Dedication
Dean David W. Robinson
In these days of “Publish or Perish,” advanced centers for learning, and continuous drives for endowment, too often the true purpose of a University is swept aside; the student merely falls by the wayside.

But often there comes a man whose philosophy of administration not only concerns the student, but centers upon him. He sees his job not as administering or disciplining; rather, he believes in guiding and encouraging.

Such a man is Dean David W. Robinson. In his brief tenure, he has helped the life of the Emory student in more ways than can be counted. He has shown the ropes and directed the energies; moreover, he was a friend and a person to talk to.

Because of his many indelible but invisible contributions to Emory, we choose to proffer one small visible testament to his works. With an enormous amount of appreciation, the Campus of 1966 is dedicated to Dean Robinson.

Honors
The Brittain Award, given annually to one Emory student, is the highest honor an Emory student can receive during his college career. As the award reads, “This award is made each year to a student who has rendered notable service to the University. It is intended especially to give public and permanent expression to the University’s gratitude for service done without expectation of reward or recognition.”

This award, given in the name of Marion Luther Brittain, is presented in the spring at Honors Day when the recipient first learns of his selection. A selection committee composed of the Deans of Men and Women and faculty members review recommendations and choose the recipient.
Phi Beta Kappa, the oldest national honorary society in the United States, originated on the William and Mary campus in 1776 and was later established on the Emory campus in 1928. Emory's chapter is Gamma of Georgia.

Phi Beta Kappa was established in order to encourage learning and to recognize outstanding scholarship. A student who achieves a 3.5 average his first three years in college or a 3.25 average through the fall or spring quarter of his senior year receives the Phi Beta Kappa key. Also considered are courses taken, moral character of the student, and his general promise for future achievement.
Alpha Epsilon Upsilon was founded at Emory-at-Oxford in 1906. It is the lower division honor society for the recognition of scholastic achievement and is patterned after Phi Beta Kappa. A student who achieves a 3.5 average at the end of the third quarter of his freshman year or a 3.25 average at the end of the first or second quarter of his sophomore year is invited into Alpha Epsilon Upsilon. AEU presents at Honors Day its annual Outstanding Lower Division Student Award based on scholarship, leadership, and contribution to Emory to the outstanding student in the lower division.
On December 3, 1914, Omicron Delta Kappa, leadership honor society for men, was founded on the Washington and Lee University campus in response to the spirit of leadership shown by Robert E. Lee and George Washington. Eleven years later on the Emory campus, the Emory society of Mu Circle was granted a charter by the national council of Omicron Delta Kappa.

Omicron Delta Kappa not only recognizes and encourages achievement and service in the fields of scholarship and student affairs but renders such service to the community as well as to the University. Each year Omicron Delta Kappa sponsors a leadership workshop for capable high school students in this area. ODK also works for better student-faculty communication by meeting with both administration and faculty in an attempt to seek answers to mutual problems.

DVS, the senior honor society for Emory men was begun at Emory-at-Oxford in 1904. Initiation into DVS is the highest honor a man at Emory can receive during his college career. Membership is based on every aspect of student life and the contributions that the student has made to the University and his fellow students. The society observes the strictest secrecy in matters which pertain to the society.

Each spring seven junior men are chosen from the College and the Business School for membership. This enables DVS to be not merely a reward for past contributions to campus life, but a challenge to the student to give even more to the University during his senior year.
The Women's Honor Organization originated on the Emory campus in May of 1954 as the first leadership honor society for women attending Emory. The Women's Honor Organization recognizes outstanding service, scholarship, and leadership, and is the highest honor which an Emory woman can receive. A woman tapped into WHO must have fulfilled the ideals of the Emory Honor Code and the high standards for Emory women.

To be eligible for membership in the Women's Honor Organization an Emory woman must be a last quarter junior or a senior. Tapping ceremonies are held twice a year, both in the fall and in the spring.
Eta Sigma Psi

Eta Sigma Psi, the lower division leadership society, was established at Emory in 1928. The goal of Eta Sigma Psi is to encourage participation in extracurricular activities by underclassmen and then to recognize this outstanding achievement. Election to membership is based on leadership, character, and scholarship. Tapping is held in the fall for sophomores and in the spring for freshmen.

Stipe Scholars

The Stipe Scholar program began at Emory in 1957 and was named for John Gordon Stipe, past vice-president of the University. Each year Stipe Scholars are selected from every class as those students who have the most outstanding scholarship record. Approximately seventy students, fifteen from each class, receive this award. Members of the sophomore, junior, and senior classes are selected on the basis of their scholastic record while at Emory. Members of the freshman class are selected on the basis of academic achievement in high school, College Board scores, personal interviews, and promise of future work at Emory.

By naming students John Gordon Stipe scholars, Emory wishes to perpetuate the memory of a man whose ideals of scholarship were high and whose abiding interest in the intellectual growth of undergraduates is reflected today in every phase of the academic program he worked for years to help build. The designation of a student as a Stipe Scholar indicates Emory's belief in the student's future. In turn, the student accepts the challenge of developing his potentialities to the fullest during his years as a college student.
The Career Scholars program was begun in 1962 with the help of a grant from the Ford Foundation. This program is an attempt to not only recognize capable students but to encourage advanced study. The program provides both the incentive and the opportunity and guidance to superior students to undertake extra work in preparation for graduate school and a career as a college professor. The students concentrate their supplementary studies in four major areas: seminars, extra readings, a special project similar to a Master's thesis, and a knowledge of two foreign languages.

This year the Career Scholars had forty-five advanced scholars and sixty new juniors.
Who's Who

Last winter, Emory participated in the national "Who's Who Among Students in American Colleges and Universities" for the first time. About 750 colleges and universities throughout the country participate and are represented by outstanding students on their campuses.

Membership is based on citizenship, scholarship, contributions to the university community, participation and leadership in academic and extracurricular activities, and general promise of usefulness to society. Membership is open to students in all the graduate and professional schools as well as to students in the college. National Who's Who provides a placement bureau, a national biography, and a Who's Who key for these students.

Activities
The Student Senate, composed of elected representatives from the divisions of the College as well as from other student organizations and divisions of the University, is responsible for the various operations on the campus involving the student. Through committees such as the ones involving student health, food services, operations and the bookstore, the Senate strives to improve campus functions and accommodations. Through the International Relations program, for example, an attempt is made to introduce the foreign students more completely to campus life by various teas and suppers given in their honor. In these ways the Student Senate seeks to fulfill its responsibility to the Emory School community.

One of the busiest times on campus, Spring Elections, is sponsored jointly by the Senate and College Council; these elections include not only Senate and Council officers and members but also class and dorm officers.
Sponsored by the College Council are many of Emory's main activities of the academic year. Included are annual events such as Dooley's Frolics, The Miss Emory Pageant, Fraternity and Sorority Rush, Freshman Camp, Parents' and Who's Who Selection. The elected class representatives are also responsible for campus communications, the elections each spring and the quarterly Faculty and Advisor Evaluations. Special activities this year included the Spring Symposium and Affirmation: Viet Nam, which was publicized nation-wide. The 1965-1966 academic year is considered one of the Council's most successful in creating a more diversified and exciting calendar of events.

The College Council Officers for 1965-1966 are Jim Winn, Vice President; Suzy McCain, Secretary; and Bill Kemp, Treasurer. Not available for photographing was Tommy Tucker, President.

Two students make last minute baggage checks before boarding buses for Freshman Camp, held off-campus each fall by the Council to introduce Campus life informally to the new freshman before the rigors of actual orientation begin.

"Affirmation: Viet Nam" necessitated many back-of-the-scenes planning and work sessions. Below is shown one of the press conferences used to explain the aims of the rally, which had nation-wide coverage and interest.
Violation: A student is seen looking on another's examination paper and is reported to the Council; as the Council explains to the freshman at orientation each year, failure to do so would in itself be a violation.

The accused is contacted and appears before one of the Council's faculty advisors, Dr. Mandell or Dr. Rushe, accompanied by a member of the Honor Council, so that his violation and the council proceedings can be explained to him.

Honor Council

In order for the Emory Honor Code to be meaningful, it is necessary to have an authoritative procedure behind it to ensure proper respect and support. This authority is designated to the Honor Council, which has the sole responsibility for handling offenders through court proceedings. Because of the uncertainty in the minds of many students regarding the activities of the Honor Council, the Campus, in cooperation with the Council, presents an account of the occurrences following an offense. Since council proceedings are confidential except for an impersonal announcement in the Wheel, this is a fictitious case; however, all details are factually correct.
The accused is then presented with the evidence and questioned for an explanation. During the proceedings, he is considered innocent until proven guilty.

If the accused is declared guilty, a recommendation for punishment is given to the Dean, who will inform the guilty party of his punishment, provided he agrees with the Council's recommendation. In all cases of the Honor Council, the Dean has accepted the recommended punishment of the Honor Council.

After hearing all pertinent information, the council retires to discuss the case. Following the conference, a unanimous decision must be reached to convict the accused; if any member of the council considers the person innocent, then all records of the case are destroyed, and the person is found innocent.

Dormitory Governments

Emory men and women rule themselves in all phases of campus life including in the residence halls. The students elect leaders to govern the dormitories. These leaders control conduct, provide dorm functions, and formulate the rules that Emory students live by. With their responsible leadership, Emory is considered a pleasant place to live.
Each year the Student Center Board sponsors a series of programs, the Creative Arts Festival. The first program this year was a debate between Dr. Altizer (left) of the college and Dr. Stokes (right) of the theology school.

Pi Delta Epsilon, Emory's Literary Honor society, continued to represent Emory with some of the finest literary talents in the South. To become a member of Pi Delta Epsilon, a student must demonstrate outstanding ability in the field of literature. With the growing literary excellence on campus, Pi Delta Epsilon this year, under the leadership of President Em Cole, again continued to honor the best talents on campus.
This year, the Campus switched from Taylor Publishing Company to Foote & Davies, and with this switch the Campus took on a whole new appearance. Editor Martha Laird and her staff combined the new mosaic layout with more comprehensive coverage of the school to give Emory a yearbook second to none in appearance and content. The extensive use of color highlights the school year in a way to give both the graduating seniors and underclassmen a vivid remembrance of 1965-66 at Emory.

Phoenix

Under the leadership of George Fox, the Phoenix, the South's oldest Collegiate Magazine, began its seventy-seventh year of publication. The Phoenix was expanded to a quarterly magazine published three times a year, with a "special" issue guaranteed to liven up any school year. To augment the excellent though sometimes pointed humor of the regular issues, the Phoenix combined with the Wheel to publish the first Phoenix edition of the Wheel, which had many E.U. students frantically calling their draft boards. To top off the fine year, the Phoenix sponsored the first annual Phoenix "Aggression Day Rally" which was indeed one of the dirtiest rallies in Emory history.

The Archon, Emory's newest literary magazine, was conceived as a show case for the many talented writers at Emory University. Dedicated to a presentation of both dramatic and humorous literature alike, the Archon, under editor Susan Pharr, had a very full year and has earned its place among E.U. Publications.

This year the Emory Varsity Soccer Team rolled to victory with an outstanding 11-1 record. Coached by Emory's Coach Tom Johnson and led by team captain Phil Lawrence, the Soccer team chalked up a straight win record till the last deciding game against Pfeiffer College. For the 1965 season two new impressive team records were set: more wins were registered and more goals scored than any other Emory Soccer team in the preceding years.

Intercollegiate Swimming

Even though the team was not highly successful this year, much work and effort went in the preparation of the 1965-66 Varsity Swimming Team. After much grooming this year, all freshmen and most upperclassmen will be back to put their best forward for the coming year. Led by team captain Tim Scott, the team scored two impressive victories over West Georgia College at the Carrollton and Emory meets for this year's wins.

"As fall quarter comes into being after houseparties, rush and pledging, sorority minds are beginning to turn once again to the healthy competition of women's athletics."

The Wheel

Fall quarter Emory women participated in two sports—volleyball and tennis. This year Alpha Chi Omega dazzled their competition for the third straight year to retire the volleyball trophy. They also took two of the four places in tennis. Independent Sandra Bragg won the tennis singles with Alpha Chi Omega Maxine Wilson second. Maxine, with Carole Moate, also won the doubles championship. Kappa Alpha Theta's Violet Glascock and Betty Householder took second place.

Maxine shows trophy winning form.

Enthusiastic crowd cheers team.
Winter quarter brought another rough and tumble season in women's basketball—with battle scars, tears and victory parties. The Independents won the championship for the second year in a row and Kappa Kappa Gamma took second place.

The toss—and the championship game is underway.
Spring quarter Emory women spent part of their time in "ye olde poole" and on the archery range. This year Alpha Delta Pi won the swimming and diving competition while Kappa Delta placed second. Kappa Alpha Theta's winning water ballet added enough points for a third. On the archery range, the winning scores were tallied by Ellen Jervis, giving Chi Omega a first place, and Kappa Kappa Gamma's Celia Lee for a second.

Dooley's Spirit

Once again Dooley strikes our Emory campus, as even the spring monsoon rains cannot deter his annual visit—a delight to students, a terror to most faculty. Classes dismissed before that dreaded pop quiz, donuts on the Quad, squirting-watered faces—all these are found only when our dearest alumnus arrives.

Fraternity yards again become a jungle of steel bars, chicken wire, and paper mache; there is that last minute frantic preparation with lost scripts, too little material for costumes, missing helpers. General chaos and excitement once again engulf our student body.

Much is held in store for the weekend, beginning Friday night with a street dance with two bands placed down Fraternity Row. The well-known names of Major Lance and the Platters are heard in the Saturday afternoon concert in the Field House. All this is appropriately climaxed with a semi-formal dance Saturday night downtown at the Biltmore Hotel.
Thus, another visit from Dooley is ended, as he once more descends into his grave on the Quad. A week of parties, little studying, frustrated professors, lawn displays is now only a memory, while newly assigned tests, too little sleep, and a desire for more fun are only too real.
Greeks
The Emory Women's Panhellenic Council, composed of two representatives from each sorority, is the head governing body for the ten sororities on campus. Officers are elected by rotation in the spring.

All intersorority functions are handled by Panhellenic, whose most important responsibility is the planning and supervision of Fall Rush. Panhellenic sponsors Greek Week with the Interfraternity Council.

Mrs. Carrie Hoffman is Panhellenic housemother for all sorority women at Emory.
The interfraternity council is the governing body of Emory's fraternity system. Making decisions on matters of common interest, it is composed of one representative plus the president of each fraternity. The I.F.C. sponsors Greek Week, the Empty Stocking Fund Raising Drive, and the Interfraternity Sing. It also enforces rush rules during Rush Week.

The School of Business Administration is housed in the Rich Memorial Building. This three-story structure contains complete facilities for the operation of the school: classrooms, conference and seminar rooms, accounting and statistical laboratories, a computer center, and a special business and economics library.

The faculty is composed of many well-qualified professors and a group of guest lecturers representing the various aspects of Atlanta business. An Advisory Committee of prominent businessmen aids the school in relation to its opportunities for service in the business community.

The Business School provides its students, through instruction in the sources and methods of assembling business information and in the analysis of business problems, a technique for pursuing on their own the specialized vocational interests that they may now possess or later acquire.

Instruction in the first year is directed to the use of the tools and controls of business and to the introduction to and the understanding of primary administrative and organizational principles and problems. Laboratory practice and problem analysis are integral parts of many courses.
Mrs. Beverly K. Schaffer adds a feminine touch to the Economics Department.

Dr. W. Tate Whitman holds the distinction of being a Candler Professor of Economics.

Dr. Thomas D. Mara directs the Management Programs.

In the second year of Business Education the analytical and professional approach is stressed, with increased attention being given to the application of principals and to the analysis of business problems.
Students of Business Administration participate in all the activities of Emory College and the Greek system. In addition, they have their own Business School Student Council which sponsors activities for business administration students exclusively. Members are selected on the basis of their interest and willingness to serve. The council acts as a link between students and faculty and is responsible for organizing the wide assortment of field trips and interest programs that supplement classroom work.

BUSINESS SCHOOL HONOR COUNCIL

Feeling that personal ethics lie in education and should be based on standards of individual honor, the Business School follows the Honor System that pertains to all Emory students. A separate council is chosen from the school's student body to handle all academic problems arising in the business courses. Continuing high standards have resulted in students being selected for such honors as Degrees of Distinction, The Wall Street Journal Award, Beta Gamma Sigma, The Campbell Accounting Award, The C.P.A. Award, and many others.

Dental School
School of Dentistry

Since 1883, the Emory University School of Dentistry has expanded its enrollment from six in the first graduating class to over 300 who are presently enrolled. The School has evolved from its initial role as the Department of Dentistry of the Southern Medical School, to the Atlanta Dental College, and finally to its present status as the School of Dentistry of Emory University. In 1960, Doctor George H. Moulton assumed the position of Dean of the Dental School. During that same year the graduate program of the School was approved. The degree of Master of Science in Dentistry is awarded to those participants completing the program.

Case Club

Membership in the Case Club is restricted to sixteen students who have met the requirements of completing the course in Legal Research, Writing, and Advocacy, and other similar qualifications. Each year the students team up in pairs and participate in an elimination competition through the presentation of appellate arguments before a moot court. On Law Day the two surviving teams face each other in a final argument. After being judged on presentation, argumentation, reasoning, and evidence of research, respondents Charles Evans and W. Bonneau Ansley were announced as winners this year.

Student Bar Association

The governing body of the Law School is the Student Bar Association, consisting of a Day Division and an Evening Division, with a single president over the entire organization. As a member of the American Law Students Association, an affiliate of the American Bar Association, the Student Bar Association functioned as host of the ALSA this year. Other activities include the sponsoring of an annual Prominent Speaker Program, which this year offered the students the opportunity of hearing U.S. Senator Richard B. Russell, State Senator LeRoy Johnson, and Speaker of the Georgia House of Representatives, Mr. George T. Smith.
Editions of the Journal of Public Law are published twice a year by advanced law students under the general direction of a faculty committee. This publication is international in scope, reviewing law, government, and politics through the contributions of philosophers, historians, economists, political and social scientists, lawyers, and legal scholars. Case notes are written and edited by the students themselves as part of the work on the staff of the Journal.

In an effort to uphold the principles of the Emory Honor Code and the Code of Ethics of the legal profession, the Law School has established an Honor Court. This body deals with violations of these principles of integrity found within the Law School. The members of the Honor Court consist of the president of the Student Bar Association, three members from the Day Division of the Law School, and three members from the Evening Division.
Law

Although Law Day has been celebrated at Emory since 1949, it has been a national event only since 1958, when President Eisenhower declared May 1 a day for celebration of the democratic way of life under law in the United States.

This year Law Day, the highlight of the year for law students, was held during the weekend of May 6 instead of the usual one-day observance. The most important events took place on May 7, which featured the annual Case Club Moot Court final competition and an address by Justice Abe Fortas, the most recently appointed member of the United States Supreme Court.

Justice Tom Candler awards gavels and plaques to Charles Evans and Bon Ansley, winners in the Moot Court competition.
Day

Ben Shapiro, Chairman of Law Day, speaks prior to Justice Fortas' address.

Justice Abe Fortas delivers the principal address of Law Day.

"There is a tendency throughout the nation and throughout the world, I am afraid, for men to look to the acts of the few extremists and to judge the South by their acts. This is an injustice, a great injustice."

The crowd listens attentively.

"Be active! . . . If you do that and only if you do that, will Law Day continue to mean what it was intended to mean."

Governor Carl E. Sanders speaks to students and faculty on the lawyer's responsibility to actively serve his community to end the Law Day activities.

Speaker of the Georgia House of Representatives, Mr. George T. Smith, presents "A Review of the General Assembly."

Judge Griffin B. Bell receives an award from the American Law Students Association from Jim Witcher of Samford University, national vice president.
Medicine
The basic program leading to the M. D. degree consists of four years of instruction, in the form of lectures, conferences, laboratory work, demonstrations, examinations, and, in the last two years, clinical clerkships. Research opportunities are available to interested and qualified students.

The goal of the Emory University School of Medicine is to offer a sound educational program in all areas. This allows its graduates to develop in the field of their preference, whether it be general practice, specialization, administration, teaching, or research.

The highest honor which a student of medicine can attain is that of membership in Alpha Omega Alpha. The selection of members is based upon both the scholastic records and the moral qualifications of its candidates.

Alpha Omega Alpha strives to maintain this high standard of character and conduct among its members. In addition, membership in such an organization makes possible the recognition of such admirable achievements on the part of its members.

Both thoughts and conversation concerning the various fields of medicine may even be found at dinner time—whether it be a formal banquet, such as the one held by Alpha Epsilon Delta, . . . .

or an informal gathering of students at lunch.
Students gather valuable information concerning their chosen life's work—through lectures, through round-table discussions, through demonstrations, through observation, and through actual first-hand experience.

.... through observation,....
The medical students learn to operate and interpret the findings of many complex and valuable pieces of equipment.
Nursing
The Emory School of Nursing has been a part of the University since 1944. The school offers programs leading to the Bachelor of Science degree and the Master of Nursing degree. The Baccalaureate program runs for nine quarters and is available to students who have completed six quarters of a liberal arts education. Registered nurses are eligible to enter the masters program which runs for four quarters. This program trains the nurse to specialize in either Medical and Surgical, Public Health, or Psychiatric Nursing. The School of Nursing is under the direction of Dean Ada Fort.

Theology
The Candler School of Theology, a major division of Emory University, is one of the twelve official seminaries of the Methodist Church. The purpose of the School of Theology is the education of men and women for pastoral ministry and for other full-time service in the Christian Church. In seeking to provide a theological education of the highest quality, the curriculum is arranged in four general areas. These are designed to awaken the student to the best Biblical, historical, theological, and contemporary insight into the Christian faith and its implications for the work of the Church and the ministry. The degrees of Bachelor of Divinity and Master of Christian Education are offered by the School of Theology. The curriculum seeks to achieve its primary task, the professional training of the ministry. It seeks to develop mature, growing persons equipped with the basic knowledge and appropriate skills necessary to meet the exacting demands of the high calling which is theirs under God.

Student Council

Each year two outstanding students are given National Methodist Seminary Awards. These are given on the basis of high academic standing and unusual promise of usefulness in a parish. The awards carry a $500 stipend and travel seminar to all boards and agencies of the Methodist Church.

Graduate Student Deepens Insights

The graduate student occupies a unique niche in the academic world. He is at once a student and a teacher. As a teacher, he shares the knowledge he has accumulated with those of lesser experience. As a student, he realizes how inadequate is his store of learning. Having completed one degree, he works toward another more difficult one, seeking to gain mastery of a specific field.

In addition to accumulating facts, the graduate student attempts to organize his knowledge into a meaningful, viable pattern—a pattern relevant to his own life and bearing the stamp of his individuality. As he achieves increasing mastery of the outer reality of the world in which he lives, he simultaneously gains greater understanding of the inner reality of the self.

Dean Charles Lester discharges his administrative duties.
Emory's Graduate School, designed to train scholars for positions of leadership, was instituted as a distinct division of the University in 1919. The School, currently under the direction of Dean Charles Lester, awards master's degrees in twenty-four disciplines and degrees of Doctor of Philosophy in eighteen. These degrees point toward a certain professional competency, but they also require a liberal arts background and include general education in their programs of study. At present there are approximately eight hundred students, four hundred full-time and four hundred part-time, fulfilling the requirements for an advanced degree.

A candidate for a doctorate in English, James Bynum teaches a freshman poetry class.

Robert Croker is examined by the Biology Department faculty, thus completing the requirements for the Ph.D. degree.

Dooley's Diary

Greetings, fellow Emoryites—

Once again the pesky Editors of The Campus have resurrected my soul for another jaunt through my Diary. I really don’t mind the intrusion, for I certainly trust them; if it was the Legion of Decency it might be a different story.

Anyway, they came to me for The Diary while I was vacationing this summer in a hidden-away hotel room in Miami Beach. Naturally I wasn’t in when they arrived, so in their zealousness to come out on time this year, they rifled through my room and made off with the Gideon Bible instead. Later they realized their mistake, and they came after my sun-bleached bones. (Yup, if you go to Miami during the summer, you’re sure to come back white). So at long last, here’s my gazateer of the Year That’s Been.

September 1—Significant because (a) it was the beginning of September, and (b) Jerry Zeller became Dean of Men. In the year’s best-kept secret, the Administration decided to give a local-boy-made-good another chance at school politics. Zeller also became the first DVS Man to amount to something worthwhile.

September 5-10—Campus and potential politicians had their annual Field Day, as Freshman Camp convened at Rock Eagle. Nearly 80% of the entering class attended, an important fact when you consider they should have been scared off by last year’s ptomaine poisoning.

September 10—With a hearty “Heigh-ho Madras! 350 Emory men made the annual Charge of Fraternity Row. Also, 200 females decided that Greekdom was for them, too, and so the Sororities made their annual haul. One wonders what would have happened to this year’s pledge classes if there wasn ptomaine poisoning at Rock Eagle.

September 14—Glenn Memorial had Standing Room Only for a change, as Dean Hebe Reece received the Jefferson Award, presented annually to the outstanding faculty member. It was about time.

September 24—The first Wheel came rolling out to nobody’s surprise. And it contained nothing new, again to nobody’s surprise.

24-25—“When in doubt, Retreat!” So Emory’s leadership did just that, and headed off for two days at Callaway Gardens to figure out just what in hell they were supposed to do. The Leadership Retreat was a huge success, and even in spite of Glenn Pelham’s excellent speech, everyone came back reassured that all the BMOC’s were equally naive, idealistic, and happy.

September 25—WEMO started broadcasting on Fraternity Row, an incident which did little to help the air pollution problem.

September 26—Coach Cooper established his treasured niche early this year, loudly proclaiming that he really intended to follow through on his plans for Freshman Athletics.

September 28—The Barkley Forum came up with its answer to intercollegiate sports by starting a forensics training and tournament program. Coach Pelham was in charge.

October 1—The Wheel comes out for the second week in a row. October 4—The Student Center Board opened up its primary project for the year... The Coke Lounge. Aimed at capturing those desiring a true “campus hangout,” the Lounge was well-equipped with two pool tables on their last legs, a juke box, and... you guessed it, Coke. The room soon became a smashing success, as local pool sharks from Druid Hills High School frequented it. Nobody in Emory would go near it.

October 8—Culture returned to Emory once more, as in a one week period, opera star Teresa Berganza and the Emory Chamber Guild performed. During the same week, the S.C.B. sponsored the film, “Grand Hotel.”

October 15—Once again The Wheel made a characteristic faux

Frankel, the Senate's Constitution Man, considers setting fire to himself in the middle of the Quadrangle.

November 14—Ralph McGill addresses an informal meeting of Dobbs Hall residents. The session was the first in a series of "Colloquys," but probably the most far-reaching. See January 4th.

November 15—The Emory Eagles win their twelfth straight game, defeating Davidson college. (By the way, the Eagles play soccer.) The game is a first for Emory, with spectators, a parade, and general carousing in the stands. Slightly shaken by seeing Emoryites supporting them for a change, the Eagles lost their next game.

November 16—The God is Dead feud continues, with the New York Times and the Atlanta Journal adding fuel. A 1948 alumnus takes an ad in the Journal urging others not to contribute to Emory until the infidel is fired. Theology's Dean Cannon issues a statement, "God is not dead at Emory," making everyone wonder whether Cannon is hiding Him somewhere in Bishops Hall. The University Board of Trustees keeps silent for a while, then issues a statement respecting Dr. Altizer's right to say what he wants. The student body stays confused through the melee, except for one junior who swore he saw God at Moe's and Joes one night.

November 18—Well how about that!!! The 1965 Campuses arrived, only two days before Martha Laird was to be hung in effigy. Circle K announces that 300 pints of blood were donated last week. The event was planned to coincide with midterms.

December 1—For the first time in its life, The Phoenix comes out on time. Reaction is overwhelming, as all 2500 copies are snapped up within a day. "Cox Hall Food Stinks" placemats are seen in the cafeteria . . . with faculty members as well as students. The only bad reaction comes from UG's Dean of Men, who reacts unfavorably (?) to the article, "Life at the University of Georgia, or How I Earned My Second High School Diploma." The writer is almost kicked out of school.

December 2—The Administration announces its latest streamlining technique: during preregistration, students sign up for two quarters at a time. To say this proved to be a mistake would be a gross understatement.

December 4—Dr. Lemmons and his gang packed 'em in again for their annual Christmas Concert. Students leave afterward with renewed hopes of getting through finals safely.

December 5—The day comes early for Fraternity Row, as Empty Stocking Day drags the Greeks out of their beds early Sunday morning. Lured on by the thought of lukewarm hot chocolate and clammy doughnuts, Emory's delegation spends the morning waking people up in retaliation.

December 11—Finals strike fear throughout the campus. (Now how's that for a cliche?)

January 4—A chaotic registration, brightened only by the appearance of the 2nd Phoenix. Students wonder why the copies are being sold. The Editors wonder why the copies are being bought. Students are welcomed back at registration with a special issue of the Wheel proclaiming "Affirmation: Vietnam." All the Georgia bigwigs were sponsors for the program, and the three-pronged project was to culminate in a big Atlanta Stadium celebration. Symbolic foreshadowing: the day "Affirmation" was announced in Atlanta, it rained.

January 6—Progress knows no bounds at Emory. After a strenuous week of renovation, the AMB offices get pushed around. The Alumni Publications get the old downstairs area affectionately known as "The Catacombs." Student Publications get shunted up three flights of stairs to air-conditioned facilities; this area soon gets the name of "The Belfry."

January 13—U.S. Representative Bo Callaway announces on the floor of the House of Representatives that Secretary of State Dean Rusk will be the principal speaker at the "Affirmation: Vietnam" rally. This follows an earlier series of speeches by the Georgia Democrats who also praise the event. What hath God wrought?

January 17—The cultural highlight of the year . . . Andres Segovia performs in the AMB Auditorium. The same night, James Venus, Imperial Wizard of the National Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, speaks to Dobbs Hall residents.

January 20—Joe Dickey walks off with first place in the annual Show and Tell of Emory . . . the Alpha Chi Capers.

January 22—The Student Center Board gets bugged about overorganization and coordination, so it establishes a Coordination Committee. This was done on the premise that the only way to beat red tape is to create more red tape.

January 25—The Field House turns into a ballroom, as Emory's alumni met for the Annual Birthday Party. The MERIT program is officially announced, as Chairman William Bowdoin starts collecting the presents.

January 27—Noted economist Barbara Ward talks in Glenn Memorial. Thanks to the professors who made it a requirement for their courses there's a pretty good crowd.

January 28—Dobbs Hall votes to go "wet," while Longstreet, Means and Winship decide to stay "dry." Makes you wonder where the still is . . .

January 30—Hermes arrives, and becomes the first Emory publication to be both financially and intellectually free. The first issue covers everything from "Affirmation" to Wagner, making most people question how soon the editors will run out of diatribes.

February 1—Sally Wilson, President of the Executive House Council strikes back at The Wheel for the latter's attacks on her organization. Eventually her soapbox crumbles, and the girls organize under a new banner with newer rules.

February 7—The "new" Creative Arts Festival kicks off, with Dr. Altizer and Dr. Stokes kicking around whether or not God has kicked off. No lightening reported in the area, but a few halos are spotted.

February 10—The word is out, to nobody's surprise. Dean David W. Robinson has resigned to accept a position at the University of Wisconsin—Milwaukee. Students wonder who next year's Departing Dean will be, as chuckles are heard from the vicinity of West Georgia College in Carrollton.

February 12—Rain, rain, rain . . . but 15,639 people swim out to Atlanta Stadium for the "Affirmation: Vietnam" rally. Everyone gets drenched, Dean Rusk forgets his speech and ad-libs, and at least one Georgia mayor goes away mad. As one War Critic has said, "Nobody knows enough to get out of the rain."

February 14—Phase Two of the Creative Arts Festival brings on the outstanding event of the year. A dramatic reading of "John Brown's Body" is presented, with Marsha Houston, Kirk Quillian and Steve Bastedo dividing the honors. Only one criticism . . . it's too bad more Emory students didn't come out to watch. They'll never know what they missed.

February 17—Extracurricular learning strikes another high note. The "Assembly on Activism" is presented, with "Affirmation's" Sutton, Peace Corps' Chakov, SNCC's Julian Bond, and YAF's Houston tossing the barbs. The event fills the AMB Auditorium, as Atlantas pick up seats where students leave off. At this point a germ of an idea starts, with Emory assuming a consistent, responsible place in community affairs.

February 28—The H.M.S. Pinafore sets sail in the AMB, as the Glee Club and Chorale grab ears and paddle through the most successful musical presentation of the year. After the show, Dr. Lemmonds can be seen riding the crest of a popularity wave.

March 1—The paper's headline says, "SELECTIVE SERVICE ELIMINATES ALL EMORY 2-S DEFERMENTS," and a wholesale riot is almost touched off. The Phoenix staff took over the Wheel for a week, and sent a pile of students rushing to transfer, quit school, and enlist before the supposed "All-Out" program went into effect. For those who were smart enough to read on, they quickly learned of the "Affirmation: God" project, the new Venereal Disease Center, and "Three Delts: make a Tri-Delt."

March 3—Georgia House Speaker George T. Smith addresses the Law School under a new program of the Student Bar Assocation. The event is the first in a series bringing top political names to the campus. Kudos to Bob Bell, President of the S.B.A.

March 10—Another retirement is announced. After 46 years of being everything from Gym Teacher to head of the Geology Dept., Dr. James Lester decides to retire. This goes to prove the old saying, “Old geology professors never die . . . they just keep losing their marbles.”

March 12—Winter Quarter Finals start. Record crowds discover the joys of Batman.

March 28—A day that will go down in infamous history . . . way down. The “new” registration is held, without time cards, recent preregistration, or any ray of sanity. Chaos breaks loose only ten minutes after the doors open. Word goes out that classes may start a day late in order to leave enough time to get everyone out of the gym.

April 1-2—“Conservatism in the South” was the theme of the first Horizons ’66, and from audience attendance, you'd think Conservatism was dead. Speakers included Senator Strom Thurmond, George Schuyler, and Tom Van Sickle. Meanwhile, campus wags begin to wonder if the Senate, College Council and S.C.B. shouldn’t keep to themselves from now on. On April 2nd, the movie “Withering Heights” was presented in the Amb; the show in Glenn was later dubbed “Withering Heights.”

April 7—Dean Fagg reported in good condition, after being declared pretty hot stuff. He had been meditating on the life of a Vietnamese Buddhist, when his apartment caught on fire.

April 8-9—The annual flood of High School Seniors swamp Emory for Senior Day. Over 500 hopefuls attend the lectures and discussions, then choke down box lunches. Saturday nite the fraternities formally start rush, having sneaked as many brothers as possible into the Friday nite dance.

April 13—Senator Richard Russell is conned into speaking to Emory on Congress.

April 14—The Robber Barons arrive. The Atwalkee (Milanta?) Braves play their first game, and the campus is noticeably quiet.

April 14—The Office of Economic Opportunity gives Emory a $350,000 contract to study poverty. Students wonder if poverty isn’t spelled “MERIT.”

April 16—Alpha Epsilon Delta brings its national convention to Emory, with the President of the American Medical Association as principal speaker. Participating students suddenly discover strong distaste for Medicare.

April 22—If at first you don’t succeed . . . The Student Senate tries another push to get a Constitution passed. Most Emoryites vote with the usual amount of apathy, but some zealots try to prove the whole thing a farce by stuffing the ballot box. After inserting forty falsified ballots en masse, they quit in disgust. Trouble was, they didn’t prove anything new. P.S. The constitution passed.

April 23—It’s Hammer-Nail-Paper Mache Week on Fraternity Row.

April 27—In the midst of a drenching downpour, Sanford S. Dooley rises from a grave, dug in front of the library. Immediately after appearing, he starts on his annual teacher persecution. First stop: the English Department, where one angry teacher asks if Dooley symbolizes the sex life of the Emory student. Never at a loss for an answer, Dooley writes on the board: “Teachers who have no sex life shouldn’t talk.”

April 30—Saturday afternoon finds the Platters and Major Lance in concert . . . 'nuf said about that. Later on, the Medallions are scheduled to play at the evening dance, but are held up over a traffic ticket in Lawrenceville. Jim Wynn contemplates suicide, but happily the band shows up two hours late. The dance was also significant because for the FIRST time at an Emory function, there was an open bar. Will wonders never cease?

May 1—WEMO is one year old. General Manager Rhoda Deuchschman receives a number of sympathy cards.

May 4—It’s Open Season on Trees again, as Spring Elections kick off in its usual banal spirit. Eighty-one candidates start the merry chase for fame, prominence and obscurity, by mauling every tree with a limb wider than 3 inches. Some people begin to wonder if Emory isn't approaching the point where they'll be more candidates than voters.

May 7—Supreme Court Justice Abe Fortas arrives at Emory to address the annual Law Day proceedings. Some alumni begin to wonder if there is any connection with Altizer, since the Court had kicked God out of school just before He died.

May 8—The old Wheel staff retires, after they almost retire the paper to shreds. A purple heart is given to Pitta Middlebrooks, and the incoming editors clean house by eliminating most of the old staff. However, the new Wheel . . . well, what can you do with it anyway?

May 12—in the midst of the election, D.V.S. chooses its new holy seven. This year the Lockjaw Honorary has only four people running for office, but regardless of the sacred blessing to his opponent, nonmember Jim Wynns is voted new College Council President. Reacting to the situation, one naive freshman wants to know if D.V.S. would now make Jim a Social Affiliate or something.

May 13—After six weeks of blood, sweat, and called meetings, Alpha Chi Omega walks off with First Prize in the Panhellenic Sing. Most of the girls spent the entire evening sucking lemons before they went on, but one sorority ate their hearts out . . . when it was their time to perform, their song leader hadn't shown up yet. Huzzah! Emily Balz is named Miss Emory for 1966-67.

May 14—Parent's Weekend wraps up with Senator Hu'min Tal-madge speaking at Honor's Day. Dean Robinson receives both the Honorary Senior Award and Yearbook Dedication, making some people wonder if a new tradition hadn't been started last year. Mike Kelly receives the Brittain Award, and Mrs. Freddie Ford, having returned to school from her family, cops the top academic honors.

May 16—The fourth Phoenix of the year come out. This time it takes only six hours to have all 3000 copies disappear. (Was anybody having a paper drive?)

May 19—Dean Zeller is named new head of Student Affairs. Active students, realizing the tightness of the existing situation, start booking appointments with him for next year.

May 20—The Resident Women's Association elects officers, and desperately hopes that the old House Council will be buried and never dug up again. Elsewhere on the female scene, the sorority girls rack up in the Sigma Chi Derby and ATO Sweepstakes.

May 26—Phi Beta Kappa keys go to 54 initiates. Alumni are thus reassured that not all of Emory is going to the dogs.

May 29—Three-hundred pounds of rotten tomatoes, fish entrails, flour, feathers, chocolate syrup . . . mix 'em together and you've got the first annual Phoenix Aggression Rally. Six-hundred people turn out to watch the festivities, and the story is reported in papers as far away as West Germany. Only one sour note: one alumnus read about the Rally in the New York Times, and wrote Dean Strickland about participating in such undignified events. She wrote back: "It was fun." Attagirl!!

June 4—The day arrives bright and sunny, but few people notice . . . final exams start.

June 13—It looks like an early Halloween, as the Quadrangle is filled with people in multi-colored robes for graduation. The temperature at 8:30 a.m. is 76°, but few people are deterred, much less the speakers. Degrees are awarded, and a special prize is given to one undergraduate who claims he had heard of all the honorary degree recipients before that day.

An that was the Emory Year 1965-1966. It was a good time for the school, for never before had so many significant and important events shaken the campus. Altizer, "Conversation," "Affirmation," the Activism Assembly . . . it was quite a year, and Emory made its mark.

There was only one trouble: all the noise made one poor old skeleton turn over quite a few times in his grave. But I'm not really complaining; I've waited a long time for a year like this. Now just give me a chance to recover. With enough peace and quiet, I may be ready to come out again next Dooley's Frolics.

Sincerely,
Sanford S. Dooley.

What is a university? There is not just one simple answer to this question, for a university, especially Emory, is a multitude of things—classrooms, cafeteria, library, tests, books, fraternities, dances, concerts, lectures. But more than these, a university is people—people with different backgrounds, interests, talents, feelings, and attitudes. It is this diversity which adds much to richness and uniqueness of the university. This diversity also makes the university a vibrant, exciting place, always changing, developing, and growing.

It is the responsibility of the annual to try to capture this multiversity of the university. The yearbook must portray both the tangible and intangible aspects of the varied life of the university. A single picture cannot capture this diversity, but, by picturing the people themselves in their many different roles and moods throughout university life, a more complete picture of what the university really is can be obtained.

This was the goal toward which the 1966 CAMPUS staff strived—to present throughout the pages of this book a glimpse of the multiversity of our university. Because of the very nature of the university itself, it is impossible to accomplish this completely, for the university is and should be ever changing. Although a perfect job is impossible, it is not impossible to do a good one. As Editor, I hope that this CAMPUS has come at least close to capturing and portraying in pictures and in words the past year at Emory—a time of multiversity within a university.
