A Note from the Editor--

This is the first magazine of a two part edition which the CAMPUS staff is organizing for 1971. The book will be completed in September, 1971, when Volume 2 is distributed.

Traditionally, The Campus has been an annual with several purposes. Among those are: to recognize and honor those persons belonging to various organizations; to provide an index of pictures of students (so you know whether or not to show for your blind date); to help you remember your days at old Emory; and to provide a creative outlet for those students desiring to participate on the yearbook staff.

Because of tremendous financial difficulties and because of insufficient co-operation from students in portrait-making, the 1971 CAMPUS has been forced to adopt a new format and different purpose. We have worked with the ideas that we want the books to be not so much meaningful now as they will be in the future.

So here is a pictoral diary of various aspects in the life of an Emory student in 1971. We have attempted to make it an annual reflecting the students' activities, emotions, attitudes and interests. Several organizations are included in this volume and many others will be in the slightly larger fall book. So, if your particular interest is not here, it probably will be later.

An education is a wonderful thing.
No college should be without one.
It is every citizen’s duty to support his government, but not necessarily in the style to which it has been accustomed.
No one can be perfectly free; no one can be perfectly moral till all are moral; no one can be perfectly happy till all are happy.

Effective immediately a charge of 10c will be made on checks cashed, except those for the exact amount of purchases. The amount of personal checks to be cashed must be limited to the amount of purchases, or $50.00 whichever is greater.
As the largest alienated element in our society, and because of their numbers, passion, and length of oppression, its largest revolutionary base, women might come to play a leadership part in social revolution, quite unknown before in history. The changes in fundamental values such a coalition of expropriated groups—blacks, youth, women, the poor—would seek are especially pertinent to realizing not only sexual revolution but a gathering impetus toward freedom from rank or prescriptive role, sexual or otherwise. For to actually change the quality of life is to transform personality, and this cannot be done without freeing humanity from the tyranny of sexual-social category and conformity to sexual stereotyped—as well as abolishing racial caste and economic class.

Soccer disproves the law of evolution: the fittest don't always survive.
During our college years most of us experience love and its real qualities. We discover that love can be creatively expressive and delightful or painful and discouraging. To one who happily loves, a rose’s thorn is soft, yet to the unhappy lover the rose itself is coarse.

Love can be the sound of soft murmurs and merry laughter or slammed doors and silent tears. Like a book that never ends, Love is continuous learning. Love is as mysterious as a full moon peeping over the edge of a forest yet simple like a bird’s song.
Love is crazy and so are lovers. Love is making sunshine from the rain. Love is confidences and dreams. Love is understanding; a quiet meditation for two. Love is exploring each other’s mind and guarding what you find. Love is physical, the tender touch of a kiss and the passionate response to a wild embrace.

What is love?
Two souls and one flesh.
Friendship?
Two bodies and one soul.
Joseph Roux

Love is the lover’s eyes and the spirit’s wine and the heart’s nourishment.

being starry eyed and distracted and a little crazy because you’re in love is the same as being starry eyed and distracted and a little crazy because you’re nuts.

In vast dark silence, emptiness.
the word is spoken. Honest love becomes flesh in all men.
What the world needs now is love, Sweet love.
No, not just for some, But for everyone.

Drug Policy—'Get Him Help'

By Dave Reeder
Wheel Staff Writer

Drug Abuse Prevention and Control Act will be helpful in that stricter controls will be set up for manufacturers of high addiction-potential drugs.

Advertisers and the media are guilty for the way in which certain television commercials, for example, project one basic image—that you can find the answer to nervous problems in a pill.

That was how Vice President for Student Services Tom Fernandez saw part of the problem facing the Federal government in preventing drug abuse, after he returned from the Workshop for College Deans and Campus Security Officials held last Tuesday—Thursday in Washington, D.C.

"Previously," stated Fernandez, "the only restrictions were related to morphine and other opium derivatives. Now drug companies will have to account for every grain of amphetamines, barbituates and other specific drugs which they produce. This will curtail the practice of shipping drugs out of the country just to have them smuggled in again.

"We've really got to do more to try and get to the causes that make an individual turn to drugs," he said. "We will try and provide counselling for anyone with a drug problem who comes to a dean for help. Our basic responsibility to the student is to get him help if he wants it."

"Our policy will be 'Don't turn him in—get him help.' But once the local authorities come in with a warrant to search someone's room, there's nothing we can do."
