Foreword

EVERY year witnesses the publication of legions of College Annuals, the purpose of which is to secure for the student a souvenir of his college associations and to represent to the public the manifold phases of college life. In publishing this volume, the Class of Nineteen Hundred and Ten has endeavored to meet this established requirement. We trust that in the years to come, this "Comet" will brighten up the reader's moments with many happy thoughts of Emory days "as they were."

Historical Sketch

"Emory College was named in honor of Bishop John Emory, of Maryland, who was elected to the episcopacy in 1832 on the same ballot with Bishop James O. Andrew, and who presided over the fourth session of the Georgia Conference, at Washington, Wilkes County, in 1834. In December, 1835, he was accidentally thrown from his carriage and killed, near his home in Baltimore. The Conference Session of 1836, at Columbus, Ga., appointed trustees to incorporate the College, and directed them to call it Emory, probably at the suggestion of Bishop Andrew, as a tribute to the memory of his lamented colleague. In pursuance of the will of the Conference, the trustees bought 1,400 acres of woodland near Covington, Newton County, in the granite region of Georgia, for $14,000, and, at the suggestion of Dr. Ignatius A. Few, gave it the classic name of Oxford, in honor of the old English University.

"In 1837 the College was opened for the reception of students, under the presidency of Dr. I. A. Few, with Dr. Alexander Means and Reverend Charles W. Lane as professors. The first class, of three members, was graduated in 1841. During these years, 1,561 men have received the diplomas of the College, and have since served the country and the church with honor to themselves and their Alma Mater.

"During the presidency of Dr. A. G. Haygood the College began to take on new life, when Mr. George I. Seney, of Brooklyn, N. Y., gave about $100,000 to the Institution, erecting the building known as Seney Hall and making large additions to the endowment.

"Under the presidency of Dr. W. A. Candler $100,000 were added to the endowment; Rev. W. P. Pattillo, of Atlanta, Ga., giving $25,000. The new library building named, "Candler Hall," was erected at a cost of $25,000.

"During the presidency of Dr. C. E. Dowman a $30,000 Science Hall was projected, the corner stone was laid, and the funds with which to erect the building were in a large measure secured, Captain J. P. Williams, of Savannah, donating $15,000."

Under the present administration of Dr. James E. Dickey the Pierce Science Hall was completed and equipped, and the J. P. Williams Athletic Hall was erected at a cost of about $30,000. The construction of the Young J. Allen Memorial Church, a tribute to the memory of one of Emory's illustrious sons, is now finished, and the structure will be dedicated in June. Dr. Dickey has also secured practically all of the needed $300,000 to make the endowment fund a half million dollars, and numerous other material improvements mark the upward path of the College during his presidency.

"The original Board of Trustees was composed of men whose names are historic in Georgia Methodism: Ignatius A. Few, Lovick Pierce, Charles Hardy, William J. Parks, Elijah Sinclair, Samuel K. Hodges,

Emory's athletic system is recognized as more nearly the ideal than that of any other Southern college, and the present social and religious environment of the students is highly desirable.

The Emory Bulletin, published quarterly, is the official organ of the College, and the Emory Phoenix is the official student publication, issued monthly by the two literary societies, Few and Phi Gamma. Various student organizations and information as to the many points of interest in connection with the College as it stands today are detailed on other pages of The Comet.

History of Senior Class

A history is a record of past events worthy of preservation; its constituents are diverse happenings of importance and characters of note. And such is the character and career of the memorable Class of 1910.

This body of strong, wise and noble young men, for the most part, assembled themselves under the Blue and Gold of old Emory in 1906; a crowd of young and inexperienced “new boys,” entering upon a “diplomatic” race. But what changes have taken place during the few years’ course; changes that have affected the history of the South, directly and indirectly; great men have been lost and won; great deeds have been done and left undone; characters strengthened and characters demolished; reputations gained and reputations abolished; and, in the face of all these vicissitudes, today, in direct contrast to that of four years ago, we are the chosen few who, through indefatigable persistence and unswerving tenacity, have become members of that laudable Class, 1910. Long on the billows of time may their praise and commendation rise upon the crest! Long may her children and children’s children be blest.

The records to the credit of 1910 are those of victorious triumph. Deeds of our heroes on the athletic field, where seldom a rival could smile over victory—when won they were too sorely exhausted, when defeated, their anticipation was realized. But, aside from the intrinsic value of our athletes, to the shrewd understanding and practical application inherent in the mind of our dear and beloved coach, “Ferdie” Duncan, we attribute much of our success. And not only was he a coach, but a true friend and helper in time of need.

We are proud, too, of the excellent workmanship of our fellow-comrades in classroom. Not that we are professional, but from the fact that there is but few who hold an unsteady hand; and a few who hit the spot. “Madam,” while our path led through her domain, discovered other stars in making her observation, and since, she has solved “unknown problems.” From the eloquent lips of “Pug” flowed masterful exhortations on ethical, psychological, theoretical and biblical topics; his monotonous and unwavering voice echoed mysterious doctrines; his audience slumbered and slept. But, much to the “joy and preference” of his audience, “Doc” Melton read his own stories and poems, for, not so much pleasure, but rather “effect.” Those compositions not in the Phanix can be enjoyed in other magazines. But, for the sake of brevity, necessarily, has to be omitted the many and various other data composing the complete history of the Class. Many of the amusing jokes of “Foxy” and “Oedipus,” and also “Ceph,” are well worth preservation; yet, most of them are already ancient history and need no recording.

At last the time for this dear old Class to leave its Alma Mater is rapidly drawing to a close. We are leaving with sad hearts the many scenes so dear and full of meaning, to enter upon life’s highway, and to fight life’s battles alone. No more classmates to share our joys and sorrows; to counsel and advise one with the other. The good deeds we have done while here will go down in worthy records accredited to our dear Class. The frivolous deeds were few, pleasant and without harmful intent; mere diversions, which are enjoyed by the profoundest of men. Yet these will be forgotten.

In conclusion, we can justly boast of our united and congenial spirit; of the one mind and action so manifest; as a gigantic machine, each having his own part to perform, whether great or small, equally plausible, so necessary to our great efficiency. The goal is almost within our grasp, the “home stretch” is nearly covered; and as we stand now upon the eve of graduation, one step from the threshold of theoretical knowledge and we are out upon the field of practical application. And as we look back we realize with proud hearts that we are numbered with that great and grand body of men of the Class of 1910.

"Yes Madam, Mellin's Food is the best on the market."
On the evening of February 7, 1910, Emory’s Senior Class held its annual banquet in Atlanta. Thirty-five strong, they made a raid upon the New Kimball, and when the dux declared the meeting adjourned, shortly before twelve o’clock, it was a happy band of students who boarded a train for Oxford to resume their academic pursuits. The following was the program for the occasion:

History of the Junior Class

The history of the present Junior Class is peculiar, indeed. Perhaps this is attributable to the fact that we have a set of peculiar boys. Someone has honored us with the suggestion that our Class may be divided into two sections, namely, preachers and politicians, but this will hold good only when part of section one is placed in section two, for some of our preacher friends are great and mighty politicians. And so, by virtue of necessity, many midnight strolls and campus conversations have taken place, the outcome of which remains yet to be seen.

Notwithstanding its political reputation, the hearty geniality that pervades the Class shows that only the best of good friendship exists, and that loyalty to each other and faithfulness to the faculty are among our cardinal virtues. Well indeed may we be merry, for we have undergone the agones of “Analyt” and “Trig,” passed over the bridge of sighs and new (?) jokes, on which stood “Ceph” and Mechanics, and have had to force our last laugh at “Foxy’s” pointless stories.

We are proud of our past record. While we haven’t starred in football, yet our team was the last one to be scored on the past fall; we tied the present Senior Class for the baseball pennant in ’09; we won the relay pennant in ’08, which speaks well for our running abilities. But we have not needed this capacity every time, for when, unprepared and unarmed, we faced “Ferdie” and his Seniors, armed to the teeth with cudgels, sticks, brickbats, and the like, we took the Senior possum, stood to a man and held our ground. The final outcome of the affair was that the Senior possum graced a banquet board, around which were gathered merry Juniors to celebrate the occasion.

In Society work the Juniors hold first place. On next Champion Debate there will be three Juniors, and in the fall Debate all the participants were Juniors. Thus it is shown that in forensic skill we are able to hold our own. We needed every bit of it to explain to the easy-going residents of Oxford and to the student-body that on a certain night during the fall term no house burned, even though the alarm was given by the village bell, as it pealed forth at a most unearthly hour of the night, calling men and women to the scene of the tumult, only to find plenty of buckets and ladders with no fire to fight. When the “King” solemnly pledged to ship any other class who saw fit to create such a “rucus,” the Juniors with one accord held up their hands and in concert breathed a hearty “Never Again.”

Whatever others may say about our Class, it undeniably has many different types in it; sports, dudes, bone-grinders, corn-huskers, and ladies’ men, especially ladies’ men, for on any Sunday afternoon one may see the Midway and Cov sports doing things up properly.

But, with all our freaks and frailties, we have a Class that as a whole stands for the right, and men in it who are bound together by ties of love and fellowship, and who have a strong and enduring love for their Alma Mater.

History of Sophomore Class

A Sophomore Historian feels, more, perhaps, than the historian of any other class, a delicacy in making any sweeping claims of superiority for his Class. Such is the reputation of Sophomores that even a statement of our undoubted merit will, perhaps, be taken as added evidence of our conceit. We have much, however, of which we feel justly proud. We have in our midst men who are recognized as leaders in every branch of college activity. We have men fresh from the plow, men from the small town, men from the city. Some will be farmers, some lawyers, doctors, preachers, men of affairs. However varied their past experiences and their future activities may be, all now have a common bond of sympathy, a common spirit, the spirit of 1912.

With a few remnants of the days of sub-dom were joined in the fall of 1908 a vast body of recruits just entering college life. Our total number was close around the hundred mark, and the Class of 1912 began to be then what it is now, a potent factor in college life. This year our number is not so large. The terrors of Mechanics, "Analyt," and Sophomore Latin kept many, perhaps, from returning last fall, and have caused not a few to fall by the wayside during the present school year. This, combined with other causes, has reduced our number to sixty-five, our present enrollment.

In athletics we have never had cause to be ashamed of our showing. Ours was the first Freshman Class in years to win a football game, when, last year, we won a well-earned victory over our hated rivals, the Sophomores. In baseball, in basketball, in track work, we made a creditable showing. Though we were not at the top, we were not at the bottom.

This year in the relay race we were barely nosed out of a victory by the Freshmen. In football and in basketball we again were second. With such athletes as Nolan, Fletcher Johnson, Ledbetter, and Parham, we have had little to fear in the past, and have no doubt of a creditable showing in the future.

In the class-room we are equally strong. With Melson, Bryan, and many others to uphold our colors, there is no doubt of our success along scholastic lines. In the literary societies, in the social part of college life, and in affairs generally, the men of 1912 have been and are taking a leading part.

Despite our varied abilities and dispositions ours has been a pleasant association. Perhaps the very difficult nature of our work makes us the happier. Whatever may be the cause, we have been happy together, and ours is a Class of men who are tried and true.

History of Freshman Class

The scientists who maintain that man springs by long processes of evolution from monkeys are in all probability right, but the processes are often very long and tedious.

Now, when many of the members of the Class of 1913 came to Emory they had not finished the last stage of this long evolution—that of passing through the trying ordeal of being a Sub-Freshman, and, indeed, many of us looked as if we had just begun to "evolute." We looked like the proverbial Sub in the truthful jingle:

"Subbie and a monkey sittin' on a rail,
Only difference was monkey had a tail."

It was, no doubt, the ancestral, ape-like strength that made us the best class in athletics of any Sub aggregation that has been to Emory in a long time. The latent skill of our grandfathers, who used to sport about the grassy swards of distant tropic lands and toss coconuts to each other, was still alive in us, and this is probably the reason why we won a game of baseball from every team in College, except the Freshmen.

Well, we existed through Sub-dom, growing more and more like men, until, in June, 1909, Professors Farmer and Goodyear pronounced us able to stand alone and washed their hands of us as we confidently stepped into Freshman Land.

The opening of the fall term brought us many new recruits, and we soon began to see that, after all, life was not as gloomy as it had looked the year before.

Quickly we began to catch on to the hooks and crooks and many little tricks of college life, for we were then in college, were at last really and truly college men, and no longer had to answer the summons of Farmer's little bell, and run to three-fifteen and four-forty o'clock recitations. Oh, how distant Sub-dom did look to us!

With remarkable agility we learned to nap in "Pug's" lectures, and found that it paid to laugh loudly at "Mutt's" near-jokes, and to observe "Madam's" instructions.

Yet, although we make a great many claims as to present usefulness and probable future greatness, we have not the audacity to claim to be at present better than our college-mates in the upper classes. The only bunch we can look down upon is the Class of 1914 (how distant that sounds!) but still we remember that not so long since, we, even we, were Subs.

Our history is not very long, for we have not been in existence long enough to make a long record. But what we have is irreproachable, and we are making history as rapidly as we know how—and real history it is. Finally, when we have reached the much-coveted goal and can call ourselves Seniors, we promise that then we will have a history, both great and glorious, which no previous class, even the one of 1910, has ever been able to boast. And this is promising a great deal; yet all who know the Class of 1913 know that I speak the truth.

History of the Sub-Freshman Class

On September the fifteenth, nineteen hundred and nine, in a certain Professor’s class-room was gathered as green a crowd of Subs as ever entered “dear old Emory.”

“Foxy,” in all his glory, prepared to initiate us into the class-room work of our college course. We Subs stood in awe of our instructor, and in mortal dread of one whom we soon learned to call the “King.”

Soon losing our fear of “Foxy,” we began to throw chalk at him as quickly as we would shoot him in English, presently getting bold enough to have chalk battles during recitations, which would draw from “Foxy” the contradictory statement: “The man who will throw chalk hasn't the first principles of a gentleman in him, and, if you want to throw chalk, you may get out of here, as we have no place in here for you.”

Relay race soon came, and we showed we were no cowards, and not so proficient in the art of running as were the Freshmen. After the race came the scrap. All Subs were afraid to go to the scrap, but some were more afraid not to go, and decided to die in the midst of the fight, rather than to be dragged from bed to their doom by infuriated Freshmen.

The scrap over, hazing was ushered in with so much vim that a poor Sub was afraid to go out doors after dark, and always at sundown went to his room, locked and barred windows and doors, and with hair on end from fear, prepared the ammunition with which to mortally wound “Foxy” the next day.

Football season soon followed after the relay race, all the Subs going to see the game. To them it was butchery in the first degree. However, quickly learning to like the game, we could smile at “Madam’s” comments, which he uttered in all seriousness, but which, to us, were very funny. We dared not laugh loud, though, as “Madam” was not so numerous to us as to the upper classmen, and was the greatest obstacle between us and our “dips.” Actually, some of us have already been dreaming about our dips, as is shown by the conversation of one of us on being asked how he liked Emory. He said he liked Emory all right, but what troubled him was from where was the money for his diploma coming.

The days quickly passed and Christmas was fast approaching. Each Sub longed for the holidays, when he would be at home and could tell about the things he had seen and done at Emory.

After the holidays we studied hard for the final examinations, feeling like birds out of the cage when the last exams were over.

Basketball season opened. We got out a “pipin’” team, but played without success till we clashed with the haughty Freshmen. Then we piled up a score almost double theirs. Happy over our victory we vowed to paint Oxford purple and white, but, as night approached, no one would go to Covington to buy the paint, for we were afraid of being rocked in by the Freshmen. However, we succeeded in getting some white paint, and put the score in several conspicuous places.

The world wagged on and “Foxy” shot some of us every day. But, as the end of the term drew near, realizing we would soon be full-fledged Freshmen and no longer under him, he began to be easy on us.

We could not realize how near Freshmen we were until one day “Foxy” told us our next Geometry lesson would be under “Madam.” Then we feared and trembled.

Nevertheless, our Sub-dom was nearly over, and “Foxy,” with tears in his eyes, powered to dismiss the best class he ever taught—the glorious Class of “14.”

Students' Idea of the World
Few Literary Society Hall
Preface

Represented in this department are those men who for various reasons have not chosen to become affiliated with any fraternity. They compose a majority of the student-body at Emory, and are conspicuously represented in every worthy phase of moral, scholastic, and athletic endeavor. In religious circles, as debaters and orators, in the classroom, and on the athletic field, they always contribute their part toward making Emory one of the best institutions of learning in the South. Outside of fraternities, as well as on the inside, are great minds, true hearts, and noble souls, all seeking to exemplify and maintain the high standard of the true Emory man.

The Y. M. C. A. at Emory

J. R. Webb, President
T. M. Lee, 1st Vice-President
H. H. Jones, 2d Vice-President
H. E. McNeel, Sec. and Treas.

The Young Men's Christian Association has been a factor for much good for many years in Emory College. As nothing is more beneficial to students than Christian association, so this organization has had a broad field for doing good.

The meetings held every Friday night in the village church are both interesting and instructive from every standpoint. Besides the devotional features, excellent talks are made on vital topics by the faculty, Y. M. C. A. leaders and the students.

Among the members of the Emory Y. M. C. A. are some of the most representative men in the institution. The fact that the college professors take a great interest in the organization makes the meetings more profitable.

In connection with and under the supervision of the Y. M. C. A. there are several Mission Study classes and Bible Study bands. The mission fields of China, Korea, and Brazil are studied, as well as the negro question and foreign immigration. The object of the Bible study is to present to the student more thoroughly its teachings and to encourage the reading of it.

From time to time the Y. M. C. A. has had such men as Dr. Barrow and Professor Park, of Athens, Mr. Asa G. Candler, of Atlanta, Mr. Gates, of Nashville, and other prominent educators, business men, and Y. M. C. A. leaders to address the students. The words of such men as these, of course, are of great interest and good.

At the beginning of each college term, when all the new boys are feeling "homesick," the Y. M. C. A. gives a delightfully informal reception. On this occasion all the phases of Emory College life are presented to the new student, and he is urged and encouraged to enter vigorously into them. Such occasions are always highly enjoyed by the students, the faculty, and the people of Oxford.

Though we have no imposing structure as our hall, and though we boast not of reading rooms and handsome assembly-room, and our membership is not as large as we would have it, yet we are very proud of our Y. M. C. A., for we have the right spirit, and we believe that the Y. M. C. A. at Emory has a great and glorious future before it.

During the winter months of 1908-09 the student-body of Emory College began to feel the need of an organized effort, on their part, to place the advantages of this institution, from a student's viewpoint, before the young men of Georgia; and a desire to extend to each a personal invitation to join our ranks expressed itself in the organization of the Greater Emory Club.

It was the purpose of this Club to advertise the following advantages offered the young man coming to Emory: A healthy locality, a beautiful little village, with five trains a day to Atlanta, the prettiest campus in Georgia, well equipped buildings and classrooms, an efficient faculty, a gymnasium "after a boy's own heart," a moral atmosphere unsurpassed in any town or college in Georgia, athletics open to all, and a student-body that respects "the man," and not "the clothes."

The Club raised two hundred dollars among the students during April and May, 1909. In June the Board of Trustees and Alumni added one hundred dollars to this. Two of the graduating class, Messrs. T. O. Marshall and E. V. Heath, offered their services for the month of July, and the Club paid their expenses while they canvassed North and South Georgia in the interest of the College.

The same course of procedure will be followed out this year, for, as we are now in sight of a half million dollar endowment, we feel more than ever the need of an increased student roll.

LITERARY
History of Phi Gamma Society

In the earlier days of the Republic, before Morse had strung the lightning on poles, or the Associated Press had been conceived in the imagination of man, the chief source of information in matters political was the stump. Election years and political campaigns were hailed with joy as the times of refreshing when the orator was abroad in the land, and the wary voter was to be snared by lusty reason or honeyed fancy.

The man who could present his views in such shape as to carry conviction to the mind of the hearer, or by skillful handling make his cause seem the one worth while to the American citizen, was in demand. Under such circumstances it was but natural that oratory and debate should have been greatly magnified by the fathers, especially by the educated men and at the educational institutions.

Emory College was founded shortly after the great Hayne-Webster debates in Congress, and while Calhoun, Clay, and other forensic giants were still members of the Senate. One of the first acts of the student-body was the founding of a debating society. This was accomplished March 8, 1837, at a residence which is now Young Harris Helping Hall. George W. W. Stone was elected first president. A Greek name, signifying the purpose of the Society, was given to it, and for convenience and a touch of mystery it was to be known to the general public only by the initial letters, Φ Γ.

A motto was adopted, couched in Latin—Scientia et Religio Libertatis Custodes.

Money was raised and a small structure of wood was erected on the campus, just in front of where the present hall stands. Here the Society entered upon its high and honorable career. So well did it serve its purpose and so robust did the Society become, that after two years it was deemed best that its membership be divided. Accordingly, by the consent of all parties concerned, fourteen of Phi Gamma’s members withdrew, and on August 10, 1839, organized a sister-society, which was named for the first President of Emory College, Ignatius A. Few, LL.D.

That membership in the two Literary Societies seems to have embraced the entire student-body, and that “spiking” must have reached a rather acute stage can be inferred from the following resolution, introduced and adopted at a joint meeting: “Resolved, That a committee of three be appointed from each Society to alternately choose for their respective Societies the new members who may come in.”

The two societies were much given to public exhibitions of their oratorical skill, and on many of these occasions there were parades, so it came about that each Society must needs have a banner and adopt a color for its badge. Phi Gamma selected blue, and Few, red, for their respective colors.
History of Phi Gamma Society (Continued)

The increasing prosperity of the Society caused it to become dissatisfied with the small hall of wood as with an outgrown garment, so with the help of friends the membership erected the present hall, upon whose corner stone was placed the following inscription:

PHI GAMMA
SOCIETAS
INSTITUTA EST MDCCCXXXVII
LAPIS ANGULARIS HAEC PONITUR
A. D. VIII KAL MART
MDCCCLI.

The present hall did not secure all its conveniences and adornments at once. The wall design which carries the motto has been in place only about twenty-five years, the rostrum for the presiding officer and secretary some few years less, while the opera seats are a matter of recent history.

For many years the Phi Gamma Library had been kept in the vestibule, but later it was decided that more room was necessary, as well as more privacy. One year, a sufficient sum was appropriated to make the windows in what had been only a basement room; another year, partitions, doors, a floor and a stairway were put in; finally, the bookcases and books were moved down. This arrangement worked finely for several years. A short time ago the two Societies, finding that they were losing many of their most valuable books, and seeing that under a different arrangement the books would be accessible six days of the week, instead of one, placed what was left of their libraries in the College Library.

At Commencement, 1873, occurred the first Champion Debate between Few and Phi Gamma societies, with C. E. Dowman (later to be President of Emory College), W. N. Sheats (later to be State Superintendent of Education of Florida), and O. L. Smith as Phi Gamma's representatives. It is hardly necessary to add that Phi Gamma, with such champions, won the contest.

With this start Phi Gamma won the first four contests consecutively. Then began a series of alternations in victories, which in twenty-one years (the period of record in the possession of the writer) gave nine victories to Few and twelve to Phi Gamma.

The Society of today in form is hardly like that instituted by the founders. Its Constitution and By-Laws have been amended or modified in many respects, frequently for the better, but the great underlying purpose has remained unchanged and fixed throughout the years—To Help Men to Help Themselves and Be of Service to Their Fellow-men.

Phi Gamma Literary Society Hall
History of Few Literary Society

It has often been said by college men that literary society work has contributed more to their permanent development than any other phase of college life. The history of the literary societies at Emory well substantiates that claim; for they have been the training-ground of those whose achievements in forum, field, and mart have added luster to the laurels of their Alma Mater. In giving this training Few Society has gloriously done her part.

In the spring of the year 1839, eight members withdrew from Phi Gamma Literary Society for the purpose of organizing another society. By August of the same year the work was completed and the first session was held on the tenth of that month; and since that date a record has been made which may be looked upon with just pride. The new society was named for the illustrious patriot and educator, Ignatius A. Few, who was the first President of Emory. On its thumb-worn roll-book it musters the names of over two thousand members.

The first question ever debated by the Society was, “Should the petition to the Legislature for restricting the sale of ardent spirits become a party question?” The negative won. In ante-bellum days the sessions of the society were held on Saturday, and the interest taken in polemic disputes was so intense that the greater part of a day was often consumed in the discussions. The construction of the present hall was begun in 1840.

During the Civil War the students at Emory were dispersed and many of them served their country with distinction on the battlefield. The campus no longer echoed the murmur of happy voices, nor did the Society hall ring with the eloquent words of forensic speech. Instead, the hall was converted into a hospital for the brave soldiers who were wounded in action. At the close of hostilities, when college work was once more resumed, only two members of Few—Roberts and Lane—returned to Oxford. But they soon managed to enlist recruits and put the Society again under way.

Since then Few Society has pursued the even tenor of her way without a single interruption. As the years roll by, the number of her distinguished sons increases. Upon the roll can be found the names of those who have attained to the position of bishop, Supreme Court Judge, college president, and other offices no less honorable.

Such names as Young J. Allen among missionaries, J. W. Lee and H. S. Bradley among preachers, and Judge John S. Candler among jurists show the wide sphere of usefulness and high degree of eminence attained by the alumni of Few Society. Among many distinguished in various walks of life might be mentioned W. F. Wightman, W. P. Lovejoy, R. L. Honiker, J. W. Roberts, L. Z. Rosser, I. T. Nixon, Lawton B. Evans, J. T. Daves, W. A. Keener, J. E. Dickey, and T. D. Ellis. These are only a few of the many who might be mentioned who have been and are prominent as lawyers, preachers, educators, physicians, statesmen, and men of affairs.

The record of the past three score years and ten of Few’s history not only attests the usefulness of literary society work in college, but it is a story of glorious achievement which will be an example both for the inspiration and the emulation of many generations. And this record is a potent promise of a still grander future.

Dots from Dooley's Diary

Sept. 13: The matrons who administer culinary functions for the scholarly dyspeptic inaugurate their annual ablution of utensils.

Sept. 14: Joe Stone hitches up Maud and Wheeler and takes “Midget” to Atlanta to do trunk spiking. “Vick” Williams curries old Jerry. “Cop” Dial has a trigger put in his pistol. “Bill” Burt reopens his livery stable and has his stable-boy, Jim Bonnell, to curry off and dust up his entire stock.

“Foxy” Bonnell and “Ceph” Stone meet in the Treasurer’s office to rearrange and classify their jokes. “Pug” Smith is assiduously studying the dictionary to learn some new phalanx busters. King James Edward tenaciously rehearses his initiatory chapel speech before his wife’s mirror. “Dug” Rumble makes an extended visit to Porterdale.

Sept. 15: Very quiet day in Oxford. Why those college boys want to come in here so noiselessly, I can’t see. Every boy is so polite in waiting for every one else to speak first—but the sad thing is that they keep this up all the year.

Sept. 16: “Madam” begins to whistle.

Sept. 17: First chapel day. “Zeke” raises “Nearer my God to Thee” to the new tune about thirty feet too high. King reads the First Psalm. Then comes the greatest speech that the new boys have ever heard. King exceeds himself; he goes beyond Ancient History, Shakespeare, and himself, and discusses the real, live-wire question, viz.: That of filing excuses.

Sept. 18: B. B. B. Burford purchased himself a new hat today that is just six inches larger than his old one—and it might be added by way of explanation that he assumed today forward command as Editor of the Phoenix. Among other things, he bought today was a new belt, size thirty feet.

Sept. 20: Shingler calls “Muts” Melton in to recharge his gas reservoir by an application of Muts’ lips to the intake pipe.

Sept. 21: “Weary Willy” sneezed in chapel.

Sept. 22: “Muts” Melton maliciously begins to bootlick the boys.

Oct. 15: The quietness of the town is greatly disturbed by uproarious guffaws of laughter. “Bill” Zellars gets off a joke.

Oct. 25: Students bravely arrest the cops and deputy sheriff in Covington.

Oct. 29: Seniors backwardly enter Senior English.

Nov. 8: The old Chi Phi House was converted into a huge bonfire.

Nov. 22: Seniors chase Georgia Marsupials, and Juniors tell a big L—saying that Mr. Kitchens’ kitchen was on fire.

Nov. 23: “Ferdy” with hat off delivers the Senior opossum with Chesterfieldian grace to the Junior Class.

Nov. 26: My first letter appears in the Phoenix.

Nov. 30: “Lint” Starr and Paul Christian get appointed on another committee.

Dec. 13: “Muts” Melton invests his entire accumulated real estate assets in “Father’s Car.”

Dec. 15: “Ferdy” gets “nutty” and sets the Seniors up to a feed.

Dec. 23: Everybody goes to sleep for Xmas.

Jan. 3: All continue to peacefully sleep.
Dots from Dooley’s Diary (Continued)

Jan. 28: “King James” slanders me in chapel about my letters.

Feb. 1: Goodyear compliments the Juniors and Seniors for their excellent behavior in Gymnasium for the entire fall term.

Feb. 10: “Mutts” and Vernon Stiles enter polemics about drab horses. They kissed and called it square.

Mar. 2: “Pug” Smith politely refrains from breaking into Elliott Jenkins’ conversation during Ethics.

Mar. 4: “Zeke” Turner completes his prison blockhouse.

Mar. 15: “Madam’s” rabbit family of four is increased by the advent of fourteen little baby rabbits, which he finally classed as being males and females.

Mar. 30: “Madam” presided in chapel—amidst great silence.

April 7: “King” Dickey laughs in chapel.

April 10: “Barney” Dial makes a record-breaker; he puts up the mail within five hours after he gets it.

April 21: “Alf” Bussey puts Mrs. Kimball to some trouble to get him up a little supper.

April 28: “Punkin” Clay gets a letter from Wesleyan.

April 29: “Pep” went through a gate ahead of “Bass” Currington. Wonder of wonders! What will happen next?

April 30: Another surprise. “Lucy” Kolb actually wrote something in his department in the Phoenix.

May 1: A grievous mistake was made today. “Ferdy” Duncan while out collecting specimens for his Zoological department discovered Freshman Buxton behind a bush fishing. Ferdy thought that he had happened upon a fine specimen of Pholcus Phalangioides. With visions of world-wide renown, Ferdy rushed upon poor “Buck” and chloroformed him before he realized his mistake.

May 5: Coppedge falls in love.

May 7: Quillian Garrett finishes his thirteenth box of “Marritana” for the spring term.

May 8: We are proud of our orchestra, for they really learned to play two and a half tunes this year.

May 10: “Bo” Hanner buys a new suit.

May 13: People were greatly favored with a view of Otiris Wesley’s face for a short time—today—he shut his mouth for two minutes.

May 15: “Pug” teaches little pug how to bark loud and long without changing his tone.

May 16: I have felt bad all day. I have had a pain on my right side, just below my diaphragm. “Doc” Ward diagnosed it as being “Iritis Conjunctivitis.” Doc ought to know.

May 19: “Madam” is suffering with salt in his eyes—he tried to catch the Comet last night.

May 20: “Pep” gives a picture show and vaudeville.

It grieves me that this is my last day out in the open. But I suppose it must be. For, you know, Commencement is at hand, and you know when you have skeletons in your closets they must be safely put away when company comes. As Mr. Editor-in-Chief of the Phoenix, 4 B’s, says, “I wish you all a happy vacation.”
College Song

Tune: "Sailing."

I.
Come, now, ye men, the college chime
Proclaims to us the working time.
The days are short, tho' they seem long;
They drift by as a passing song.
But, oh! The discords of that song are loud,
If we have spent our time out in "the crowd"—
Then here's to the moments spent with our books today;
They will save you trouble in another way.

CHORUS:
Precious moments gleaned from our college days,
We'll never regret the time we spent to learn a classic phrase.

Precious moments gleaned from our college days,
We'll never forget the lessons learned along those classic ways.

II.
Come now, ye men, the night is here,
And with the night comes college cheer.
For work we have the livelong day,
To work at night is not our way.
Oh! when we see the setting of the sun,
The college day is only half begun.
Then here's to the pleasures, and here's to the spirits light.
Who would think of "grinding" on a college night?

CHORUS:
Night brings pleasure; that is the college way;
What is the use to "bone" and dig and grind your life away.

Night brings pleasure; that is the college way;
We merrily trust that we won't "bust" in the light of the college day.

III.
Come now, ye men, the college yell!
We'll make the campus' echoes swell,
Till far into the Southern sky.
Old Em'ry's name rings out on high,
And c'er the Blue and Gold shall cease to wave,
Each Em'ry man will find himself a grave.
Then, here's to dear Em'ry, and here's to the flag she flies,
Proudly shall it ever float before our eyes.

CHORUS:
Here's to Em'ry, home of our college days;
The blue of your college life will fade beside the golden haze.

Here's to Em'ry, home of our college days;
The Blue and the Gold united to make the wonderful Em'ry ways.

C. C. Hinton, '09.

Day-Dreams

He looked on her, and rare she seemed
With ems of joy outlining
The fine, fair face where beauty gleamed,
And gayety was shining.
Across her eyes the love-light fell
As on a mystic morning,
When man first loved in Eden dell,
With flowers all adorning.

Her brow was spangled with the stars
That shine on love's lone mountain;
Her hair was golden with the bars
That fringe a fairy fountain;
Her voice was molten with the words
Of bounding brooklet's bubble—
An accent soft of forest birds,
That never knew a trouble.

He trembled all the thrysting day
With dreams of love's young fancy;
An echo of the minstrel's lay
Bound in necromancy;
When life was all a garden fair
And fair forms all the flowers,
Woven in a wilder air
Than wafts this world of ours.

She looked at him and on her face
Was sadness and surprise;
Wonder, with a woodland grace,
Still beaming in her eyes.
Across her face there came a smile
Of sorrow sown with tears;
But mirth made way and for a while
Broke the barriers.

He looked again, but not on her—
The vision had departed.
The lightness of a maiden's "Sir"
Had left him broken-hearted.
For he had imaged her divine;
And found her sadly real—
A devotee of fashion's shrine
So far from his ideal.

The Curve: O

There was a Professor of Trig,
His record as twirler was prig;
Aha, you'll observe
From this beautiful curve,
How he throws—young men who don't dig.

Dr. Peppler (rushing into "Doc" Ward's office): Dr. Ward, Prof. Peed's largest rabbit appears to be dying. What can we do?
Dr. Ward: Have you tried hare- tonic?

Freshman: Who wrote Franklin's Autobiography?

First Sub: Wonder what that light's doing in Few Hall?
Second Sub: I don't know; but it must be somebody practicing for the impromptu debate.

Prof. Peed: May I have my express package, please sir?
Express Agent: What name, please?
Prof. Peed: Well, now, sir, you will find the name on the side of the package, sir.

A Lass? Oh!

O bring me my lasso, my lass, O
My lasso to lasso thee, lass, O;
The last lass I lassoed, my lass, O,
I lassoed at last, but alas, O!
My Rose

In the land of the South, in God's flower garden
There are all sorts of flowers, all fragrant and fair;
But the sweetest of all is one princess of flowers,
With loving blue eyes and soft flaxen hair.

Of all Southern roses that Springtime discloses,
This rose is the fairest that ever can be;
Her manner as calm as the Spring's fragrant breezes,
Her face is the picture of beauty to me.

There's nothing in all the wide world quite so tender,
So pure as this rose of all treasures my choice;
Her smile is like love-laden sunshine that lingers
To take away worrying and make me rejoice.

One look from those eyes in their innocence calms me;
It lifts my soul upwards new glories to see.
Her life is her love and this love-light discloses
Her sweetness of nature my love-rose to be.

Her face in its tenderest peace and its beauty,
In modesty blushing with sweetness untold,
With loveliness wins me, in faithfulness holds me,
The sun of my life and the light of my soul.

Of all flowers that live on the hills of the Southland,
The purest and fairest that God ever grew,
Is this choice of my heart from this garden of roses,
My queen of all flowers most lovely, most true.

She's my rose, yes, she is, my princess of beauty,
A fair rose, a rare rose, my white rose is she,
A wild rose in innocence, turned in love toward me,
My idol, my treasure, my own rose is she.

O my rose, sweetest flower, I ever will wear thee
Close to my heart, pinned with love thou shalt be;
And blasted the hand that in envy would snatch thee
Away from my soul, for I love thee, I love thee!

Those Oxford Bells

That Oxford belle, that Oxford belle,
What glorious times her records tell!
Her staying traits are known quite well;
Soph, Senior, Sub, declare she's swell—
That belle of belles, that belle, that belle!

Hark, hark that sound! What sounds resound
When car-mules fleetly touch the ground,
And car-bells tinkle, "Cov-ward bound!"
Alas, alas, on duty's round
Small need for rapid transit's found!

That brazen-bell! Oft, oft the hour,
When Father Time from Seney's tower
Makes slightly sad, if not quite sour
The college lad of boasted power;
Uncolled bell! Destined stour!

That dinner bell! That magic bell!
To hear its sound my trunk I'd sell;
Loud, louder yet, its dong-ding-dell—
We'll every one rush in pell-mell.
I hear it now! Sweet bell! Farewell!

Modern Romance

Destination, country-station, nice location, recreation.
Exploration, observation; fascination—a flirtation.
Trepidation, hesitation, conversation, simulation:
Invitation, acclamation, sequestration, cold libation.

Stimulation, animation; inspiration, new potation.
Demonstration, agitation, circulation, exclamation!
Declaration, acceptance, osculation, sweet sensation.
Exultation, preparation, combination, new relation.

Caught in the Rain

"It was certainly hard luck that Frank had to leave and miss the first part of Commencement, wasn't it?" John Knowles remarked as he gathered up the reins and shook them over the horse's back. "I don't suppose you liked it very much?"

"Why, no, of course not," she replied, looking up with a trace of surprise in her eyes. "I know he was disappointed, but he will be back Sunday, will he not?"

"What, you ask me! I should be asking you." John felt vaguely that something was wrong; just what he did not know, for was it not generally understood that Louise Atkins and Frank Harris were engaged—in fact, Frank had tacitly admitted it—and yet she hardly seemed interested. Perhaps it was her way, though; he had met her only the day before, and—well, girls were funny people, anyway. He glanced toward her, but she was looking away out over the fields, and he caught a glimpse of a wealth of hair arranged in some wonderful but entirely captivating fashion, a trim little figure all in quiet gray, and the whole topped off with an enormous hat that would persist in trying to cut his head off. He thought of his friend plodding some dusty street far away and murmured "Lucky Dog"—but who the lucky one was, he did not say.

John never remembered much about that drive. It always seemed to him that he was riding on a cloud against a rosy sunset with a little gray dove, who looked up at him with the most wonderful eyes from under a big hat with a long plume that tickled his cheek delightfully. He never remembered seeing a dove with a hat on, before, but now, strange to say, it seemed eminently proper, and if disquieting visions of his friend's face came before his eyes and obscured his vision they were quickly dispelled by the silvery tinkling of her laughter, like mists before the sun.

"Oh, look!" she exclaimed, clapping her hands in childish glee, "Let's pick those violets and take them home. I do love them so!"

If she had asked for the moon it would have been the same—his not to reason why. She wanted them—enough. Out they jumped and soon, amid exclamations of delight, he was on his knees—to the violets. They were plentiful and absorbing, so it was not his part to notice that the sky had become overcast and lowering, and his first warning was a warm drop of rain upon his cheek. Then it seemed as if the very heavens were torn open by a lurid flash of fire, followed by a heavy peal of thunder. He sprang to his feet only to see his horse running madly down the road with the buggy bounding along behind.

There was no time to waste over vain regrets, for unless they were to be drenched they must hurry. He remembered a broken-down shed a few hundred yards up the road, and, taking the hand of a now thoroughly frightened little girl, he hurried her in the direction of their haven. The drops were coming thick and fast now, and the way was slippery and none too smooth. The thunder rolled almost continuously like a great orchestra playing a tragic air to a comic scene—two thoroughly bedraggled people scurrying away in search of shelter.

High heels and high haste are not synonymous terms by any means. She slipped, with a muffled cry and would have fallen had he not caught her.

"Oh, my foot!" she cried piteously, clinging to his arm, the tears and rain-drops mingling on her cheeks. Hesitating but a second, he picked her up in his arms and ran as best he could for the shed, which was now close at hand.

Depositing his drenched companion on a pile of lumber, he quickly had the slipper off, but more he could not do. The ankle was painfully and perhaps badly hurt. She was weeping softly and trying to pretend she wasn't—dabbling at her eyes with a foolish little square of lace and insertion.

"I'll run down the road and see if I can find help," he shouted to her above the roar of the storm, after she had assured him that the ankle felt better. She started at his words, but bit her lip and smiled bravely. Turning up his collar, he squared his shoulders and started out into the rain, only to be greeted with a tremendous clap of thunder and a shriek from within. "Oh, John, John!" she was calling in frightened tones, and rushing in he found her trembling from head to foot. She looked so sad and pathetic that in some unaccountable way his arm stole unconsciously around her and she, tired and frightened as she was, allowed her head to sink upon his shoulder with a sigh. But only for a moment, for they both remembered at the same instant and drew back—she with an exclamation and he with a remembrance of Frank's good-natured face.

How long they listened to the drumming of the rain he never knew, but it was dark when finally the moon shone timidly through a rift in the clouds and the storm was over. The stars came out; the soft purr of an approaching motor-car arose on the quiet evening air. Two great eyes came nearer and nearer, and finally the car stopped in answer to his shout. It was Dr. Franklin returning to Covington after a hurry call. Quickly the ankle was examined and bandaged, and its owner gently helped into the big machine.

John sat on the front seat with the chauffeur. The Doctor, with his patient, were behind. Not a word did John speak to her during that slow drive. His thoughts were not so pleasant as to stimulate conversation, and the night seemed to point a thousand accusing fingers at him.

It was an hour or more after their arrival home that he found her in a big chair by a window, opening on a broad veranda. The Doctor had said that she was not badly hurt and, his duty done, had gone his way.

"I—I am very sorry," John began, brokenly. "I wouldn't have done it for the world—I forgot. I wouldn't have offended you for anything—for Frank's sake."

"I understand," she replied gently, "and I am not offended."

There was a step on the veranda and a maid appeared at the window. "This letter came for you, Miss Helen," she said.

"Why, she called you 'Helen!'" he said, as with an apology she opened the letter. She did not look up for a second, and then, with a cry of delight, handed him the note.

"My dear Sister," it read, "Frank and I were married in Atlanta this morning—" He read no further, but looked at the end; it was signed "Louise."

"And you were not offended?"

"Now, that's not fair," she said—and blushed.

Real and Imaginary

(With Apologies to Longfellow)

I thumped a dollar into the air, I presented a bill with utmost care,
It fell to earth, I knew not where, It fell to earth, I knew not where;
For so swiftly it flew, the sight For who is there who hath such skill,
Could not follow it in its flight That he can follow the flight of a bill.

Long months afterward, in a glade,
I found the bill, still unpaid.
But where the dollar doth abide,
Is a question for you to decide.

Maiden's Song

I. Sing to me, evening skies, II. Sing to me, morning skies,
Blend with thy lullabies, Haste ere the sun arise,
Lyrics of silence, lispings of night; Murmurs of morning, musings of might;
Then till the dawn appears, Then when the day appears,
I will forget my tears, I will forget my fears,
Dreaming like thee, Dreaming of thee,
Starry Way Starry Way,
Faraway Land. Faraway Land.

Absent

Since you left, Dear,
The very days seem longer than they ever used to be;
The little birds, to tell the truth, sing not so merrily;
The lazy clouds which once were bright have now a pensive haze,
As if they, too, were longing for my little sweetheart's gaze.

Since you left, Dear,
The lofty spot where we were wont to sit and laugh and talk,
Is now the lonesomest old place; I can not bear the walk
Which leads out o'er the hill and by the timber to the wood;
And, oh, I can not view the landscape from the spot where we have stood.

Since you left, Dear,
The stately pine trees sigh in sadness to me now,
The birds and bees may linger or may go, I care not how,
Just the image of your pretty face comes back from day to day,
And I am lonesome, oh so lonesome, since you went away.

The Football Game of Life

The Senior Team had been shining stars of the class teams; their tackling was ferocious and their bucking a dream, when one of this husky team tucked the ball beneath his arm, they had a special man to ring in the ambulance alarm. They hit the line and ran the ends like some mad bull amuck; the other side would shiver when they saw them start to buck. And when the rival team tried to stop their dashing pace, their first thought was that a train of cars had waltzed across their face.

They had the speed, they had the weight, the nerve to never yield; from goal to goal they whizzed along, while fragments stove the field. And there had been a standing bet which no one tried to call, that they could gain their distance through a ten-foot granite wall.

As they wound up their college course, each student's heart was sore; they wept to think that this husky team would hit the line no more. Not so with them—in their dreams they saw the field of Fame, where they would rush to glory in the swirl of life's big game.

They tried to run the Ends of Life, when, lo! with vicious toss, the life which they had led threw them for a loss; and when they switched their course again and crashed into the line, the massive team named "Failure" did a two-step on their spine.

They tried to pull out of the rut, but ere they turned the trick, right-tackle "Competition" tumbled through and blocked the kick; and when one of this team tackled at "Success" in one long, vicious bound, the full-back "Disappointment" steered his features to the ground.

But one day, when across the field of FAME, the goal seemed dim, the wise old coach "Experience" came up and spoke to them: "Boys," said he, "the main point now, before you win your bout, is keep on bucking 'FAILURE' till you have worn him out.

"Cut out this work around the ends—go in there, low and hard—just put your eyes upon the goal and work there yard by yard; and, more than all, when you are thrown or tumble with a crack, don't lie there whining; hustle up, and keep on coming back.

"Keep coming back for all you've got, and take it with a grin, when 'Disappointment' trips you up, or 'Failure' barks your shin. Keep coming back, and if, at last, you lose the game of 'Right,' let those who whipped you know at least that you made a noble fight.

"Keep coming back, and though the world may romp across your spine, let every game's end find you still upon the battling line; for when the one 'Great Scorer' comes to mark against your name, he marks—not that you won or lost—but that you played the game."

* * * * * * * * * * *

Such is football on the white-chalked Field of Life; you find the bread-line hard to buck, while sorrow crowns the strife; but in the fight for name and fame, among the world-wide clan, "There goes the victor" sinks to naught before "There goes a man."

YOU CAN MAKE DOLLARS

And plenty of them, if you will take a Combined Course in either of the colleges of which I am General Manager.

You will find their locations at the bottom of this page.

They are different from ordinary business colleges, just as the State University is different from ordinary educational institutions—better instructors, better equipment, better courses of study, better reputation, better class of students.

As a result of these superior advantages, I secure better salaries for my students, better positions with greater opportunities for promotion than can be secured by students from ordinary business colleges. Good literary education and dependable recommendation necessary for admission.

To complete a course in one of my colleges requires a little more time, but not any more money than in an ordinary business college. However, the difference in training, in position secured and ultimate success in life, much more than makes up for the extra time.

Yes, I guarantee positions under very reasonable conditions.

Many of our students earn a large part of their expenses while taking their course.

Just send me your name and address on a postal for full particulars. Address me at either office.

Good Clothes

If you would have the satisfaction of wearing GOOD CLOTHES—Clothes with the commendable economy of keeping good—aside from furnishing a pleasing sense of being well dressed, you can make no error in choosing where these points have the guarantee of the name of MUSE.

The same applies to our Hats, Shoes and Furnishings. That we think so is proved by their presence in our store. That other people think so is proved by the frequency of their visits to us.

People who have worn them are still wearing them, and such is the allegiance to the name of MUSE.

Beautiful forms and compositions are not made by chance, nor can they ever, in any material, be made at small expense.

A composition for cheapness, and not for excellence of workmanship, is the most frequent and certain cause of the rapid decay and entire destruction of arts and manufactures.

— Ruskin

Our claim to your consideration lies in the fact that we have applied to our own business the thought contained in this quotation from one of the world's greatest thinkers and practical workers.

If there is anything attractive beyond the ordinary, in the page arrangement, cover decoration, presswork, and general harmony which distinguish our work, be assured it has not been due to chance.

We leave nothing to chance. Every line, page, volume, as it comes from our establishment is the result of a carefully laid, conscientiously executed plan.

The thought and the supervision which our system provides is your guarantee of excellence.

If you have anything to be printed, write us; if we undertake it we will do it well.
