla. Line. Age, 21. Height, 5 ft. 11 in. Weight, 170. Number years on All-Emory, two. One of the men who do the "heavy work" on the pennant winning team.

NOEL McCONNELL, Pre-Med., Commerce, Ga. Backfield. Age, 20. Height, 6 ft. 1-2 in. Weight, 185 lbs. Number years on All-Emory, one. The man who made his team, without a coach, the best Freshman team we have ever had.
EVANS PATILLO, '17, West Point, Ga. Backfield. Age, twenty-one. Height, 5 ft. 9 in. Weight, 162 lbs. Number years on All-Emory three. The man who cinched the pennant for the Junior Team.

WALTER SAFFOLD, '19, Brooklet, Ga. Line. Age, 19. Height, 5 ft. 7 in. Weight, 180 lbs. Number years on All-Emory, one. A cool headed, consistent player.

JUDSON SHAW, '17, Madison, Ga. Line. Age, 20. Height, 6 ft. 1 in. Weight, 164 lbs. Number years on All-Emory, one. A player who puts across all he's got—which is generally enough.
JOHN TEASLEY, '19, Canton, Ga. Backfield. Age, 18. Height, 5 ft. 10 in. Weight, 165 lbs. Number years on All-Emory, one. With a varied Prep-School experience, John starred on the best Freshman team we have ever had.

MORRIS WALKER, '18, Quitman, Ga. Backfield. Age, 19. Height, 5 ft. 8 in. Weight, 160 lbs. Number of years on All-Emory, one. Possum's line bucking helped put the Sophs in the class of stiff competitors for the pennant.

HOWARD WEEMS, '17, Rome, Ga. Backfield. Age, 20. Height, 6 ft. Weight, 174 lbs. Number years on All-Emory, two. Howard's training and practice combine with a naturally superb physique to make him one of the best players here.

Retrospection

I wandered o'er fresh meadow lands today,
And saw the cattle grazing peacefully;
Down in the brook I saw the minnows play,
And, like a boy, I climbed an old plum tree.

O, days of childhood, quite too swiftly flown,
O, boyhood's thrill at finding blue-birds' eggs
In old, gray falling posts, by vines o'ergrown,
And O, the grandeur of two brier-scratched legs.

How oft' for these my heart has gone in quest,
But every time the search the knowledge brings—
My heart is like an old forsaken nest,
While memories are the branches where it clings.

Emory University

The University Offers to Present Courses Leading to Degrees in the Following Departments:

I The School of Liberal Arts
(Emory College)
Offers courses in English, Spanish, French, German, Greek, Latin, Mathematics, Physics, Chemistry, Biology, Mental and Moral Science, History, Political Economy, and Biblical Literature, leading to the usual literary degrees. This department has a library of 40,000 bound volumes.

II The School of Theology
(The Candler School of Theology)
Offers full and varied courses leading to the degree of B.D. This is a School of Theology, as definite in its teaching as it is definite in its aim to serve the church to which it belongs. The library of the School of Theology is rich and grows richer daily. To it belongs the famous "Thursfield Smith Collection of Wesleyana," which includes hundreds of the autograph letters of the Wesleys and other Methodist celebrities.

III The School of Medicine
(The Atlanta Medical College)
A Medical School of the first grade which offers courses in medicine and surgery covering four years and leading to the degree of M.D. By arrangement with the Grady Hospital, the municipal hospital of Atlanta, and the Wesley Memorial Hospital, which is a part of the University System, the School of Medicine is able to offer clinical advantages of great value to students.

IV The School of Law
(The L. Q. C. Lamar School of Law)
A School of Law with a three years course; using "the Case method of instruction;" having an able Faculty and a large Library, and located in the city of Atlanta, a city in which sits every grade of Court known to the judicial system of America, except the Supreme Court of the United States.

"So you went to church last Sunday?" asked the doubtful one. "Well, to prove it, what was the text?"
"The text was, 'He giveth His beloved sleep.'"
"You're all right. How many of the congregation were there?"
"All the beloved, it seemed to me."

"There is one discordant note in your garden, my dear madam," remarked the aesthetic landscape gardener. "What is that?" asked the lady, much alarmed. "I notice," he remarked, with a shudder, "that you have a dogwood planted near some pussy willows."

"Aw," said Willie, tauntingly, "you're afraid to fight; that's wot it is."
"Naw I ain't," protested Tommy, stoutly. "But if I fight my ma'll find it out and lick me."
"How'll she find it out, eh?"
"She'll see the doctor going to your house."
The College Man
Needs a Typewriter

Poor handwriting may mean low marks—some papers will not be accepted unless typewritten.
These are reasons enough why the student should own his own machine.
Add time-saving, labor-saving, money-saving, money-earning, and there is no room left for argument.

The Remington Junior

Is the ideal writing machine for the student.

It is the typewriter that will enable you to meet faculty requirements for neat, legible papers.
It is the typewriter that will save you time in preparing papers—save you labor in writing and copying papers—and save you the money you would have to pay to have your papers written by someone else.
It is the typewriter with which you can earn money by writing for other students.

The Remington Junior

It Costs But $50.00

And it will earn its cost in a comparatively short time.

It is a real Remington. It carries the ironclad Remington guarantee.

It differs from the standard $100 Remington only in being smaller, lighter, more portable, having fewer parts, and being designed for the simpler uses, such as MSS., etc.

But for these purposes it has no superior. It represents everything that Remington Typewriters represent—the highest standard in writing machine construction and operation.

Call at our office and let us show you a Remington Junior. A demonstration will convince you that this is the machine you need.

Special University Equipment

In selecting the seating for a University, it is desirable to have the services of someone who is thoroughly familiar with that particular line of goods. A man who specializes in that line and who keeps posted on the latest styles and best qualities can save the purchaser a great deal of worry and work.

We are general representatives for the manufacturers of the most complete and best line of seating of every description for Universities and other educational institutions. Our factories are equipped to make every acceptable style of seating for study halls, lecture rooms, chapels, etc. We employ men who are qualified to recommend qualities from an actual experience of many years. They save the purchaser the trouble of going over a lot of unacceptable equipment by selecting in advance those styles and qualities which will instantly meet with his approval.

The services of these trained and experienced representatives are at the command of all who are interested in public seating of any kind.

College Men in Business

Earn $1,500 to $2,500 a Year

One half the college graduates at the present time enter business. And why? The new civilization, the enormous commercial development of our country has made Business King.

President Wilson Recently Said:

"The question is, what part is the university going to play in preparing men for commerce? It is not going to teach them the mechanical details and methods of business. The business of the university is to teach the head and not the hand."

Attend Bagwell Business College

The college man who wishes to fit himself at the least expense to get a start in business cannot do better than to invest several weeks at a small cost in acquiring a mastery of stenography and typewriting. These accomplishments will enable him to obtain a position that will pay from $1,500 to $2,500 a year.

Chartier Shorthand

Taught exclusively in Georgia at Bagwell Business College, Atlanta, has made it possible for shorthand to be learned in half the time required for the old Pitmanic systems. Some of the best in the South are Bagwell graduates.

We would be glad to confer with any who may be interested.

RECORD OF 1915

In the year ending December 31, 1915, the "Oldest Company in America"

Paid Policyholders a total of $67,978,329.32

This sum exceeded the total amount received directly from policyholders by $8,723,036.35. During the year there was an increase in the amount of new insurance paid for, in total insurance in force, in assets, in reserves, in total income, an increase of over One Million and a Half in total interests and rents, and an increase of nearly Two Million Dollars in the Company's contingency reserve, or free surplus. On the other hand, notwithstanding a full year of war, there was a material decrease in the mortality ratio (actual to expected) as compared with that of 1914.

A newspaper story.

To print a kiss upon her lips
He thought the time was ripe;
But when he went to press she said,
"I do not like your type."

A kiss he printed on her lips
And showed her no contrition,
Because the artful minx inquired:
"Well, when's the next edition?"

A kiss he printed on her lips
With great delight and vim;
"Let's go to press again," she said,
"The impression is too dim."

Last night I held a little hand
So dainty and so neat
Methought my heart would burst with joy
So wildly did it beat.

No other hand unto my soul
Could greater solace bring
Than that I held last night—which was Four aces and a king. —Ex.
